All Opponents See Action

All of Florida State's four remaining football opponents will see action this weekend.

The Seminoles' next opponent, the Miami Hurricanes will be trying for their second win of the season against Indiana.

The Canes were picked by many at the beginning of the season as one of the top independents in the nation, but they have not lived up to their potential.

Last week the Hurricanes tied N. C. State 6-0.

Still unbeaten in five games, Mississippi Southern has also a tough assignment as they tackle Chattanooga team tonight. The Southerners are picked to win their sixth game.

The Tribe travels to Hattiesburg on Nov. 16 to play the Southerners.

Another of FSU's coming foes, Auburn, also carries a win streak into its game with Houston. The Tigers have won four games over teams such as Georgia Tech, Tennessee and Kentucky.

The always improving group of Spartans from Tampa meet an underdog Wofford team tomorrow. The Seminoles meet Tampa in their last game of the season on Nov. 30.

Tracksters Seek 4th Winning Year

By ALAN WHITMARSH
Flambeau Managing Editor

With its strength lying primarily in the running events, Florida State's track team will seek its fourth successful season under coach Mike Long this spring.

The Seminole tracksters have never met more than one dual meet in a season under Long since he became head coach in 1953, posting 5-1, 7-1 and 4-1 marks.

Though he lost seven valuable men from the '56 year's team, Long feels that this year's team "could be stronger than last year."

"We'll be very strong in all of the running events," he said. "We could be stronger than last year providing our veterans improve and our sophomores help us in the field events."

Included among a talented group of sophs is Jim Casteel, who set the quarter-mile record at :49.0 in 1954 before going into the service.

Casteel competed in the Florida AAU's last year when he was ineligible for varsity competition and this year is counted on heavily for the 440, 220 and as a member of the mile relay team.

Best bet among the sophomores may be Ted Kent, a talented youngster from Atlanta who has more fire events for the Tribe the 100, low hurdles shot put, javelin and pole vault.

In addition to Casteel, three other school record holders are on hand.

CONLEY RETURNS

Senior Mike Conley from Gainesville holds the school mark in each of his specialties, the mile and two-mile, and set both last season.

His 4:13.0 in the mile and 10:08.5 in the two-mile are both school standards.

Junior Doyle Ruff holds the school mark is the half mile with a 1:57.1 performance last year and junior Richard Elwood shares the school mark at 13-7 in the pole vault with now departed Warren Strickland.

In addition to Strickland, also gone from last year are high jumpers Lloyd Lassen and Tenny Brown, half-miler Ken Seyner, hurdler Charles Watson, javelin specialist Jimmy Harrell and the 1957 captain Joe Davis, who was high point man last season competing in various events.

The key men for this year's effort will probably be Casteel, Ruff, Conley, Elwood, Keen and senior dash man Jack Terwilliger.

Terwilliger has been a consistent high scorer in the 100 and 220 since he came here in addition to being a valuable anchor man on the mile relay unit.

Going down the line, Long expects to enter Terwilliger, Keen, Elwood and junior Bobby Bryson in the hundred

220 MEN

Entrants for the 220 will probably be Terwilliger, Casteel and sophomore Gary Butner, a transfer from Florida Southern. Casteel and Butner will also go in the 440, along with sophs Henry Wingham.

Ruff and two promising sophomores comprise the probable 880 entry. Sophs are Gregory Nye and Ben George.

In both the mile and two-mile the returning lettermen, for if two men, as they did last year. In addition to Conley, sosh Tom Kenney will enter the two-mile.

With Watson gone, the attention in the low and high hurdles will be directed to sophomores Keen, Wortman, Claude Grizzard and a lone junior, Tom Chivers is counted for the lows, while Grizzard and Chivers will tackle the highs.

Long admits he is not yet decided on a mile relay team, but the combination of Casteel, Terwilliger, Ruff and Nye is a definite possibility.

Experience is lacking in almost all of the field events except the pole valut where record-holder Elwood returns along with junior veteran Don Ayers.

Keen and sophs Herbert Sigmund and Galen Kilburn will also see pole vaulting action.

Junior Bob Bryson returns to head the corp of broad jumpers, while Ayres and senior Bob McDonald will also see considerable action there.

HIGH JUMP WEAK

Meet experience is almost nil in the high jump with Lassen and Brown gone. There are high hopes for sophomore Grisard here though, and Mr Denard and senior James Browning are also on hand.

Bill Musselman is back in the shot put, another of the five events in which Keen figures to run. Junior Bill Keefe may also help out here.

Senior Jerry Henderson and junior Mike Guerra are back to alleviate the loss of Harrell in the javelin, and again Keen will be of valuable assistance here, in Long's estimation.

Thus Keen is a talented boy, and he figures to help us considerably in the five events he's in," Long comments.

The potential 1956 schedule reads very similiy to last year's slate, including another dual meet with the University of Florida.

The Seminoles have dropped two consecutive dual battles to the Gators in the past two seasons now, after downing the Gainesville boys in the 1954 Florida AAU meet, 51 5 6—47 ½.

In 1955 the Gators bombed the Seminoles 97-41, and last year squeaked out a thrilling 87-64 victory here. This year's battle is slated for Gainesville.

The Seminole thinclads will make two other appearances in Gainesville during the year, for the Florida Relays and the Florida AAU, which annually points between various cities, usually Tallahassee, Gainesville or Miami.

Miami and Mississippi Southern are slated here for dual meets, and Long is working on the possibility of a meet with Georgia Tech or Alabama.

The Seminoles will defend their non-conference title in the annual Atlantic Coast Indoor Relays in Raleigh, usually sometime late in February.

In addition, they will tackle one other indoor meet, the Coliseum Relays in Montgomery, Ala., sponsored by the Alabama High School Athletic Association.

Long announced also that he has unofficial invitations to send some personnel to the annual Sugar Bowl meet, various running events held in connection with the Sugar Bowl football game.

Though he has not said who will go, he indicated that FSU would enter a mile relay team at probability, and one or two dash men.

Though no freshman scholarship has been set, there will definitely be a frosh meet in connection with the FSU-Florida meet.

Kennedy High On 3 JC Transfers

Each year Florida State seems to come up with a few new basketball players from scouts much is expected.

This year is no different, for head coach Pat Kennedy has found three highly recommended players who are waiting to get their records speak for themselves.

Jim Liteky, Bert Deckel, and Danny Boltz are the transfers whom Kennedy is hoping will bolster a varsity team which finished the 1957 season with a 9-12 record.

Liteky is a 20-year- old, 6-1 junior from Jacksonville University. As a sophomore last year he averaged 14.0 and was rated an outstanding defensive player and playmaker.

His offers gained him a berth on the all-circuit junior college first team which included players from Florida, Alabama, and Georgia.

A native of Jacksonville, the soft spoken southerner was an all-around athlete for Bishop Kenny High School, lettering in football, basketball, and track.

From Bishop Kenny, Liteky accepted a scholarship to Spring Hill College in Alabama, and a year later transferred to Jacksonville. He's called a "crowder jumping jack" by all who watch him on the court, and is expected to be a big help under the boards.

TWO FROM CHIPOLA

Deckel from Louisville, as does his ex- teammate Hoch Durham '57, Fraser High School he proved his athletic prowess by lettering in football, basketball, baseball, and golf.

The rangy junior made the all-city team in basketball playing third base and rated as honorable mention on Coach Kockey all-state team his senior year.

While a quarterback at Fraser High, Bert had to be content to watch a teammate, who went on to All-American fame at Notre Dame, call the shots. The teammate was Paul Hornung, winner of the Heisman Trophy two years ago.

As a sophomore at Chipola, Deckel made the same all-regional team Jim Liteky did, and in addition was named to the NJCAA all American team.

6-6 CENTER

Deckel's running mate from Chipola, Danny Boltz, is a product of Notre Dame High School in Quincy, Illinois where the 6-8, 235 pounder earned letters in football and basketball.

Notre Dame University offered him a full football scholarship, but like young giant turned it down a to play basketball.

At Chipola, Danny averaged 16.9 last year, and totaled 512 to place 7th in the nation's junior college scorers.

Kennedy is counting heavily on Boltz's ability to grab the rebounds and help FSU control the boards something that was missing last year.

Top-Ranked Foes Dot Cagers' Slate

By MIKEPLATTIS

Coach Bud Kennedy's Seminoles began practice two weeks ago in preparation for a schedule which reads like a who's who of the 1957 NIT and NCAA basketball competition.

"To these past weeks of practice we've tried to get the boys used to each other and accustomed to FSU patterns. We're looking forward to a fine season, though it may take the first five or six games to see what we have," said Kennedy.

In an effort to bring the best in basketball to Tallahassee, Florida State dropped from the relatively soft FIBC.

Tennessee Tech opens the slate on December 2nd, and three more teams of such caliber as Memphis State, finalists in the NIT; Oklahoma City U, quarter finalists in the NCAA, with an all-American center outmaker, Army, Loyola, L.S.U., Florida and Xavier.

Of the first seven ball games this season, the Seminoles will come out on the underdog in all but the Furman game on the basis of national ranking, according to Kennedy.

DURHAM BACK

Hugh Durham, 5-11 junior guard from Louisville, Kentucky, will be back to head a group of players that may be the most promising in years.

Durham averaged 19.8 in 26 games, and was the unanimous choice of Florida sportswriters for all-state honors last year.

Kennedy said of his ace player, "He has every shot in the book and is one of the most astute shots the Seminoles have ever had."

Another probable starter will be Larry Strom, a 6-6 center who will see a lot of action at the post position. Strom transferred from Jacksonville J.C. two years ago, and had FSU's top frid goal percentage last year.

Senior Tom Garcia is back for his third year of varsity competition. Kennedy says that Garcia is one of the best hustle players and a tough defensive man.

Jerry Williams one of three players who made the team as a sophomore last year, is back. The 5-10 guard from Tallahassee seems to be cut from the same mold as Garcia.

HUGH DURHAM

Westhafer is a 6-3 letterman whose strength lies under the boards, though according to Kennedy he has been looking good at the post.

Casteel was eligible since last February and is another strong rebounder who seems to have improved considerably.

Dillaham, a 6-2 guard, is a returning letterman from the 1953-54 season and the days of Oler, Wertzke, and Artimer.

TOP CONTENDER.

The 6-4 guard was high point man with the frosh, averaging 20 ppg, although hampered by injuries.

Charlie Rogers, 6-5 guard and Sussex transmute last year, is the only other freshman out for the varsity.

Probably the single reason why FSU could break out of basketball doldrums this year is the acquisition of three of the south's better junior college players.

Deckel is a rangy 6-4 product from Louisville, who averaged 14.0 in 32 games last year. Chipola to rank 11th in the nation among junior college scorers.

His running mate, Boltz, will be the answer to the rebounding problem that handicapped Seminoles in 1957.

The 6-6, 235 pound center from Quincy, Illinois, is 6-8 and weighs 250. He averts and 16.0 points per game last year.

The third transfer is Jim Liteky, a graduate of Jacksonville J.C. Liteky is a real rebounder at 6-1 and made all-regional junior college last year.

Coach Kennedy commented on his array of players by saying that. "We have fine ball shooting and better ball handlers than in past years. Basically we have a new team due to the three transfers."

Cicio, 2 Sophomores Key To Gym Team

The success of Florida State's gymnastics team this coming season will rest on the shoulders of three key gymnasts according to Coach Hartley Price.

Even though the Seminoles lost five top men from last year's team, which finished third in N.A.A. competition and fourth in th NAAU's "morale is very high" said Price.

"The spirit on the team I've ever seen here at FSU, and I'm sure it will continue to get better and better. We have an ambitious group here and Jack Bruce is doing a outstanding job in helping the men." Price continued.

Right now Dr. Price believes the Seminoles will finish 10th in NCAA competition, but if we get a good flying rings performer we could end up sixth or better" he said.

WEBB BACK

Other varsity men include Roger Webb, Bob Martin, Laird Anderson, Don Rosansky, Don Preisser, Colin Cameron, Bob Hicks, Joe Guaic and Don Powers.

"I'm hoping that Anderson will get high up in the rope climb at the nationals. He's right in the picture with the top ranked California climber," said Price.

Don Preisser has a chance to be in the trampoline according to the Tribe's mentor. Rosansky will also work trampoline besides tumbling.

Much improved over last year are veterans Roger Webb and Joe Guaic, who "shows the potential and is respected by every member of the team."

The team's efforts will be directed to the NCAA competition of next year because the Seminoles lose only Preisser and Anderson from this year's team.

"I can't see anyone displacing the Los Angeles Turners as NAAU champions, and I plan to take a select group which will probably include Rafael Lecuona, Jack Miles, Malmlin, Cicio and perhaps Anderson. Preisser and Fernando Lecuona" stated Price.

New faces among the gymnasts this year are freshmen Tom O'Conner, a flying rings performer from the U of Michigan and Chet Whitten, an all-around man from Maryland.

SCIENCE MADE SIMPLE: No. 1

Though this column is intended to be a source of innocent merriment for all ages and not to concern itself with weighty matters, I have given my consent to the makers of Marlboro, whether I might not, from time to time, use this space for a short lesson in science. "Makers," I said to them, "might I not, from time to time, use this spare for a short lesson in science?"

They agreed with many a kindly smile, the makers of Marlboro, for they are the most agreeable of men. Their benevolence is due in no small measure to the cigarettes they smoke, for Marlboro is a cigarette to soothe the savage of breasts. I refer not only to the flavor which, as everyone knows, is a delight to the palate, but also to the Marlboro container. Here is beautiful, soft-pack ingenuity, device to fray the fingernails and rasp the nerves; here, instead, is a flip-top box that opens like a charm, and inside you find a handy red tape to lift out the cigarettes with ease and dispatch. Add to all this the best filter ever made, and you can see that you get a lot to like.

Let us begin our series of science lessons with chemistry. It is fitting that chemistry should be the first, for it is the oldest of sciences, having been discovered by Benjamin Franklin in 468 B.C. when an apple fell on his head. While he was shooting the breeze with Pythagoras one day out-side the Acropolis. (The words "shooting the breeze" are the Acropolis and not inside was that Pythagoras had been thrown out for drawing right triangles all over the walls.)

They had several meetings outside the Acropolis, but finally Franklin said, "Look, Pythagoras, this is nothing against you, see, but I'm no youngster anymore and if I keep laying around on this wet grass with you, I'm liable to get the breakbone fever. I'm going inside." Pythagoras, friendliest now, nipped around Athens for a while, then drifted off to Monaco where he married a girl named Harriet Sigafoos and went into the chuck-a-luck business. He would eventually be forgotten today had not Shakespeare written "You know Mr. Al."

But I digress. We were beginning a discussion of chemistry, and the best way to begin is with fundamentals. Chemicals are divided into elements. There are four: air, earth, fire, and water. Any number of delightful combinations can be made from these elements, such as firewater, diarrow, and chef's salad.

Chemicals can be further divided into the classes of explosive and non-explosive. A wise chemist always touches a match to his chemicals before he begins an experiment.

A variety of vessels of different sizes and shapes are used in a chemistry lab. There are tubes, vials, beakers, flasks, pipettes, and retorts. A retort is also a snappy comeback, such as "Oh, yeah?" and "You're your Uncle Dudley."

I have now told you the most important aspects of chemistry, but there are many more—far too many to cover in the space remaining here. However, I am sure there is a line chemistry lab on your very own campus. Why don't you go up some afternoon and poke around? Make a fun day out of it. Bring ukeleles. Wear humorous hats. Toast frankfurters on the Bunsen burners. Be gay. Be merry. Be loose... For chemistry is your friend!

KEY GYMNAST. Larry Malmlin, a former Swedish Olympic team member, moves up to the varsity this year

Baseballers To Field Top Squad In 1958

With a team composed of a host of returning letter-men and a handful of talanted newcomers, Florida State's varsity baseball coach Danny Litwhiler feels he will field one of his best squads in 1958.

Although the Seminoles lost [illegible] key men through graduation, Litwhiler said he should be able to fill their shoes and have as good a team.

The nucleus of the staff in '58 will be formed by Jack Bristol, Jim Bishop, and Frank Shuster; Jim Sierra and Fred Ramsey, all lettermen.

The four hurlers are all seniors and have had plenty of game experience. Bristol was the leading hurler last year with a 6-1 record and an earned run average of 2.19.

The lefty from Sharon, Conn., also placed on the all-FIBC squad and the all-star District III team in season.

Garcia, the little righty from Key Myra, has not lost a regular season game in the last two years. Last season Garcia posted a 7-1 record and won a game at the District III tournament.

Shuster, probably the best hitting pitcher on the team, will be out for his third season. Litwhiler said "this may be a good year for Frash, he was hot at the end of last season and had a good record for the team he pitched on last summer."

Shuster, a stocky senior from Tampa, Fla., had a 3-1 record last year and his 455.

Another pitcher who will probably see plenty of action is Kreiger. The lanky senior from West Palm Beach, started and won the last game of the season last year after he had arm trouble.

Of the men who will be some of the sparkling gain some experience are Paul Bennett, Chuck Collar and Jerry Hall, sophomores who led the team in last season.

As the hitting end of the team, it will probably be Shortstop Dick Howser who made all-American last season is quite an honor for him according to Litwhiler.

Also doing about it is his all-District III team.

However, often tagged the "Silent Stan" outs, 5-8 in weighs 148, Besides being a fine American, he was also picked to the all-FIBC and all-District III team.

FIRST TEAM ALL-AMERICAN. Waiting in the on-deck circle is Florida State's first, first team all-American, shortstop Dick Howser of West Palm Beach. Howser has led the Tribe in batting during the last two years.

For the past two years he has won the batting crown at FSU but last season he did it with a .365 mark. Howser holds the school record for the highest batting average, .422 which he hit in 1956.

He also holds the school record for the most hits in a season, 32, and the most RBI's in a season, 29.

McCarron, probably the fastest man on the team, led the team in his last season and made the all-district III team. Besides playing the outfield, he can also play the infield.

HUNT AT SECOND

Pfti Hunt, another senior veteran, will be at second base this season. Last year, as the third baseman, he hit .307 and led the team in doubles last season.

He also made the all-FIBC squad.

The first base position will be manned by either Charlie Rogers or Gerry Philp. Rogers, who Litwhiler claims to be a "natural" hit .401 for the freshman last season.

Philp, who played the initial sack at the end of last season and hit .334, may be used in the outfield.

Another man who may see action at first is Charlie Pinkerman. Litwhiler says he is very fast and may make a better outfielder.

According to Litwhiler, the third base spot is wide open and several men are fighting for that too. Dale Koch, a junior who filled-in last season, is the leading contender.

Jerome Langford, who played a lot of good freshman ball last season, is also fighting it out for the hot corner job. Hal Ray Barsell may also see action at third during the '58 season.

Johnny Sheppard, a junior from Tallahassee, will probably be first in line for the catcher's job this season. Sheppard hit .250 last year but proved invaluable on defense.

The catcher's position made the all-District III team. Pushing Sheppard for the catcher's spot will be Bill Westindick and Jerry Couch.

Another outfielder who may get a chance to play a lot this season is Riley Sievers. Sievers hit .230 last year and is a good smart baseballer.

Probably the most versatile man on the team is Mike Copps, a six foot junior from Jacksonville. Copps can catch, play the infield or outfield.

In the regional District III playoffs he played the outfield in place of Lee Cone who was ineligible because he was a senior. At that position Copps helped the Tribe immensely according to Litwhiler.

He was picked on the all-District III team.

Some sophomores who will be battling for a starting berth are Jerry Dennison and Gene McCormick. Both were standout infielders for the frosh team last season.

Buddy Cseh and Neil Martin will also be trying for starting posts in the outfield.

In evaluating the team as a whole, Litwhiler feels his only weakness is in the pitching staff. This weak point comes as a result of having only ten lettered pitchers and only one of them being a starter.

"It would help us quite a bit to have another southpaw to start besides Bristol, but if Axon comes through we may not have it so much," commented Litwhiler.

Probably one of the team's strongest points is that Litwhiler can start an all left-handed or all right-handed outfield. In fact, he has enough men to start an all left-handed or an all right-handed lineup.

As of this time the Seminoles have tentatively scheduled 18 games but they are planning on two more plus the Florida State Invitational Tournament.

This schedule is quite a decrease from previous years. Last season the Tribe played 24, in '56 they played 26 and in '55 they played 25.

When asked about the reason for this decrease in schedule, Litwhiler said, "Because of an increase in expenses and a cut in the budget, it is impossible for us to schedule any more games."

In the '58 schedule are such teams as Florida, Auburn, Rollins, and Miami. Probable teams that will be here for the Florida State Invitational Tournament are Notre Dame, Wisconsin and West Virginia.

FSU Linksters Feature New Coach, Players

Odenal replaced Dr. Don Valley who had coached the linksters since 1913. Over the past two seasons, the Tribe golfers won 17 of 18 dual matches.

Last year they ended with 8 record of 9 wins as against one loss, placed fifth in the NCAA held at Colorado Springs, won the Florida Intercollegiate title and finished seventh in the Southern Intercollegiates.

LONE RETURNEE

The lone returnee of Florida State's veteran foursome is junior Bob Shave, who as a sophomore last year was good enough to finish third with a 73.2 score.

Gone are the Seminoles' two-punch of Bunk Berry and Captain Ed Jenkins, along with the last member of the starters, Harry Schumsker, holder of the National Lethanders Golf Title for two consecutive years.

But coach Odenal has high hopes for a good season.

The team will rely on seniors Dink Wier, Dave Morris and Bill Shelton. Morris and Shelton saw action in a few of the Tribe's matches last season.

"The boys have been practicing since the beginning of the month and I feel that by February when the season starts their game will be in fine shape," said Odenal.

There has been an definite schedule announced as yet but it is expected that the Seminoles will play Wisconsin, Auburn, Florida, Georgia, Tech, Alabama, Georgia, Miami, Rollins and Bradley.

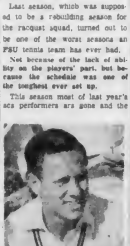
Hester Returns

Tribe Tennis Team Has Good Potential



BY JOAN GORSKI

The old saying, "you ain't seen nothing yet" may well fit the situation that the Florida State tennis team will find themselves in, in 1958.

Last season, which was supposed to be a rebuilding season for the racquet squad, turned out to be one of the worst seasons an FSU tennis team has ever had.

Not because of the lack of ability on the players' part, but because the schedule was one of the toughest ever set up.

This season most of last year's ace performers are gone and the schedule is just as rough.

To make things worse the tennis squad isn't sure they have a regular coach yet. Last year's coach, Keith Pitchford, has accepted a new position as intramural director.

Pitchford, however, will continue as tennis coach along with his other duties until another coach is signed.

HESTER NO. 1

But FSU tennis fans have no reason to panic yet because the potential of this year's team is good, according to Pitchford. Probably the top-seeded player will be Lex Hester, a junior from Neptune Beach who had an 8-4 record last year.

The number two spot on the team is being fought over by Howard Levy, Bryan, a junior from Sumter, S. C. had a 9-7 mark last year.

Crow, another junior, showed promise last season and is expected to bloom into a top player this year.

All eyes will be on Levy, a sophomore from Miami Beach. Last season he was the number one man on the freshman squad and defeated the top freshman singles player at Florida last year.

Jim Maddock, a letterman last year and Jerry Millard, also up from the frosh squad, are slated to be among the best players.

WON 5 IN '57

Last year the netters finished with an overall record of 5-11. They beat Mercer twice and knocked off Florida Southern, Murray State and Emory once.

They were beaten by such powers as Miami, who has led only one match in five years, Rollins, Michigan State, Duke, Florida, Georgia Tech and Indiana.

Key men gone from last season are Fred Barrett and Sonny Sellers. Barrett did not return to school and Sellers graduated.

Coach Pitchford extended an invitation to all men interested to try out for the team. Official practice starts February 17, but most of the varsity men are working out now in order to set a jump on the season.

Swimmers Face Toughest Season

By TOM HALE

"The Florida State swimming team will face its toughest season this year as we face some of the finest teams in the nation."

Stults than has tentative meets lined up with Iowa State and Illinois shortly before the Christmas Holidays. Definite home meets have been set with Florida, Georgia, Georgia Tech, Rice, SMU and Texas A&M.

The one away meet for the tankers will be in Lexington, Ky as they face the University of Kentucky.

The three composed a 200 meter medley relay team that represented FSU in the NCAA championships last year at Chapel Hill, N. C.

Ray, a junior freestyler set pool records all over the country last year in his specialty, the 50 yard sprint.

Abbott is a backstroker and a

Jacobs a breaststroker who will be gunning for national recognition this year as a new rule authorizes a style that Jacobs has worked to perfection.

OTHER VETS

Other returning veterans are Paul Hammond, and Glen Thatcher in the freestyle sprints, Graham Tsetkis in the distant freestyle. Jim Wentworth and Jerry Glaney in the backstroke and breaststroker Howard Filmore.

Up from the freshman team to fill the gaps left by last year's seniors and to give the tankers depth that Stults said "I need so much", are Bob Weber, a diver who will be the only performer for the Seminoles in that event.

Paul Sudbrager, backstroker from Dayton, Ohio, who was a high school all-American and now is regarded as "one of the finest backstrokers in the South" by Stults.

Working out with the freshman team are Curtis Genders, Dade City high school 1-meter champion in the diving event and Bucky Hiles, a distance freestyler from Atlanta, Ga.

Coach Stults stated that he needs more men to try out for the frosh team so he could arrange some meets.

No experience is needed, just a desire to be a swimmer.

From These Five Will Come 1957 Homecoming Queen

The traditonal white full length Seminole war bonnet will once again be a symbol of royalty as it is placed on the head of the 1957-58 Homecoming Queen tonight at the Pow-wow.

Other titles will be pushed into the background tonight as a new queen is named and presented with one of the highest student honors a coed can receive.

The Homecoming Queen's duties will not end with this weekend's festivities, for she will act as a representative of Florida State University during the entire year.

Next year she will ride in the place of honor in the Queen's float in the Homecoming Parade and crown her successor, and on New Year's day she will appear in the Gator Bowl.

Tonight at the Pow-wow after a ceremonial dance in her honor by the Flying Seminoles and a musical salute by the Marching Chiefs, the Queen's identity will be revealed.

The 1957 Homecoming Queen has a great deal to look forward to according to the former holder of that title. "I think I was really lucky to be voted Queen, and I wish every girl could have a chance for this honor," Miss Bowden said.

She described her reign as FSU's ninth annual Homecoming Queen as being "pretty exciting. The week at the Gator Bowl is the best of all," she elated.

The senior Kappa Alpha Thetа from Ft. Lauderdale, has no specifіc advice to her successor; she just hopes the new Queen's reign will prove as thrilling as her own.

Peanuts', Gobblers Are Themes Of Decor

By ELINOR THOMPSON

House decorations for Homecoming have been the order of the week for sororities and fraternities. They have been busily painting, hammering and painting for the last few days trying to meet the week-end deadline. Here is a preview of what can be seen around campus at the expensive Greek houses:

The Alpha Chi Omegas are using "Peanuts" as their theme. The eight-feet-tall Charlie Brown who is holding a football represents FSU. Behind him is a football scoreboard and a pile of FSU players who are mustered "Nuts!" Snoopy is jumping up and down while Lucy appropriately exclaims, "Good grief, Charlie Brown!!"

"SKUNK VPI"

"Around the World in Eighty Days" is the theme of the Alpha Omicron Pi decoration. They are featuring a revolving globe with scenes depicting famous spots. The main attraction is FSU Homecoming-1877.

The Alpha Xi Deltas are using "Peanuts" as a theme also. Charlie Brown is thinking of a fancy but Snoopy has already eaten up the Gobbler. As a reposal by the bones and feathers around him, Snoopy's tongue is going back and forth, and above is the word, "Blah!"

ALL SOAPED UP

Chi Omega announced that they aren't exactly having a scene this year. Instead they are having three big soap boxes.

Tide, Dixi, and Lux. An accompanying slogan says, "Lux with us, the Tide has turned, and FSU Dixi it again." A big recoup will claim "Total Victory."

The Tri-Delta are using an Arabic theme. A large Chinaman dressed in robes and sporting a mustache will be holding a scroll. On it will be the words, "If an fallee victum to Asiatic flu, for sure fallee victum to FSU."

An old-fashioned train will be the scene on the Delta Gamma's lawn. The train will be running down turkeys and they idea is that "Victory is in locomotive."

THIS WAS YOUR LIFE

A caricature of Ralph Edwards and one of Coach Nugent will have it spot in front of the Delta Zeta house. Nugent is cutting off a turkey's head. A book held by Ralph Edwards reveals "Gobblers, this was your life!" Sammy Seminole will be plucking feathers out of a turkey at the Gamma Phi Beta house.

"Around VPI in Eighty Plays" is the Kappa Alpha Theta's theme. They are having a big balloon filled with helium and massacred football players hanging out.

The Kappa Deltas are having a sick turkey on a big bed. "If the flu doesn't get you the Seminoles will" explains their theory.

WHAT—ME WORRY

An inflated cover of "Mad" magazine will decorate the Phi Mu lawn. Remember Alfred E. Newman, who says, What, me Worry?" The Phi Mus have chanted the word "Newman" to

DELTS DECORATE—What it is is still a mystery, but the finished product will be entered in the parade today

"Nugent." Other details are exact replicas of the figures on the cover.

"Otto, the Tally Man" will be exterminating gobblers over by the Pi Beta Phi house.

The Sigma Kappas are presenting a take-off on Mons Lisa. A large picture of her will be telling some live turkeys, "You're a Million Laugh, Gobblers."

"Duck 'em" is the title of the Zeta Tau Alpha's display. A huge duck is leaning over a wooden tub ducking a scrawny little gobbler into the water.

The title "Beat 'em up, Seminoles" will accompany the Lambda Chi Alpha's oversized mannequin. Rags morning after the bowl will have "gobbler" written on them.

ROCKET TO OBLIVION

"Head for Destruction" is the title of the Alpha Tau Omega's rocket ship. A Seminole is lighting the fuse on the rocket which is sending a turkey to his destruction.

A turkey with an arrow through it will be the problem on the Delta Tau Delta's grandfather clock. The score of the game is shown on the face of the clock, and the title is "FSU scores like clockwork."

"Smash the Invaders" is the theme of the Kappa Alpha's house decoration. They are featuring a world with a satellite moving around it. An Indian on top of the world is smashing the satellite (VPI).

SHOOT THE TURKEY

The Kappa Sigs are having a shooting gallery with turkeys as targets. Seminoles are getting their target practice.

The Phi Delts explain that they are having a Calypso theme. "Clip-em-so they hurt" is its motto. A Calypso band "Seminoles" are blowing some gobblers with their instruments.

An empty chicken coop will be on display at the Phi Kappa Tau house. They call it the "Phi Kappa Tau Bird Pen" and explain that the "Asiatic gobblers flu the coop."

A launching platform, radar screen and a radar control station will all be part of the apparatus at the Pi Kappa Alpha house. A guided missile will be preparing to take off with "Target-VPI."

TV'S THE THING

A man from Mars will be awaiting himself at home at the Pi Kappa Phi house. He will be watching the FSU game on television, and the Pi Kappa Phi's explain that "Everybody—but everybody watches the Seminoles."

The Sigma Chis are using a background of pines to hide their recently condemned house. In front will be a big Indian chopping off a turkey's head. Their theme?, "The Gobblers are condemned!"

"Seminole Express" is the title of the Sigma Phi Epsilon's decoration. They are having a rocket on a launching platform with a gobbler on the top. A Seminole is working the controls.

The Theta Chis are picturing a turkey driving a train toward a fence. A Seminole is waving behind the fence, and that is the "End of the Line" for the Gobbler.

"VPI and the Gobblers" is the theme of the Tau Epsilon Phi's decoration. An Indian with a mechanical arm is chopping off mechanical arm is chopping a turkey's head off on a block. Behind is a menu announcing "Today's Special."

Wesley Foundation

Methodist Group One Of Oldest

BY ANNETTE MCINTOSH

One of the older organized religious groups here at FSU is the Wesley Foundation at 705 W. Jefferson. The New York office of the Women's Society of Christian Service (WSCS) of the Methodist Church sponsored its first director, Miss Alpharetta Leper.

The deaconess, who served 12 years when our school was still FSCW, organized the Wesley Foundation in a small wooden building and directed construction of the present structure in 1940. She was succeeded by Miss Betty Barnes who graduated in June of 1952 and was to serve as temporary director but consented to remain for a full year.

From June 1953 to January 1954 no director could be secured; instead a hostess chaperoned the house while students conducted their own services. The Florida WSCS grew tired of the New York office's refusal to meet the evident need and asked Bishop John Branscomb to staff the position here.

He secured Rev. Austin E. Hellads, who was then serving as assistant pastor of the First Methodist Church, Orlando. In January of 1954 Austin arrived to become for one year assistant pastor of Trinity Methodist Church, Tallahassee, where Dr. Branscomb is director. Then in 1955 he became a full-time minister at the Foundation, as he is today.

Expansion at the Wesley Foundation has been in two areas—education, which consists of running 8 Sunday school classes a year in a series, and the mercy and church service, which was begun in 1948. FSU's Wesley Foundation pioneered the latter and is still in a unique, minority class in presenting such a function. Holding a regular church service was designed to supplement what Tallahassee's uptown churches offer at that time, and what amazing results it has produced!

Approximately 350-400 people attend the 11 a.m. service, necessitating the recent addition of an 8:30 a.m. service, and still the situation remains critical. In fact, the overflow is such that expansion must eventually occur, as the Florida Conference is aware, probably in the next five years.

Meanwhile the Foundation continues to build its complex program with the leadership of Pat Wolfe, president; Barbara Ensey, vice-president; Nancy Worrall, attendance secretary; Lois Chaloner, worth, secretary; Karl Oakley, treasurer; Jane Lewis, secretary; and a host of committee chairmen.

Besides the morning services already mentioned, there also Lons are offered on Sunday evenings: fellowship and supper 5:30-6:15; Forum Hour, where students, legislators, community members or students lead discussions at 6; and Vespers, a student-led chapel service, at 7:15.

During the week Mixing, 15-minute inspirational services, are held at 7:30 p.m. every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday. Fireside Chats, on Wednesday night, is normally a period devoted to discussing various ideas and questions, but for the next few weeks it will consist of evaluations of the 3 books to be used at the Lawrence Conference. To explain it, from December 27-January 1 twenty or more Wesleyites will join with over 3000 World-wide students at the University of Kansas for the fourth meeting of the National Methodist Student Conference, which convenes every 4 years. The theme is "Our Lord, Our Church, Our Life." Such men as George Buttrick, college-professor from Harvard; Bishop Fred P. Corson, of the Philadelphia area; and Norman Goodall, editor of the "Saturday Review," will speak.

Further activities are carried on by deputation teams, each composed of 3 students, which visit outlying churches such as Lake City, Chattahoochee, and the Fred Eyral Correctional Institution, for the whole weekend, working with the young people of that area, making suggestions, and being in charge of Sunday school and morning worship.

A drama group, Wesley Players, gives 3-4 productions, primarily religious, during the year. Plans are to include a program year of interest for graduate and married students and faculty.

This variety shows an active and forward-looking Methodist group on our campus. The Wesley Foundation heartily invites the presence and participation of all who want to visit or become a part of its program.

Glamour Tricks For Coeds Told

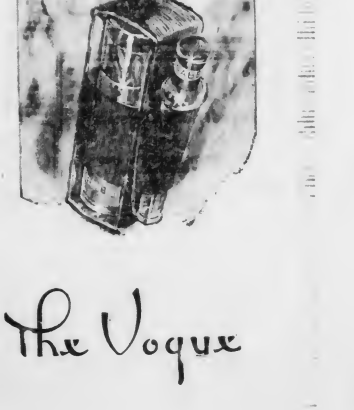
BY MARGARET McLEAN

Here are some unrelated bits of general information that you may or may not know about. There will more than likely be a few that should be useful in the everyday manner of things.

Next time things are in a rush, but your crowning glory can't wait, try a quick pan-up with alcohol or a light cologne as the substitute for water. It only takes a few minutes to dry and the results are amazing. Avoid using a heavy cologne—you'll reek with it for days.

To seal nail enamel so that it is less apt to peel away from the nail, either run the end of a finger along the shaped edge, leaving a tapered border along the top, or continue the coat of polish over the edge of the nail, sealing the edge. Never try to repair a chipped nail, but remove instead the old layer and start anew. Avoid deep burgundy shades for everyday wear and never wear that horrible dead white pearl enamel. The Frosted nail enamels are the most recent flair and they wear longer. Really, long claws are dreadful, don't be caught with yours showing. Actually a terribly long nail is much quicker to bite the dust. Just consider all that "love's labor lost."

Make-up base goes on much more evenly if you pour a small amount in the palm of your hand, spread it evenly over the palms by rubbing them together, and then blend it over the surface of the face in long strokes. Any streaks that may remain can be best covered with a sponge powder puff. Press face powder onto this moist surface and rub off the excess with cotton or a sponge powder puff. Avoid shades that already are or soon will turn a beige. Also remember not to leave a hard line of make-up along the jaw and chin area. Continue the base and powder down to the neck, blending away any streaks or lines.



Do not draw on eyebrows, merely darken whatever nature came through with and subtly so that. Drawn eyebrows look cheap and hard. It is permissable, however, to fill in noticeable gaps or uneven spaces with short, feathery strokes of an eyebrow pencil. Be careful to apply pencil with a gentle hand or here aga in—the hard look. Use a shade of mascara closely allied to the shade of your hair. A sharp contrast between the color of hair and brows look most painted, dollike and gross.

A lipstick brush takes a knowing hand, but once mastered you can never go back to the old way. A lipstick brush is intended for filling in the natural lipline and not for faking a big, fat mouth. Thin liplines are no less gorgeous than full ones, so why bother? A sense of design is what makes thing a with which she was born and stops pretending to be that that she isn't. And while we're on the subject, don't forget to blot away the oily or waxy surface of lipstick. Be dewy not greasy.

Facial blemishes and circles under the eyes can be greatly minimized with a make-up stick that comes like a lipstick but in skin tones; light, medium and dark. Since the substance is heavy and oily, hypersensitive skins beware. Used repeatedly on large areas of the face, the make-up may cause serious breakout. It works best on normal or dry skins. Incidently, always be sure to inquire about the type of skin for which any kind of make-up is intended.

of checks and balances whereby both the Presidency through the veto power and the Courts through judicial review can take important constitutional powers in determining what laws shall govern us. In its broadest sense this is legislation," Dr. Irish argued.

Dr. James W. Prothro, PSU professor of political science, responded with strong defense of his colleague and his profession, with a letter Oct. 17 condemning Editor Johnson's theory as a "gross oversimplification based upon an arithmetic restricted definition of the issues." Perhaps the courts should legislate, but it is clear they do not.

"You are correct in saying we can't stop them," is the point the political scientists in such articles on the realities of the American system. The Lord preserve us indeed; the journal is clearly won't." Dr. Prothro concluded.

Until the appearance of more letters last Monday, it was a respectable dispute between persons well-versed in the political ways of the American public, who happen to have strongly conflicting viewpoints.

But Monday brought to the editorial page a rather crude letter from Sammy Barra, executive secretary of the Florida Young Citizens Council, and one from a gentleman who identified himself as "the Cracker Boy."

Barra said, "We insist that Congress, not the Supreme Court make our laws, and that the people and Congress, not the Supreme Court, amend our Constitution."

We view the Supreme Court's Brown case 1954 as no more the law of the land than did Lincoln and the Abolitionists regarded the Dred Scott decision of 100 years ago."

Barra asserts that PSU political scientists are 100% wrong" and that the Democrat has conducted itself with "great calm . . . rather, so far as many of us are concerned, too much calm."

"Cracker Boy" John W. Tredaway, referring to Irish and Prothro, paraphrased Macbeth: "Prothro, the poor dog's protest overmuch!" and saveth nothing.

What this country needs right now is more editors with guts and fewer politicians who back out! And even fewer political scientists," he says.

We're on the side he and Mr. Barra are on the right track. Maybe we need politicians, editors and political scientists with not only guts, but a lot of level headedness and conscience.

Mr. Barra doesn't seem to realize that the Supreme Court members were appointed to that office through due process of law.

And, we feel safe in asserting, as long as that process is followed, and as long as the Constitution, system of checks and balances is in effect, we'll have security. Constitutional legislation, regardless of what agency does the legislating.

But, as Editor Johnson puts it in his editor's note following Cracker Boy's letter "You can't please everyone all the time!

Dorm Decor

Independents Enter Contest

BY NANCY GENE BROWN

Competition will be stiff when the Judges view the Homecoming decorations splashed over the lawns of residence halls.

Florida Hall is featuring a big Seminole holding a hatchet, while a small Seminole has a VPI jobber in chopping position over a stump. Two more dejected gobblers look on. The caption, of course, is "Stumped."

A rocket ship loaded with VPI Gobblers will blast off from Broward Hall with "Destination Moon." A Seminole will be lighting the fuse. The caption: "Let's Have A Turkey Shoot."

A contemporary "slim Jim" greeting card will decorate Gilchrist Hall. A smiling mouth on one side of the card reads, "Tech men, smile!" while the other side tells them, "You could have had Asiatic flu, but you're lucky—you're beaten by FSU!"

TIME TO RETIRE

Bryan Hall is capitalizing on the well-known litre advertisement. A little boy with a tire and candle announces, "Time to retire VPI."

Dinner will be served at Jennie Murphree Hall. Eleven pieces of silverware, representing the FSU team, will be ready to dig into a turkey dinner. Salt and pepper shakers and cream and sugar bowls will provide a background for their theme, "Seminoles Feast on Gobbler Stuffing."

CLOBBER THE GOBBLERS

Sammy Seminole who says "Clobber the Gobblers" at Landis Hall, will be sitting before a split with a turkey spinning over an open fire. A little Seminole will be burning the VPI chaplain and co-captain to the scene in a chain-gang line.

A tremendous octopus will repose on the Reynolds lawn. His eight legs will hold a bloodstained sword and gold tomahawk; a dead VPI man, and a sign reading "We're armed for VPI."

In keeping with the "go modern" theme of Homecoming, Magnolia has an ultramodernistic Seminole shooting a turkey on a revolving disk, under the power of a Volkswagen engine. As the Seminole appears from behind his teepee, he blasts the Gobbler, then returns to his teepee, and the turkey is replaced by a tombstone. "It's the greatest engineering masterpiece since the Eiffel Tower," Magnolia women declared.

COLD TURKEY

The Seminoles will go modern at West Hall with a 20-foot striped teepee—with a TV aerial. Inside the teepee there's a Nugentaire refrigerator, with a door that opens. A drawer comes out of the refrigerator; lights go on and a sign says, "Cold Turkey Left Over." Another sign reads, "After-game snack — alumni welcome."

Tallulah

A teepee will cover the entrance to Senior Hall where a pregnant Seminole will be having a "Pre-Thanksgiving Special—VPI Gobblers" Turkeys ready for sale will be strung all over the place.

Adding to the Homecoming festival air, Tallulah Bankhead will reside at 513 West Jefferson this weekend. The 8-foot-tall star, all black and white with blue eye shadow, is a "dark horse" entry in the decorations competition, sponsored by Dick Puckett and Eddie Franklin, last year's "Flying Seminoles."

feature on Morrison's." Amelia tenderly pats Fancy Gene Brown on the head, mewing "Good assistant news editor. I'll see that Harvey gets some extra vice money this week." Harvey is the assistant news editor's ward, and also the person who wrote a-r-x on the ceiling.

With all the news gathered, the city room becomes a hive of humming activity. Just in the nick of time too, for at that moment a group of cub reporters from the reporting class enter and, as they usually do, marvel at the hive of humming activity in the city room with a-r-x on the ceiling.

The leader of the cub reporters records: "One gentleman gives way to another generation, but the Sun Also Rises!"

This was a March VII production, the editor's note which will doubtlessly follow this column should be ignored.

(Editor's Note—Fancy Gene Brown's words' name is not Harvey, but Herman.)

Pikes, Pi Phis Try To Defend Awards

Pi Kappa Alpha and Pi Beta Phi will be out to continue their winning ways in taking first place in the Homecoming house decoration contests.

The Pikes have won the prize in the two previous years consecutive years. Last year they won with the theme "Dixes on the Rocks," when Florida Field hosted the Wake Forest Deacons to the Homecoming tilt.

The Pi Phis won the sorority trophy, decorating their house with a two story fruit fir out of the pages of science fiction with the caption "Fruit Fly Project: Wake Forest Is on the Pi Phis' third victory in this category in the past five years.

LXA, KS RUNNERS-UP

Runners-up in the fraternity division last year were Lambda Chi Alpha and Kappa Sigma. Runners before the Pi KA domination were Phi Kappa Tau and Kappa Sigma.

Alpha Gamma Delta and Phi Mu were last year's runners-up in the sorority groupings. In 1955 the Zeta Tau Alphas took first place.

Florida Hall, Broward, and Landis placed in that order in the women's dorms category, while Magnolia Hall won the men's dormitories championship last year. Previous women's dorm winners have been Landis and South Cawthon, while all of the men's dorms have won at least one decoration first place.

ZETAS WIN MOST

The Zetas, who hold more Homecoming first places than any other group, won the most beautiful float award in last year's contest. Their float was entitled, "To the Victors Go the Spoils," and the spoils consisted of several Zeta beauties clad in Roman plate armor. Phi Delta Theta took the second place award.

Previous winners have been Delta Gamma, Sigma Chi, and Alpha Xi Delta.

While there were no skits in the Pow-wow last year, 1955 Homecoming Skit prizes were awarded to the Lambda Chis and the ZTA's. Winners in earlier years have been the Delta Tau Deltas, the Tri-Delts, and the Alpha Xis.

Students Renew Old Friendships

By GEORGIANA FRY

The periodic meetings of the club are primarily for an informal get-together, where the 168 Foreign students on campus can voice their opinions and feelings freely — "more freely than in an American group," the same student continued.

These "informal get-togethers" are nothing new. When the club was known as the International Relations Club, the "Italo-Ethiopian Combat" was reviewed by club members in October, 1935.

DISCUSSED HITLER

In November of the same year, Germany and Hitler were discussed. More recent issues of Pakistan have been the Korean War and the Suez Canal crisis.

The foreign students, this year from 28 countries including Japan, India, Egypt, and Denmark, enjoy sharing cultures and backgrounds with each other. However, they would like to better acquaint themselves with Americans.

"The International Students Club is not only for students from abroad, but also includes American," said Miss Joan Guthridge, foreign student advisor.

"Most Americans think the foreign students only have something to give us, but we also have something to give them," she continued.

BAPTISTA FIRST ADVISER

The present International Club was organized after the university became coed. Baptista served as the first foreign student advisor.

The organizing of the club was a result of a need for foreign students to belong to a social, democratic organization.

Three members of the club, Miss Guthridge, will leave Friday, to attend a two - day eastern district meeting of the National Club at Tuscaloosa, Alabama.

The club is very interested in campus activities and will have a float in the homecoming parade this afternoon. Future plans include a Christmas party and spring beach party.

'Completely Overwhelmed'

Homecoming Was 'Wonderful' Says FSU's New Queen

Homecoming was "wonderful in every way" for Florida State University's new queen, Lynn LaGrange.

Miss LaGrange, a sophomore from Franklin, Indiana, was crowned with the traditional Indian headdress Friday night in Pow-Wow ceremonies by retiring queen Layte Bowden.

She was completely overwhelmed," said Queen Lynn, when they told me just before the coronation that I was the queen."

Miss LaGrange was chosen from a field of five finalists who was not informed of her victory until a few minutes before the crowning.

The other four finalists, three sophomores and one junior, were Liz Armes, sponsored by SAE; Barbara Bishop, DTD; Joyce Combs, ZTA, and Airelou Johnson, Alpha Xi Delta.

FORMER MISS FSU

Asked why she chose FSU, she replied, "I had been to Tallahassee and seen the campus while visiting with Pi Phis in Florida."

"I wanted to attend either FSU or the University of Miami and I chose FSU because it was a smaller school. I believe there is a rich school for everybody, and I found the right one for me," she said.

Although she has lived in Franklin all her life, Miss LaGrange has traveled in nearly all of the 48 States, Canada and Mexico.

Her father, a lawyer in Franklin, was in the service when the LaGrange tribe made most of their travels. A younger sister, now married and living in Franklin, accompanied them on the trips.

PARENTS VISIT

Mr. and Mrs. LaGrange, unaware that their daughter was Homecoming Queen, decided at the last moment to fly down for the weekend.

"They being here just made the weekend complete," said FSU's reigning queen.

"The folks in Franklin have been so good to me," she said. "I have received calls, telegrams, and flowers from many of them."

Lynn was Homecoming Queen in her senior year at Franklin High and was also voted best dressed in the senior class.

The new queen is a capable pianist and enjoys singing and playing in her spare time. She is addicted to all sports, most particularly swimming.

She will represent FSU in the court of the Gator Bowl on New Year's Day in Jacksonville.

Asian Flu And Polio Vaccine Now Available At Infirmary

Preventive vaccine for Asian flu and polio are now available at the university hospital, according to Hospital Administrator Hinton F. Bevis.

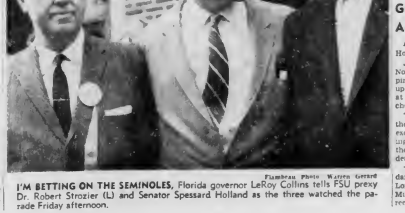
The influenza vaccine is reported to be 80 per cent effective, Bevis said. A period of two to 16 days after injection is required to build up immunity, which lasts a month to 5 years.

The vaccine is not to be administered to any individual known or suspected to be allergic to chickens, chicken feathers, or eggs, according to the hospital medical staff.

Public Health officials recommend that all individuals receive influenza immunization, unless they have recently had flu.

STUDENT REACTIONS

"It is up to the individual preference of those who have not been ill whether or not they receive a shot. It is expected that there will be some mild reaction to the shot in some individuals," the staff advised.



All unmarried students under 21 years of age must have written permission in order to receive shots. There will be no charge for flu and polio are now available at the infirmary.

THREE SALK SHOTS

The polio immunization consists of three shots of Salk anti-poliomyelitis vaccine, the second given at an interval of four to six weeks after the first, and the third or "booster" shot seven months after the initial shot, Bevis said.

There is a charge of $1 for each shot, and permission must again be obtained. Shots are given at any time during clinic hours.

"Since there are indications that the crest of the flu outbreak has been passed, the policy of sickness excuses without hospitalization for students living on campus will be discontinued," Bevis advised. Excuses will be issued only when the patient has been hospitalized on the physician's advice.

Don't Compete Claims Food Services Head

By LANE GOURLIE

"We don't compete with other eating places; we try to make a profit, but lack doing it," said Milton H. Dennis, director of the campus branch of Morrison's Food Service, this week.

Many of the questions asked by student patrons of the food service were taken to Dennis last week to further the inquiry into prices, service, quality and cleanliness which has been demanded.

Tom Crawford, secretary of student welfare in the student body president's cabinet, initiated the investigation.

When asked why prices were so much higher this year, Dennis said, "Ask your Daddies about rising prices."

EVERYTHING UP

He continued to point out that when inflation sets in, everything must go up accordingly. There was no comment made about price raising establishments which have not hiked their prices in corresponding measure.

Dennis' attention was drawn to a statement by a food service cashier concerning rising prices. "The only items that have gone up," he said, "are coffee, fruit ade and country steaks."

When questioned about university products that the food service is reported to use, Dennis explained that nothing is used that the university produces, such as bakery products from baking science classes.

He added, "Dairy products, however, are bought from the university dairy as a lower price than local dairies could give us."

LONG GONE SILVER

"One cause of the high prices," he added, "is the tremendous loss of silver, dishes and sauce shakers from university facilities."

Equipment is included in the new deal between Morrison's and the university agreed upon in their original contract.

Also in the contract is an item regarding student pay. Dennis said that contracts of 90 cents were changed to 95 cents per meal books.

At the end of the inquiry, Dennis was asked about the quality of the food served in Morrison's in the campus cafeteria.

"It's the best anyone can buy," he said.

Morrison's Prices 10-15 Cents Higher Than Local Cafes

Food prices at Morrison's Food Services were shown to be from ten to fifteen cents higher than comparative prices in Tallahassee restaurants, a recent survey revealed.

Of eight restaurants studied, three served a meat, two vegetables, rolls, and drink for 75 cents. Another served the same meal charged by Morrison's for the same items. One served the same menu for 80 cents.

Another serves a meat, two vegetables, salad and drink for 75 cents, and another gives customers a meat, three vegetables, and drink for 75 cents.

The two other restaurants studied serve a meat, three vegetables, rolls, and drink for 75 and 80 cents, respectively.

According to prices quoted by a food service cashier, students will pay $54 more this year for food served by Morrison's.

A rise in price of several items has alarmed students on strict food budgets. Both the Student Senate and Cabinet have initiated investigations into food prices and service and quality of food served.

A Morrison's cashier told the Flambeau recently that vegetables have gone up two cents, many salads have been raised five cent, coffee one cent, tea two cents, rolls and butter nine cents, and most meats ten cents.

Girls Loses Topper At Homecoming Ball

A mix-up occurred at the Homecoming Dance.

Jean Dixon, who lives in 435 North Cawthon, reports that her pink nylon topper was picked up by mistake at the coat check at the dance. She has the coat-check stub.

The person who picked up the wrong coat can make an exchange for her own by calling Miss Dixon or inquiring at the Longmire lost and found desk.

Other articles left at the dance can be claimed at the Longmire desk," according to Miss Marie Williams, social director.

The North Atlantic Treaty Organization Research Fellowship program is being opened to students in the United States during 1958-59.

The aim of the program is to "promote study and research on various aspects of the common interests, traditions, and outlook of the countries in NATO."

A candidate must be a national of a member state and must undertake his research in one or more of the member countries.

RESEARCH APPTITUDE

Selection for candidates will be on the basis of their special aptitude for, and experience in carrying through a major project of research.

Factors such as academic qualifications, professional experience, and publications will be taken into account. Priority will be given to scholars in the humanities and social sciences.

The amount of each advanced award will be the equivalent of 200-000 French francs.

Grants will normally be for a period of two to four months. NATO will pay for first class travel by air.

Application forms may be obtained from Conference Book of Associated Research Councils, 2101 Constitution Ave., Washington 25, D.C.

Preliminary screening of American candidates will be by the Committee on International Exchange of Persons of the Conference Board of Associated Research Councils.

A number of long term scholarships for younger scholars at the post-graduate level is offered, also.

A limited amount of scholarship will be given to scholars working on projects in the physical and natural sciences of particular interest to the Atlantic Community.

Jennie, West, ZTAs, Pikes Top Decoration Contests

VPI Gobblers were cooked, slashed apart, buried, and eaten as cold left-overs on the lawns last weekend.

Homecoming displays, competing against each other in five divisions, were judged by a committee of four: Mr. Ivan Johnson, chairman; Mr. Earl Beck; Mr. Alan Thomson, and Mr. James Thompson.

Jennie Murphree's turkey dinner was named tops in women's division, and Thomson, Thigpen, the second in this division was the "Vaporer VPI" on the front lawn of North Cawthon.

COLD TURKEY

Cold turkey left-overs in a Nuernatzer refrigerator rated West Hall first place in the men's residence division. Magnolia Hall's ultra-modern VPI blasting, powered by a Volkswagen engine, took second place in this group.

The Methodist Student House came in first in the independent division with a display captioned: "Know Your Penalties," in which VPI Gobblers learn them the hard way.

Equal Rights Given Football Fans

The old adage, "you can't please everybody" seems to hold true at the athletic business office. Complaints have come by way of the Flambeau's letters-to-the-editor column (see this page) which led us to investigate the alleged injustices committed in regard to the distribution of football tickets.

THESE ARE the facts: individual students are getting the privilege of being able to obtain seats on the 50 yard line as various groups on campus.

Tickets for persons wishing to sit together in groups of 20 or more are distributed at the Men's gym, while other students may procure tickets at the Westcent ticket booth. The method used to distribute the tickets equally is to sell half of each aisle's tickets at the former spot and half at the latter.

ANY GROUP wishing to sit together may obtain seats in a block by turning in all its activity books at the same time. Besides fraternities, who are the most well known participants of block seating, church groups, married couples, and campus clubs receive tickets in the same way. Its all a matter of "first come, first serve."

The first tickets given out are those in the center aisles (12 and 13) and the following go down the line on both sides. The sales start at 1 p.m. and from what we hear from the ticket office, the tickets go quite rapidly. On the Monday afternoon preceding the Homecoming game 2000 tickets were distributed.

THIS SEEMS to be a fair and equal plan. Half an aisle goes to groups, half to students at large. The aisle method open at the same time and the individual student does not have to compete with groups for the best center aisles.

Can any of the dissenters of the present seating arrangement offer a better solution?

Flambeau Initiates 250 Word Limit On Letters

Because of a limited amount of space, the Flambeau has initiated a new policy for the letters-to-the-editor column. Henceforth, letters must not exceed 250 words, must be typewritten, double-spaced, or written in a legible hand, and must be signed. Names will be withheld if necessary.

This past Flambeau policy has been in print all letters-to-the-editor if not of a libelous nature.

We are sorry to limit the wordage of the letters, but we feel it necessary in order to continue our policy of printing all letters received.

Candidate Writes

TO ALL OFF CAMPUS STUDENTS:

First of all, THANKS for your first response in last Thursday's election. Secondly, thnuish the response was good, it wasn't quite enough. However, you have shown me that you are concerned about our representation in student government.

I know that many of you, like me, are tired of getting our problems pidgeon-holed and shoved aside. Last week's vote proved this. I also know that there are more of you that feel that way. To you I say, "Use your voting privilege. many votes speak louder than one individual gripe every now and then."

There are four candidates running for two seats. Use your vote, elect two, and then back them up. You can't be heard if you don't make a noise.

Today is the day to start making yourselves heard. Go to the polls, make your vote, and be heard. If you feel as strongly as I about the way we have been shoved around, I shall sincerely appreciate your support at the polls today.

I offer this challenge to you fellow commuters. To all of you non-vets—Vote and be heard, or stay home and lose what voice you have already expressed

Sincerely,
FOR A FAIR SHAKE FOR THE DAY STUDENTS
Gary J. Kissiger
(Candidate — Off Campus Day Student Body)

Frosh Don't Vote

TO THE EDITOR:

The Freshman Class disgraced itself last Tuesday. I'm talking about the poor showing at the polls. Where was everyone, the hibernation? One thing is for sure, not many of you got out and voted, as the results plainly show.

I'm a Freshman, and I want to tell everyone on this campus that I, for one, am ashamed of my classmates and I feel there are a few others that are of my opinion since this sickening turnout for elections. Do you know that in the history of this university, there hasn't been a poorer turnout of the Freshman Class at the polls, and I hope there will will never be another.

Classmates, there is to be another election today that is the runoffs so let's get out and vote LET'S GET THE FRIVOLITY OUT OF THE WAY HERE, NOT DISGRACE IT.

Sincerely,
PAT JONES

Can't Get Seats

TO THE EDITOR:

As of late there has been much criticism of the Florida State University students' school spirit at the football games. Much I must admit hasn't been on the level with previous years that I have been seen. To my knowledge there has been very little done to discover the reason for this lack of enthusiasm. I feel that the main problem lies in the present manner in which the tickets are distributed to the students.

It is a known fact that many students do not attend the football games, but still week after week upon visiting the Westcent Ticket Office early on the morning of the second day of ticket distribution I find that the only seats left are in aisle 9 and 10. It seems there are quite a myriad where all the tickets for seats in aisles 11, 12, 13 and 14 are going. After being there for over so often I have about decided that there is no use to get a decent seat in Campbell Stadium is to join the Marching Chiefs, be a member of a fraternity, or become a sports writer and sit in the press box.

I feel the Senate has found much interest in investigating the Food Services as well as several off campus eating establishments. I think it would be worth the investigation of the student manner in distributing tickets in order before FSU's big games with Miami and Auburn.

Have Discussions

TO THE EDITOR:

I would like to congratulate you on printing Robert Randall's controversial letter. I have attended several of such subjects were not allowed to be printed.

I believe that only through uncensored and freely expressed ideas can a free society be made profitable if a club or organization could be formed in which one could exchange his views and opinions with others. Some schools do have such groups but the topics are decided by one side forces. I would like to see a group in which a student could discuss the subject which HE wants to discuss. In other words a group with no outside controls.

I can supply the meeting place for such a group of "Free Thinkers."

Humanitarianism Is Outmoded Now

TO THE EDITOR:

I would like to reply to the letter in your last issue that favored integration for "Foreign Policy" reasons.

THE GENTLEMAN must assume that the Asians have go or 50 years or more yet before a decisive conflict occurs between the Soviet Union and the United States. I think a more reasonable estimate would be within 10 years, if not in less time. If this is true Asia can present no threat to our national existance they will not have the technical requirements for global offensive war that they will have in the decades to come.

The Soviet Union cannot arm as many people as we can since their industrial capacity isn't one-half of ours. Numbers, therefore, will mean less in the next war than they do in the last one due to technological changes.

EVEN IN the Second World War the Germans demonstrated how insignificant mere numbers were and how all-important technology, organization, and fighting spirit were. These are the factors are more important now than they were in the Second World War. The only place mere numbers is significant anymore is in Asia, where all the other things quality is decisive.

THE meantime the propaganda is convinced that integration will help abroad. Apparently he realizes that conditions here will get worse rather than better. However, there is one fact he thinks and when the Negro begins to live in a good environment he will be as reliable as the white both to peace and war.

THE republic of Haiti has had a hundred years and more to emancipate themselves from poverty and cultural backwardness but they remain today a conspicuous example of the old process that "conditions" are not favorable in Haiti. I must ask the gentleman what he demands in the way of conditions. They have their independence, and while men are "holding them down," why don't they change?

THE WARS occurs in the next 10 years and our "enlightened humanitarian" allow their good sweet dream—integration—they will be looking for courageous men to fight. They will look in vain.

Negroes have shown themselves to be notoriously unreliable in combat. They brought shame on their race in Korea when the colored division was nicknamed the "Bug-Out" division because of its habit of retreating and running when under fire.

IN CONTRAST to this the South has a reputation for producing courageous soldiers. The three names—Coon, Kelly, Smith, York and Audie Murphy—that are most often heard when speaking of great soldiers were all Southerners.

Yet the gentleman is willing to undermine the morale of the South for "social progress." I would inform you that our biggest problem is not "social progress" but National survival. Humanitarianism was fine for the depression. It is outmoded under present circumstances.

JOE SALMON.

Use More Discretion

TO THE EDITOR:

I appreciate your attempt to portray "both sides" of the integration issue, especially with regard to a hypothetical member of FSU and A & M.

I regret that highly emotional nonsense was used to resort facts. It is hoped that while continuing to present all sides of issues that more discretion will be used in selecting articles for publication.

Phi Delts Find Fire Fighting Fun

BY BUCKY CANON

A fire in the Phi Delt house up at Emory University in Atlanta, Ga. created some excitement one night last week. It wasn't a serious affair with only minor property damage and scorched walls. But everyone seemed to enjoy seeing the fire engines roll up to the fraternity house and real live firemen put out the blaze.

The Phi Delta, more pleased than ashsat at the commotion, stayed along and run in and out of the house, handkerchiefs over their mouths, carrying clothes and suitcases.

Also at Emory we hear that they are invading man's sacred precincts by establishing a women's drill team. It is to be called the "Angel Flights," and is sponsored by the Air Force ROTC and the Arnold Air Society. However, it will be "g' predators shall soon run by the women." ROTC officers will spend one hour of their drill period familiar the Angel Flights. Sounds as if it might be an incentive to bring them out to drill.

There is nothing like tradition at West Texas State U. To celebrate the schools victory over Texas Tech by a 19-0 score, Dr. James F. Cornette, President of the school rode a donkey 105 yards for the victory and an additional 16 yards for every point over Tech's score. The President, attired in dinner jacket, carried his own bottle and a Stetson traveled 290 yards.

"That Night" Is Dramatic Surprise

BY ALAN KASS

It is expected that several people in the population of Tallahassee this past weekend experienced one from or another suffering due for the most part from alcohol and endured much unrest. Another experience in agony comes our way when we realistically in an unheralded motion picture entitled "That Night" at the Florida Theatre.

THIS is the story of one man in the struggle for life in a big city. He works late in the office nightly, runs to catch trains, is hen pecked by his wife and all the while is building up a tension.

Rules Harsh Slack

TO THE EDITOR:

I would liks to quote part of a recent letter from a girl attending Mary Baldwin College in Staunton, Virginia. This shows in one way how FSU is lacking and, in another way how well off the girls are here.

To quote " . . . We are on the honor system, which really works. It was so unusual to me to be able to just get up during a test and walk out—or take the test any where you want to . . .

" . . . We have to be in by eight o'clock Sunday through Thursday, and on Friday and Saturday nights, by 11:30 . . ."

In relation to this, it seems that the honor system here at Florida State leaves something to be desired, and the girls have certainly been given lenient hours.

Yours very truly,

Dear Mama Seminole

Dear Mama,

Georgie come through big weekend in good shape. Mama, except for a little headache. Old Seminoles come back to village and get big kick out of young squaws and braves. say FSCW never like this.

THEM RIGHT, too, Mama. When village just for squaw, them play heap big volleyball game for homecoming. think new say with big body-ball game much better.

One thing me can't stand about body-ball game. Many little man who keeps making big speeches to Semicole-Nation, bodyguards. Him with stick to try telling fire up. But when him start lecturing to students like professor him up. Georgie hope him stick to cheering soon find leave some alone.

LOTS OF things happen good this weekend, though. Ma have heap big pow-wow for all braves and squaws and chose queen to represent friendly village. She awful pretty, Mama. Georgie no have chance with pretty squaws. Him too ugly.

Georgie go to big dance Saturday night and hear him not but still way cold. Big fat joker with plan dance and run running around like chicken with head cut off telling all that things is really warm. Me think him crazy with the Him trying to hard to use "Power of Believing". Next time be, he use real heat for dance and not play make believe.

Horn-Rimmed Menace Active In Cabinet

BY LANE GOURLIE

This is the story of a horn-rimmed menace.

Menace, that is, to anything static, dull, or matter-of-fact. Bob Johnston, 22-year-old senior, has proven this by being one of the staunchest supporters of student government.

HAVE YOU ever wondered just exactly who had all of files, constitutions, histories, and backgrounds of student organizations? Here's your man.

As Secretary of Organizations on the Student Cabinet, he is the coordinator between the university and its organizations. Or as Bob puts it, "I have a responsibility of seeing that campus organizations follow the university rules and that they are organizations campuswise."

HOW DID he become a cabinet member? By following motto, "A man is as strong as his friends make him."

Easy to see why Bob has friends.

His outgoing personality probably strikes people first. Then they listen to him talk: in fact, they can't stop listening for he always seems to know just what he is saying and to Perhaps this partially explains his success with campus projects which are one of his main interests.

A UNIQUE man himself, his background is equally so. Himself born in Palm Beach and the product of several years Quitting school, he moved to Guam with his father for about a half. While he was there, he completed high school, graduating with his class in 1953.

The travel bug must have bitten deep, for he has been to Wake Island, Kwajalein, Enewetok, Hawaii, Mexico, and 42 states.

BOB WORKED for the Navy Civil Service on Guam before coming to FSU. He came to the university and soon his ability was noticed at FSU. He's done a few things besides busy in books, however. He's been a member of Sigma Chi, social fraternity. Bob put it, "made me from what I was to what I am." That he worked hard in general campus activities such as Homecoming, Religion in Faith Week, and the Administration House. He started gaining his exellent ROTC reputation then.

THE SOPHOMORE year found him a member of Judiciary by an overwhelming majority of votes, a member of the Organizations Committee, and a representative on Student Council. A busy bee.

He started his junior year as the chaplain of his fraternity, on the Executive Council of the Student Party, the Inter-Fraternity Council, Intellgent Faith Week, Homecoming Dance Committee, Religion in Faith Week, and was a housefellow in Magnolia Hall.

THEN YEAR hasn't found Bob asleep, either. He is a Phi Key pledge, Secretary of Organizations and on the Student Council, and a member of Omicron Delta Kappa, honorary leadership fraternity. He is also a Magnolia housefellow and was honored with membership in Scabbard and Blade, honorary military fraternity, and has worked on Homecoming committees. He will be commissioned in the Air Force in May.

And there you have the answer who is "as strong as his friends make him."

Power Of Florida Governor Is Small

BY L. A. NESTER

Quite often we hear the complaint why doesn't the Governor do such and such a thing or many times the governor will express a particular view on an issue, and then when he is questioned further he wonder why the governor is not always forthcoming. In the main, most of these complaints are primarily due to a lack of understanding of Florida government.

WERE THE Governor the sole administrative head of Florida as he is in many states, he would be responsible for all complaints, but in reality this is the furthest possible thing from the truth. Due to the actual practice he is only one of seven administrative heads and he has the weakest position of the group. The other six are the Florida Cabinet members; Secretary of State, Treasurer, Attorney General, Comptroller, Superintendent of Public Instruction, and the Treasurer.

WHEN I say he may well be the weakest member I refer to the fact that he cannot succeed himself as governor, wherever in other states governors are allowed to succeed themselves time after time again. For instance the Secretary of Agriculture has been in office for the last four terms and is still going strong.

And to top it all off when they do come up for reelection they have only token opposition. Only once since the beginning of the mid-twentieth century has a cabinet member been beaten in seeking relection to th same position.

THE REASON for this electorate apathy can only be attributed to the public misunderstanding of Florida government. Not for fun see how many of you friends can name the six cabinet members, and if they complete that obstacle I guarantee you that they can't define their duties. Even government students find that a sizable task.

Although these men are elected to specific offices, they unite every conceivable facet of Florida government. Because of the limitless continuity in office, their political influence on the Florida legislature is a major factor in governor in every respect.

IN OTHER words what the cabinet says is an influential Florida government. And to add a little irony when they do make a mistake the public wrath bypasses them because of their security and falls on the shoulders of the beleaguered governor.

Even though Governor Collins was elected by an overwhelming vote in the 1956 primary, several of his platform planks have touched on the duties and interests of the cabinet members who quickly shelved by cabinet members and by their influence on legislature.

WITH THE paradoxical situation where the governor is solely responsible by the public for Florida government, but in effect little of the actual power distributed to the two executives; cooperate with the cabinet members and do what good he can and try and succeed in a position of leadership. Or he can throw his hands up in despair and criticise the cabinet as a result he may succeed in getting none of his program accepted and at the same time receive the blame for any inefficiency that with the cabinet might be guilty. In the face of such a choice there is no choice: the first alternative is mandatory.

To draw a brief conclusion. I do not intend to imply that we should discontinue being critical of malfeasance in Florida government, but I do think that we often misdirect our criticism. A better understanding of Florida government by the electorate is a must if we hope to eventually correct structure failures which tend to impair accountability and the line of responsibility.

Tribe Wrecks Tech At Homecoming, 20-7

FSU Reverts To 'Home Run Balls'

It's always nice to win at Homecoming.

And Tom Nugent has made a habit of it since arriving here in 1953. Only a 14-14 tie with Waka Forest last year has marred perfect Homecoming mark.

Virginia Tech was certainly the toughest Homecoming opponent Nugent has mastered, and nobody can take anything away from the way his Seminoles did it.

Playing the opportunists and using two "home run balls" to do it, the Seminoles showed that, like previous Nugent teams, they may be ready for another strong finish.

Nugent's clubs have in the past been generally second half teams starting shakily but finishing the year with a flurry of victories.

To finish with a flurry of wins this season will be no easy task. Having won their last two, they find Miami, Mississippi Southern and Auburn blocking their way.

CANES STILL POTENT

However, the 'Canes showed they're still a potent gridiron force Friday night, steamrollering over Kansas, 48-6. It was as they wanted to get some of the rust out of a machine which has been sputtering all season long.

FSU has never beaten the 'Canes, at that has been able to win only three touchdowns in four games against Miami. They've never played them in Tallahassee either though.

The confines of the Orange Bowl have always been a big help to Gustafson's teams and a psychological discomfort to their opponents.

Nobody's going out on a limb and saying the Seminoles can beat Miami as this reporter wrongly did last year. Few are the times they can't either.

A couple of comments by Miami scout George Trogdon, after seeing the Seminoles, may suffice to point out that the 'Canes are not over-confident of victory.

After the FSU-North Carolina State game:

"I'll tell you this, they're much better than last year. They haven't helpless out there against one of the best teams in the country." FSU lost to N. C. State, 7-0, Miami tied them 0-0.)

After Saturday's FSU victory over VPI:

"They're getting better every week . . . They've got so many variations you don't know what to look for . . . And you can bet Nugent will have a few surprises for us, too."

Nugent has two weeks to prepare his boys for Miami, while the 'Canes go up against a rugged Villanova team this weekend in the Orange Bowl.

The two week layoff could be a disadvantage as well as an advantage to the Seminoles. It's often hard to keep a ball club "up" during such a layoff after they've been that way for two straight games.

The Miami game indicates that Miami may be finally finding some of the potential which was predicted for it at the start of the season.

Saturday's victory over Virginia Tech indicates much the same about the Seminoles. Nugent appears to have found a workable combination, and he intends to keep it for the remainder of the season.

This meeting between FSU and Miami will could be a good football game. If doubt that the 'Canes are going to dominate the game as they did for three periods last year.

At this stage though, it's tough to bet on the Seminoles.

This week's Miami-Villanova battle may tell quite a story. Changing sports for the moment, about a month from now, the Seminoles will be switching to the basketball court, with the same left on the gridiron slate.

EAGERS TABBED SEVENTH

The national magazine rates the Seminole cagers seventh among all 11 independents in the southeast, and puts two Tribe opponents Memphis State and Oklahoma City in the nation's top 20.

Things don't quite look that black from where I sit.

I think the Seminoles may well have a "sleeper" in cagers Jerry Wilson, though I'm sure Bud Kennedy is too cautious to circulate such talk.

Kennedy appears to have corralled three pretty good junior college grads in Dan Boltz, Burt Deckel and Jimmy Liteke, and he knows the mazings of a fine team.

Once again, the first part of the schedule may make or break Kennedy season.

The Tribe cagers open at home with Tennessee Tech and Murray State of Kentucky on Monday and Saturday nights respectively.

Both Memphis State and Oklahoma City will be here for one game and all in all Kennedy appears to have rounded up the toughest home slate in the school's history.

Once again the battle with Florida (in Gainesville) looms big on the horizon, for the Gators are "loaded" also. It could be a repeat performance of last year Florida won 67-65), but I hope with a different ending.

Basketball is still a month away though, and that Miami game just 10 short days.

Pickard Goes 80 Yards For New Record

By LARRY BLOCK
Flambeau Sports Editor

Striking swiftly and suddenly for two touchdowns in the second quarter and final tally in the third period, Florida State upended Virginia Tech, 20-7 here Saturday.

A homecoming day record crowd of 16,500 were treated to the first victory over the Gobblers in three meetings.

It was fitting revenge for the Seminoles that this was practically the same team that defeated the Tribe here last year by the same 20-7 score.

The victory brought FSU up to a .500 percentage with three wins, the last two in a row, as against three losses.

Quarterback Bobby Renn, held to a minus two yards rushing by Virginia Tech, passed to Captain Ron Schonburger on the first play of the second quarter.

SCHONBURGER SCORES

With FSU on its own 49, Renn faded back and set up Schonburger cutting across field, a step behind the V P I defender. Schonburger gathered it in on the 12 and raced the remaining yards without being touched.

Whitesell finally recovered the kickoff and returned it to the VPI 17 yard line. But a clipping penalty by the Gobblers put the ball back on the one yard line.

VPI DRIVES

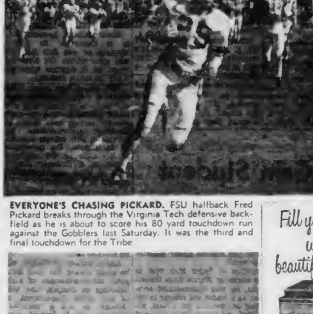
VPI threatened on the only sustained drive on either side to score its lone touchdown.

With Halley Harry Fraure and fullback Boo Conner doing the majority of the ball carrying, Virginia Tech had a first and goal on the Seminoles' six yard stripe.

On third down and a yard to go, quarterback Jim Lugar tried a quarterback sneak, but was sided up a fool from the goal line.

But on the next play Conner took a handoff and plunged over for the score. Frazee's extra point try was good and FSU's lead was narrowed to 14-7 at halftime.

On the very first play after the Gobblers had kicked off to FSU, sophomore halfback Fred Spivey brought the crowd to its feet by taking a direct handoff from Renn, west off the right side of his line and racing 80 yards to paydirt for the Seminoles' third and final touchdown of the afternoon.



From all appearences, Pickard seemed to be gored by a hard over the line of scrimmage, but he broke away, was past the VPI secondary before they knew what happened and outraced the hopeless safety man to the goal line.

NEW RECORD

With that 80 yard run, Pickard put his name in the FSU record book for the longest touchdown run from scrimmage. The previous mark was 78 set by Buck Metts against Stetson in 1956.

The Seminoles had three other opportunities to roll up the score, but VPI's line, which was a tough nut to crack all afternoon, refused to yield.

John Spivey, sophomore end, recovered a Conner fumble in the third quarter on the Tech 16, but the Gobblers dug in and finally took over on the 20.

EVERYONE'S CHASING PICKARD. FSU halfback Fred Pickard breaks through the Virginia Tech defensive backfield he is about to score his 80 yard touchdown run against the Gobblers last Saturday. It was the third and final touchdown for the Tribe

The Seminoles got a drive underway in the third quarter which saw them advance to the VPI 17. On fourth down, FSU decided to try a field goal, but Nellums' kick never had a chance as it was blocked by guard Ben Schmidt.

Jim Lugar, a far cry from his old self of last year, passed to Conner late in the final quarter, but the pass bounced off Conner's shoulder and into the hands of Spivey on the 41.

Spivey took off, racing across the field, outrsaied off to guard Jon Jenkins at the 30, and Jenkins carried it down to the Gobbler 22.

ALMOST INTERCEPTED. Stan Doboszi leaps high into the air to break up a VPI pass from Jim Lugar to Ed Brinkley (80) Bobby Renn, (15) Tribe quarterback is behind Doboszi, read to aid in case of a runback. Seminole's own homecoming tilt, 20-7.

Intramural News

Due to the swimming meet and homecoming activities, little action was seen in the Intramural basketball competition. In one night of action though, a few very important games were played last week and some shuffling was done in the Independent standings.

Newman Club with a very fired up team tumbled unbeaten Magnolia into 4th place and claimed 5th place for themselves, to the tune of 32-14. DePalmer laid in 12 for Newman and Mullins led Magnolia with 4 points.

BSU came from behind to hold onto first place by dumpting the 6th place Rebels 25-14. Bates tallied 9 for BSU and Washburn eased in 8 for the Rebs.

Pyrithoans Club easily defeated the Feds 34-23 and moved into 2nd place. Harrison powered the gang with 13 and Miller led the Feds with 13.

NO SORRIER WARRIOR exists than the one without Luckies. What's he missing? A smoke that's as light as they come! End to end, a Lucky is made of superbly light tobacco—golden rich, wonderfully good-tasting tobacco that's toasted to taste even better. That's a lot to miss out on—no wonder our chief has grief! Up North, you'd call him a Blue Sioux; back East, a Bleak Creek. But out in the land of the pueblo, he's just a mighty Mopey Hopi. (Smoke signal to you: Light up a Lucky. You'll agree a light smoke's the right smoke for you!)

Radio Listening Pays Off For Phi Kappa Taus

By NANCY GENE BROWN

At six a.m. October 21, a sleepy Phi Kappa Tau turned off a humming alarm clock and switched on his radio, tuning in Radio Station WTAL—thus beginning a listening watch that was to continue 18 hours a day for seven days—a total of 126 hours.

More than 20 Phi Taus participated in the vigil on a "swing shift" schedule, and there was a method in their madness.

Their goal was a towering stack of records and a four-speed Voice of Music high-fidelity record player — prizes awarded by WTAL to the person (or organization) who could guess most accurately the number of records played on that station each day from sign-on at 6 a.m. till "Dixie" ended the day's programming.

TEAMWORK

Taking turns when out of class, the Phi Tau's teamed up to count one by one the records played each day. Their efforts paid off to win 100 records each of two days.

Then they averaged the total for the week on the base of each day's total—and won the hi-fi set.

"We were even listening to records on a portable radio at meals," said Phi Tau spokesman Don Talmon. "And at midnight, we spent the last 30 minutes before sign-off counting while listening on the car radio in front of the post-office downtown. We wanted to be sure our entries got the earliest postmark."

HI-FI PRIZE

The entry bearing Talmon's name won the prize for the week's total, the hi-fi set.

Dick Brown and John Henry Carter won two days' prizes—a hundred records each time.

Listening paid off in another way for Phi Tau Dick Corriveau. While "on watch," he noticed that his car's mileage corresponded with the number called out on WTAL's "Melody Mileage" contest—and won ten free gallons of gas.

THEY ALL LISTENED . . .

What happens to the boots? It's a gift to the fraternity's recreation room from the men who contributed their time to the cause.

Yesterday they were featured guests on WTAL's afternoon program, Bill Shultz's "Shoebox Show." At that time they accepted their prizes.

Three Gain Student HonoraryMembership

Dr Robert M. Strozier and Dr. Florida State University faculty and Richard Edgerton of Mr. Dora were given honorary membership in two student honor societies Friday night at the Homecoming banquet.

Dr. Strozier, president of FSU since Sept. 3, and Edgerton, who retires Nov. 1 to the job of state hotel and restaurant commissioner be held for more than two years, were made members of Gold Key honorary for men.

Dr. Montgomery, who has been director of physical education for women at FSU since 1920 and a herself an alumna of Florida State College for Women, was made a member of Garnet Key, the honorary organization for women.

The honors were bestowed at the annual banquet sponsored by the two organizations for alumni, students and faculty, a part of the two day Homecoming program.

STROZIER ADDRESS

In a brief address Dr Strozier, a native of Georgia who before coming here was dean of students at the University of Chicago, gave the banquetters his ideas on what kind of alumni can be of most value to the university.

"Alumni can help produce a reservoir of good will throughout the state for the university," he said, "They can do that only if they are informed alumni.

"By informed alumni I mean those who not only keep abreast of what happens at the university but who are intelligent and literate members of the community."

Alumni can aid the university in more concrete ways, he added, by helping it select the best students, becoming members of the alumni association, contributing financially and urging others to do likewise.

Pat Wolfe, Gold Key secretary, presented Dr. Strozier an honorary membership in the men's organization, set up to recognize unusual leadership and service.

The honor was bestowed in recognition of "your high post as president of Florida State University, for your demonstrated service as a leader and scholar in the field of education on a local, national and international basis and for the respect and admiration you have gained from the faculty and students alike in the short time you have been here."

HOTEL COMMISSIONER

Edgerton was cited for "your example as a successful business man with a keen active interest in public affairs, for your efficient administration of the governments part in Florida's biggest industry, for your friendship to our university."

Priscilla Moss presented Miss Montgomery, familiarly known as Miss Katie, for membership in Garnet Key. Miss Montgomery, she said, gained an unusual honor in 1944 when she was named a Fellow in the American Association of Health, Physical Education and Recreation.

But more than anything, she said, she has gained "the admiration and respect of all her students" as shown when a Silver Jubilee was held in her honor in 1954 and "they came here from all over the country.

Miss Montgomery received her degree in English at FSCW in 1918 and in 1939 and 1941, respectively, got her master's and doctor's at Columbia and New York University.

Campus May Soon Move 'Across Street'

By A. J. ARTHUR

"FSU will have to buy land 'across the street' from the campus if it continues growing at the rate it is now," says university Business Manager, Roderick J. Shaw. "Otherwise, we will presently have no room for expansion."

Shaw declares, however, that it is impossible to predict whether or not this situation will arise within the next ten years, as it depends upon too many unknown factors.

"We try to keep a few years ahead of what is actually needed," Shaw says concerning long range planning. "But we can't possibly foresee such things as legislative appropriations, the number of new schools developed in Florida, the population of the state or the economic conditions of students' parents —all of which control the expansion of a university."

PROGRAM IMPORTANT

As far as actual size of a university is concerned, Shaw states that the educational program is the important factor. "If a university can educate 25,000 with the efficiency of 3,000, there is no limit to size."

Approximately $8,435,000 will be spent during the next three years for construction of eight buildings on campus. One, that of the State Department of Geology, will be a university building, but is located close to the FSU School o. Geology with which it will work.

Planned for completion this year are the buildings for the Schools of Business and Education. Each will cost one million dollars and will be located on either side of the Student Center, with the Business School to the east and the Education Building to the west.

The last legislature appropriated funds for a structure to house the nuclear accelerator, which has already been purchased. It is due for delivery in two years, at which time the building will be completed.

Money was also appropriated for a social science building and for one for the departments of mathematics and meteorology. Sites for these have not yet been chosen.

NEW DORMS

September of 59 is the date scheduled for completion of four new mens and womens dormitories. Housing 256, the women's dorm will be situated west of Florida Hall while the men's structure will be located above and north of West Hall, will hold 372.

"Expert advice" is what Business Manager Shaw terms that received from the university building committee. Membership of the committee, which inspects plans for new structures, includes the Registrar, Charles H Walker, advisor on space utilization, Resident Engineer Raymond E Green; Arts and Sciences Associate Dean, Dr. J. Paul Reynolds, who considers academic needs; and Ivan Johnson of the industrial arts department, concerned with decoration of the buildings.

The committee recommendations go to Shaw, who takes them so he discussed with University President Robert M Strozier and Vice-President, A. B Martin. Approved plans are then sent through the Board of Control, to the architects for completion.

Panama Heaven On Earth? Hunt Describes Canal Zone

Cigarettes—88 cents a carton! Gasoline—18 cents a gallon! Movies—15 cents. Sounds like the ideal place to live? Dr. Kellogg W. Hunt of the English Department makes it appear to be a "heaven on earth."

Dr. Hunt was one of the FSU professors who went to the Canal Zone as a teacher in the "Bootstrap Program." This program is operated by the universityr off campus at the air bases and foreign bases to offer servicemen a chance for improvement.

The Canal Zone is one of the few places where the United States government has established a military state for twenty years. In a state of this type, everything is government owned and operated.

LIFE IS SIMPLE

Life in the zone is simple and well-regulated. No very rich people, and no very poor live there. There are no criminal institutions, and traffic is so well-directed that parents are not afraid to send children to the movies or store alone.

Dr Hunt and the other teachers enjoyed full commissary privileges and were even taken for a helicopter ride. Their stay lasted for two and one-half months

Some interesting facts about the canal itself are that the canal runs northwest from the Pacific to the Atlantic, and the sun rises in the Pacific and sets in the Atlantic.

Residents of the zone are treated well. Their pay is good, and they enjoy two month paid vacations every year with transportation provided free of charge.

THE 'RAINMAKER', Starbuck, played by Craig Monroe and the lonely farm girl, Lizzie, played by Ethel Gifford, find happiness at the end of the road, in the play's climax.

'Rainmaker' Opening Set For 8:15 Tonight

Show Opens 4-Night Run

By NANCY GENE BROWN

Richard Nash's "The Rainmaker," will open tonight at 8:15 in Conradi Theater, opening FSU's theater season.

"Tickets are going better for this production than they have for any play in years," according to Director Richard G. Fallon. They are available in the Westcott ticket office for 50¢ with an activity book. No without.

The play, which will also be presented tomorrow, Monday, and Tuesday nights, is billed as the Cinderella story of a plain woman who finds beauty in the reflection of her loved one's eyes.

Ethel Gifford, a junior from Clearwater, will star as Lizzy Curry, a warm, mature but plain member of a drought-stricken farming community.

MONROE IS STARBUCK

Playing Starbuck, the rainmaker, will be Craig Monroe. The movie version of the play had Katherine Hepburn and Burt Lancaster cast as Lizzie and Starbuck.

Bryant Somma, a junior transfer from Hillsborough County, will play the part of File, the community's assistant sheriff.

Freshman Royce Pipkin, of Haines City, was chosen for the part of Jimmy Curry's younger brother, who is a party in the conspiracy to get her married.

Playing H. C., the warm-hearted father, will be Ron McCall, a junior from St. Petersburg.

Bruce George Goldman, from Miami, will portray the sheriff who does his part to justify his badge, knowing he'll be put on for nuisance beauty.

ALL EXPERIENCED

All the members of the cast have had dramatic experience in various capacities in high school, college, stock company, or community theater work.

The Rainmaker" is essentially a story of the importance of hope, as set in a drought stricken farming community. There bve the Currys, a loving hopeful family, who know their problems will be solved eventually, but hardly expect the solution in the form in which it comes.

Director Fallon feels the play will be the most interesting because of the Hollywood production of it earlier this year, as well as the Broadway version.

However, the interpretation was giving the play a quite different than that of New York and Hollywood. We feel it closer to the thought behind writing the author Fallon said.

SHOULD BE MEANINGFUL

"I am very pleased with the work done by the cast and crew. They have combined to make it a very effective and moving comedy and it should be meaningful to the audience.

"In other words, they should be able to identify themselves with the main charcters—Lizzy and Starbuck," he said.

"We are striking a provocative space staging — that is, symbolic representation of the area in which we are playing, rather than the realistic approach. This helps carry out the dramatic interpretation of the play," he added.

Author Nash made several changes in the play following the New York presentation in order to prevent any variation of the

Grimm To Offer Opera Scene At 8:15 P.M. Faculty Recital

Betty Jane Grimm, a contralto who has delighted Tallahassee audiences many times during her tenure on the faculty of the Florida State University School of Music, will present a faculty recital tonight.

The varied program will be climaxed by an entire scene from Carlo Menottis opera "The Old Maid and the Thief," to be given in Opperman Music Hall. Open to the public without charge.

The Menotti selection will be in Scene 1, including the numbers "What is the matter Lamb . . ." the Lullaby "I have for you planes and Gramma's recipe," and the Finale, "I'm leaving for him . . . It is a specially well-liked act from the opera by the contemporary Italian composer.

NONE LAST YEAR

Last year I was unable to appear by annual recital because of pneumonia, so I am especially excited about tonight's performance," said Miss Grimm. She is a child Miss Grimm played in musical instruments and dolls. Although she loved this instrumenta and singing in the neighborhood children, she never realized her talent was linked with much later.

Throughout high school she played saxophone and clarinet in the band. She chose, however, to major in vocal training in college. Her decision to study voice came when she was a freshman at Marshall College. A member of the FSU faculty in 1947, Miss Grimm did graduate study at Columbia University. She has appeared as soloist with the famous Huah Rose Centennial Chorus, with the bation of Dimitri Mitropolis, Columbia Master Works recording of Bach Chorale under Leopold Stokowski, Carmen in the Lewisohn Stadium, in leading roles with the Columbia Opera Company, and contralto soloist with the Columbia University Chorus in "Alio Rhasody."

Senate Investigating Tally Movie Prices

The cost of movie tickets at Tallahassee theaters for Florida State University students is the current matter under investigation by a Student Senate committee.

The move to investigate the admission prices at the local theaters became as the result of a proposal by Sophomore Senator Marion Hair.

Hair, in his proposal, drew a comparison between prices in Tallahassee and those in Gainesville.

G'VILLE PRICES

"The cost of a movie ticket in Gainesville on Saturdays is only 75 cents," he said, "and there is no reason why we should not have lower prices here."

The investigation committee will be composed of Hair, Men's Vice-President Bob Murray and Women's Vice-President Polly Atwater.

They will report back to the Senate at next week's meeting after conferring with the manager most of the local theaters.

In other action, Senate heard a report from the Labor Student Services and Education Committee by Committee Chairman Don K Lewis.

The report concerned a proposal brought before the group last week that all cars registered on campus be subjected to a complete safety check.

Lewis reported on a conference he had held with Mr. Gerald Jones, university traffic director, on the matter.

Lewis reported Jones as saying that at the present time we have trouble enough in getting cars registered and getting stickers on them.

"It would be impossible," Jones said, "to make such a check at this time, and there is no one to do the job at present."

Senate concluded its activity in Wednesday's meeting by hearing a report from Secretary of State Priscilla Moss.

Miss Moss announced that the new senators would be formally installed Tuesday afternoon at 4 p.m. in the Senate chambers. A tea for the newly elected senators will follow in the large lounge of the Longmire Building.

Appeals Of Five Students Approved By Honor Court

The appeals of five students under honor court probation were heard and approved by Student Honor Court in a Monday night action.

The five, who were convicted under previous provisions of the honor code, sought to have their probationary period lifted under provisions created by last spring's constitutional revision.

The original constitutional honor code provided for suspension of scholarships and the right to represent the university in any way, whether it be in athletics, music, student government or any other activity, throughout his stay at the university.

Under the revised code, passed by referendum during the last session of last year, a student has been the privilege of participation only for the duration of time specifically stated by the court in his sentence.

The five students were convicted last December before the new code went into effect. They were suspended from school at that time, but returned this fall without extra-curricular privileges.

The court sees no approval of the appeals to the faculty review committee, a board which must approve all honor court actions.

The students were interviewed by Chief Justice Barbara Burkhardt prior to their appearance before the court. A remarkable difference was noted in several of them. Miss Burkhardt said, "they even seemed to be a little thankful that they had had the opportunity to learn this lesson."

One of the students, Miss Burkhardt reported, said as he left the room at the close of the hearing, "The last time I left this room I couldn't speak. I felt as bad.

This time I'd like to say thank you."

The chief justice remarked after the session that "although these students did suffer from their actions each one thanked us in turn for the lesson he had learned."

"I felt that these students are among the strongest supporters of our honor system today," she said.

Delta Zetas' Float Burned

Delta Zeta's Homecoming float, Pool There Goes YPI, went poof! itself at three last Saturday morning.

Several DZ's were about to turn in when the sorority fire marshall, Polly Heyward, happened to glance out the window and see three unidentified boys setting fire to their huge blue bottle of "stop-em", mounted with a dressed cut table, on a paper-covered truck.

Miss Heyward, Peary Wilson, and Jamie Connor dashed out to their flaming float, and, aided by two boys who happened to be passing by, put out the fire with a near-by hose.

Lit in three places, the fire did much damage to the truck the float was mounted upon, and the DZ's estimate the necessary repairs at $50.

The group's spokesman, Senior Betty Jo Bush, said the sorority had "no idea who might have done it."

Community Theatre Offers 2nd Show

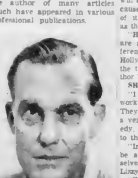
Tryouts for Caesar and Cleopatra, the second community production of the speech department, will be held Wednesday, Nov. 6 and Thursday, Nov. 7 at 4 and 7 p.m.

According to Dr. James Brock director of the University Theatre, tryouts will be held in Augusta Conradi Theater.

The casting for the romantic comedy by George Bernard Shaw will include 32 speaking parts, including the part of a ten year old boy. The play includes seven scenes and will be directed by Brock assisted by Miss Beverly Hooper.

Hunt To Discuss Language Approach At 4 P.M. 'Hour'

A new approach to the study of the English language will be discussed at the English Coffee Hour at 4 p.m. this afternoon at the Westminster House.



Dr. Kelloca Hunt, professor of English at FSU will outline the new structural grammatical analysis of English, and compare it to the traditional analysis which has been used for more than a century. His talk will be of special interest to teachers of English from the elementary grades through high school, and to those interested in entering the profession.

A new approach to the language has been growing in the past decade," Dr. Hunt said, and in the past five years many professional journals have publish the articles advocating the structural analysis. Many authorities believe students will benefit from a new type of study of grammar," he added.

Dr. Hunt will be introduced by Dr. Hudson Rogers, chairman of the weekly coffee hours, which are open to the public without charge.

A native of Iowa, Dr. Hunt received both the MA and Ph. D. degrees from the University of Iowa. He came to FSU in 1947 from San Francisco State College. Before serving as a lieutenant with the U.S. Navy during World War II, he taught at the University of Toledo.

He has written book reviews for the English Journal, and is the author of many articles which have appeared in various professional publications.

COFFEE HOUR SPEAKER is Dr. Kelloca Hunt who will speak to the weekly English gathering this afternoon.

'Ugly Woman' Parade Today

Alpha Phi Omega, national service fraternity, is having a new twist to their annual "ugly man" contest.

Instead of choosing the "ugliest man" on campus, they are sponsoring the contest to choose the "ugliest woman."

All fraternities, sororities, residence halls, and other campus organizations have been urged to help by sponsoring their "ugliest" finds.

The festivities will begin at 2:30, November 1, with a parade through downtown Tallahassee and the FSU campus.

Votes for the "ugliest" among the candidates will take place at the Student Center, Seminole Club, and Westcott from November 1 to 8.

Votes will cost 1 cent apiece with 5 dollars counting as 1000 votes. All proceeds from the contest will go into a scholarship fund.

SCHOOL SPORTS DAY SLATED TOMORROW

From the crack of the softball bat to the ring of horseshoes, the annual High School Sports Day will offer another full day of sports activities here tomorrow.

Approximately 225 girl students are expected from the surrounding schools," said Dr. Janet Well, faculty advisor for the affair.

The two-fold purpose of this day is to offer a service to the surrounding schools and give practical experience to physical education majors.

According to Dr. Katherine Montgomery, head of the Department of Physical Education, the emphasis is placed on skill and enjoyment, not winning.

Schools participating will be Florida High, Madison, Quincy, Greensboro, Carrabelle, Perry, Blountstown, and Havana.

All rules conform to the standard of the National Section of Girls' and Women's Sports To clarify the new 1957 volleyball rules, a special volleyball clinic and movie will be held during the afternoon.

All physical education majors, who are not presently interning, will work under one of the following committee heads: Jo Tipton, program and awards; Bonnie Knowles, first aid; Jo Daniels, name tags; Connie Yeaton, officials; Marie Rodeheiser, registration; Melene Jonnson, equipment; Jeanne Connolly, hostess; Jo Lilliston, decorations; Betty Harrell, clean up, and Cappy Archibald, social program.

A movie on physical education at Florida State University is currently being shown by the Physical Education Department under Dr. Montgomery.

The Case For NSA

Ths unfavorable report on the National Student Association from Student Body President Arnold Greenfield has probably dealt ths final blow to this university's membership in the organization.

STUDENT government's debate on NSA for the past four years or so has always weighed heavily on the negative side, though arguments have been weak and unwarranted. Of three reports given to Senate on joining the group, only the last presented an acceptable argument against it: that our philosophy of atudent government differs from NSA s

Previously, the points against joining added up the fact that the NSA basic po[illegible] declaration includes statements opposed to discrimination because of race in education and in fraternity and sororities This provoked labelling ths organization "communistic," which it most certainly is not.

WHAT IS NSA? From what we can ascertain from the group's own publications and propaganda and from campus visitors, or our own representatives to the annual NSA Congress, this is what it is.

The National Student Association was created to serve the need for a representative intercollegiate organization designed to serve ths American student community, and to promote student interests and welfare.

A FEW OF NSA s aims and purposes, as outlined in its constitution are, to maintain academic freedom, stimulate and improve democratic student government, develop better educational standards, improve student welfare and promote international understanding.

Its membership is composed of over 300 colleges, universities, junior colleges, normal schools, or technical schools. Its financial aid is received by dues paying members, through projects and publications, and through special grants

THERE ARE three levels of NSA activity: national, regional and campus of which student government is the instrument of communication. Four national commissions carry on programs in student affairs, educational affairs, international affairs and student government

Ths first is concerned with the eatra-curricular life Information on cultural projects such as the symphony forum, speakers bureaus, etc are fields in which it operates.

Course evaluation, student-faculty relations, and curriculum development form an important part of the Educational Affairs Commission s work. In this category are projects such as a book-exchange program, campus chest programs, and a subcommission seeking to foster effectiva participation in laws affecting the student (i.e. 18 year old vote, federal aid to education.)

THE International Affairs program sponsors a foreign student hospitality program in the U.S and works to increase the number of scholarships available for study abroad and exahanges problems with students in other countries

These are only a few of the functions of NSA. It is the most representative national student organization in tha U.S., and yet, member schools do not have to adhere to NSA policy

Perhaps, as the latest report argues, NSA does push the discussion of normal student government problems into the background at the Congress, but through the four commissions just mentioned they consider many matters which we execute here such as the speakers bureau and campus chest.

SURELY, there is no reason for FSU to stick its head in the sand and play ostrich when a subject out of the realm of Westcott gate is mentioned The ideals of NSA are worthwhile and we belisve would be beneficial to FSU

The President recommended that FSU increase its number of observers to the Congress to two, and admits "some of the speakers and discussions are truly value laden" If the Congress is worthy enough of our attendance, then it should be beneficial to join. Not to do so is a sham.

ALTHOUGH NSA's philosophy of student government is perhaps different than the present one, that very fact might stimulate more controversy in campus government. It might even stimulate interest in forming another campus political party to compete with the present ones. With real issues at stake, instead of merely existing to get candidates elected, there could evolve a bonafide two-party system.

The national and international problems with which NSA deals directly affect students Even if it accomplishes nothing concrete in the way of making laws, it is voice of U.S students. If ours are minority opinions, then we should participate in order that we may be heard.

Membership in NSA cannot do anything but improve an already good student government.

Sammy Ideal Man For Mascot Job

By ART ALBRECHT

At last Friday's Pow Wow, two tired-looking nags mounted by two indescribable "indians" made their entry into Doak Campbell stadium heralded by the words of head cheerleader Jim Julian: "If you in the student body are willing, this will become a new FSU tradition."

FROM THE sound of the eheers and applause it seemed the studeot body was willing. So the following day Tooto, Osceola and the two nags re-entered the stadium to welcome the Fighting Seminoles and Homecoming visitors. Tradition bad been atarted!

Well bere's one small dissenting voice. Let's give tbe horses back to the wagoo they came from aod permanently retire the idea

THE THOUGHT may be good but the whole appearance was drab The Indians may have beeo wearing authentic Seminole costumes, although I doubt it, but they looked more like refugees from a Sam Katzman western. Granted they'll probably learo to stay upright oo the horses, however, there are more important things involved

Doak Campbell stadium, contrary to some points of view is oot Hialeah Park or even a horse staole According to unconfirmed reports, it's a football field. As sucb, the presence of two horses evao has psychological implications

IN LEADING the team onto the field, their size tends to make the players look smaller io the eyes of tbe opposition Or course this had no terrible consequences in the VPI game but some other team just might get their egos inflated and romp all over us when they size-up our Little football players running aloogside those giant horses

There's another serious [illegible] to baving horses trot [illegible] I say tramp all over the [illegible] Tha Board of Publications [illegible] last year that writers can [illegible] tioo this, but one barefooted [illegible]ternity mao pulling a float [illegible]ing Pow Wow required a [illegible] bath after the show E[illegible] said!

Commemorate Hungarian Tragedy

Dear Editor:

I am taking the opportunity to use the Flambeau as an outlet for an open letter to the students of our University about a matter which I feel ought to concern us all. I hope no one will object to my taking such action as I am speaking not necessarily as Student Body President, but rather as an interested party.

EVERY DAY many letters come into the Student Government office, these may make requests, express complaints advertise show business productions, and an almost infinite variety of other things. All of these receive what we bope is adequate consideration—none of them has ever previously prompted me to write a letter to the students as I am now doing.

However, the other day Dean Oglesby forwarded me a letter and circular which I feel is of importance to all of us. It included an account of the Hungarian revolution written by a student at the University of Pennsylvania who had a fine chance to observe the proceedings—it seems that he was one of the "freedom fighters" The letter itself was from The Christianform, a Washington, D.C., publication and the story of the fighting was from the student newspaper at Pennsylvania.

SIMILAR LETTERS were sent to 360 colleges and universities throughout the United States. The request is made of all these institutions of higher learning to observe and commemorate one of the great tragedies of our times — the Russian intervention in Hungary, which pitted guns and tanks against a people's desire to be free This day of sadness was November 4 1956. Next Monday will be the first anniversary

The Christianform suggests a period of silence, a rifle salute, and the sounding of taps at our next Saturday football game. We won't have another game until after November 4 so what I am suggesting is this: that next Monday each of us observe a moment of silence within ourselves Just some time during the day take a few seconds to remind yourself that you are a human being who affirms the dignity and worth of the individual, as did those brave souls in Budapest who stood up to bullets and told the world, both Communist and free, "Yes, we still are men!" This in my humble opinion needs to be said once in a while

Sincerely yours,
ARNOLD GREENFIELD

Mozart To Menotti On Program

By LOWELL RODDENBERRY

Miss Betty Jane Grimm, contralto, will appear in recital this evening at 8 15 in Opperman Music Hall. Her name needs no introduction to the campus and her accomplishments are many and outstanding

THE GOOD LORD must have treasured low voices because He created so few of them Pardon the misquotation out a platitude by any other name is still a platitude.

Audiences treasure the low voice as well Their operatic repertoire may be small, but what is available is calculated to please. You very rarely find sweet, innocuous roles for the alto They afford relief from the lovesick tenors and consumptive sopranos While they may never get their man they do capture the listener.

THIS EVENING'S program ranges from Mozart to Menotti It has a popular appeal without being condescending as are all the concerts Miss Grimm presents

While she is primarily a classical musician, who can forget her thoroughly professional appearance as Bloody Mary in last year's production of South Pacific? The ovation she won then only bears out our thesis that romantic leads may get top billing, but it's the character roles that stop the show

A SINGER'S opening group is usually selected with great care for this is the singer's chance to get over nerves and warm up vocal chords

It is traditional for a vocal recital to begin with early 18th century songs in Italian not only because they're imminently singable but so that late comers don't actually miss anything Of course that is a gross misconception, for such music represents some of the greatest literature in the vocal repertoire

OPENING THE first group is the aria "Verdi Pratie" (Verdant Meadows) from the very little known opera "Alcina" by Handel The aria is of such great worth that it has survived out of context of "Alcina"

The following aria Perogolesi's "Stabat Mater" represents some of the lesser pages from the score However the triviality of a composer of the stature of Perogolesi would be another composer's masterpiece

CLOSING THE first group is a recitative and rondo of Mozart. Such works are intended for concert performance and belong to no opera Mozart was frequently called upon to write airs for concerts and for insertion in operas of other composers.

The following German group should prove particularly grateful listening All three are among the most popular lieder of Schubert and Brahms

SCHUBERT'S ehoice of texts exhibits rather catholic taste. The potentialities of a poem for music governed his selection rather than an eacellence of quality. The inexhaustible lyricism and imagery of his songs capture the vary essence of poetry

"Von ewiger Liebe" (Love is Forever) of Brahms closes this group This song is considerably longer than the two of Schubert and is rapturously eloquent music

TRANSLATIONS are actually unnecessary for German lieder The title gives the clue to a song's meaning and from there it is in the realm of absolute music. (That should be qualified by saying that this receiver doesn't particularly like poetry from the romantic period and that musical line is the most important thing to him)

On the basis of one aria, Francesco Rossi's name is known today It is "Ah! Rendemi" (Ah, give my heart to me) from the opera "Mitrane". Another work is available in manuscript but since we're not familiar with ths work and nothing else of Rossi's is extant, we well have to forbear a display of erudition

THE REST of tha program is in English and will speak for itself

Miss Grimm's accompanist is Mary Winslow It would be more fitting to say ensemble partner rather than accompanist for past collaboration has been just that . . a joint enterprise.

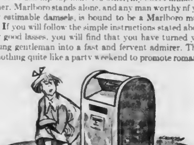
THE PARTY WEEK END: ITS CAUSE AND CURE

With the season of party weekends almost upon us, my mail of late has been flooded with queries from young inmates of women's colleges wishing to know how one conducts one's self when one has invited a young gentleman for a weekend. This morning, for example, there were more than 30,000 letters, each containing a lock of hair. I gave the hair to a bombsight maker and the lanolin to a dry sheep of my acquaintance and I turned instantly to the question: How should a young lady deport herself when she has asked a young gentleman to be her guest at a party weekend?



Well, my dear girls, the first thing to remember is that your young gentleman is far from home and frightened. Put him at his ease. You might, for instance, surprise him by having his mother sitting in a rocker on the station platform when he gets off the train.

Next, what kind of corsage should you send your young gentleman? Well, my beloved maidens, orchids are always acceptable.

If you find, my esteemed fillies, that your local florist has run out of stock, do not be dismayed. Make a corsage out of paper. But pick good, stiff, durable paper—twenty dollar bills, for example.

Remember at all times, my fond wenches, to show your young gentleman courtesy and consideration. Open doors for him, walk on the traffic side of the path, assist him to the punch bowl, zip his parka, light his Marlboros. (What, you ask, if he doesn't smoke Marlboros? Ridiculous, my precious nymphs! Of course, he smokes Marlboros! Don't you? Don't I? Doesn't everybody who knows a hawk from a handsaw? What other cigarette gives you such a lot to like? Such filter? Such flavor? Such flip-top box? No other, my sweet minxes, no other. Marlboro stands alone, and any man worthy of you, my estimable damsels, is bound to be a Marlboro man.)

If you will follow the simple instructions stated above, my good lasses, you will find that you have turned your young gentleman into a fast and fervent admirer. There is nothing quite like a party weekend to promote romance.

Serafina sat Anxiously by the mailbox...

I am in mind of a party weekend some years ago at Miss Pomfritt's Seminary for Genteel Chicks in West Linotype, Ohio. Serafina Sigafoos, a sophomore at this institution, majoring in napkin folding, sent an invitation to a young man named Fafnir Valve, a junior at the Joyce Kilmer School of Forestry, majoring in sap and boles.

Anyhow, Serafina sent an invitation to Fafnir, and he came, and she showered him with kindness and cuff links, and then he went away, and Serafina sat anxiously by the mailbox, wondering whether she would ever hear from him again. Sure enough, two weeks later she got a letter: "Dear Serafina, Can you let me have fifty bucks? Yours, Fafnir."

Whimpering with ecstacy, she ran to the bank and withdrew the money and mailed it to him. From then on, she got the same request every week, and as a result, she became very well acquainted with Ralph T. Involute, teller of the West Linotype Bank and Trust Co., and their friendship ripened into love, and today they are happily married and live in Stamen, Oregon, where Ralph is in the extruded molasses game and Serafina is a hydrant.

Our Honor Is Good

TO THE EDITOR:

In answer to Karl B Nelson's letter concerning the leniency of our girl's rules and the weakness in our Honor System, I would like to point out an incident to him

Last Tuesday, Senior Investiture was held in Westcott Auditorium. Many students attending were carrying books, pocketbooks, etc that were not becoming to our black robes and Mortarboards so all these items were left scattered about Westcott steps and green We entered the auditorium at 8 and returned an hour later to find all our belongings as they were left.

Karl, this points out a growing freedom and honor system to me It is a fine thing to leave possessions about and be able to find them at a later time in the same place.

Please don't judge our system too quickly for it is effective when you work with it rather than against it. Try it

Sincerely,
A GRADUATING SENIOR

TO THE EDITOR:

In the last issue of the Flambeau there was a letter calling for a campus group that would enable thinking people to exchange views on meaningful issues. I would like to take this opportunity to introduce the readers of this column to The Liberal Religious Youth The L. R. Y. is a campus group which meets at 7 p m on Sunday evenings and discusses pertinent topics in relation to the basic assumptions of religion and ethics.

This Sunday evening at 7 p m we will meet in the Student Center Trophy Room Our program will include a talk by Dr George Yost on his impressions from his recent travels in Syria, as well as a question and discussion period. Our meetings are open to all students who share our interest in critical and creative discussions.

We Want Dates

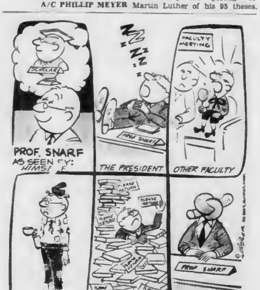
TO THE EDITOR:

It has been brought to [illegible]y attention, some of the [illegible] on your campus have be[illegible]e concerned with the [illegible] of dates. Whether this [illegible] caused by the minority [illegible]men on your campus or a defficiency in their interest in women, I do not know.

Coming from a large campus (University of Illinois) I find this situation rather hard to comprehend As a matter of fact, at the University of Illinois the opposite situation was prevalent, i.e. 3.5 men to women.

At the present time I am a cadet at Graham Air Base, Marianna Where it seems wa men have a similar extreme situation, a large number of men and almost no women in the surrounding area I believs the ratio is near 25 to 1.

Of course your, and our situations could be alleviated simply by our driving to Tallahassee for the weekend. But it seems quite improper to simply arrive in town and ask for a date



I will appreciate any suggestions from the women at Florida State University which would help remedy this undesirabla condition.

Sincerely,
A/C PHILLIP MEYER

PICKARD SAY "AYE" TO "I". Bobby Renn hands off to Fred Pickard as c close-up shot shows the "I" formation in action. Others in the picture include fullback Bob Nellums (85) and halfback Stan Dobosz (27) as they prepare to open up a hole against VPI.

Schedule Break At Right Time

Florida State's Seminole football squad has the weekend off as they prepare for their November 8 contest with the University of Miami's Hurricanes.

The break in the schedule came at the right time according to head football coach Tom Nugent.

Seminole forces came out of the VPI game with four injured starters who more than likely would not have been able to play in top shape if there was a game this weekend.

FOUR INJURIES

Those injured were tackle Jerry Graham, a bad hip; fullback Bob Nellums sustained a leg injury; halfback Stan Dobosz who tied for "Back of the Week" honors had his arm injured in the Tech contest, and tackle Bill Masselman injured his neck.

Bob Fountain who has been out with the flu is still sidelined, but may be ready for the Miami game.

Commenting on the week off, Nugent said, "It's a fine opportunity to get back in shape and I would have made it rough if we had to play without the services of those injured players."

TEAM IMPROVING

Nugent continued, "the team is improving, but we'll be up against a real power in Miami. They showed that last week when they walloped Kansas."

"Miami has fine personnel, but they just haven't gotten in gear like in previous years."

According to Nugent, practice for the 'Canes has been real spirited. The Seminoles' head mentor does not plan any changes for Miami, but there is a possibility that George Beyer may start the Miami game based on his fine performance in the VPI contest.

Miami Ticket Sale Monday

Student tickets for the Miami game will go on sale Monday at 1 p.m. at the Westcott ticket office and the athletic business office at the men's gym.

Any group, such as fraternities, sororities, church groups, dorms, etc., with 20 or more tickets should get their seats at the athletic business office says Ed Cubbon, business manager.

Ticket number 12 for students will be required and 13 for a guest ticket and two dollars.

Tickets may be had up to 4 p.m. Thursday at Westcott, and those without seats may get them at the athletic business office until Friday at 3 p.m.

After that time they may be had at the stadium.

"No one will be turned away for the game," said Cubbon.

SAE Protests Swim Meet; Basketball At Halfway Point

Informed sources have revealed that SAE has filed formal protest against PDT's use of an ineligible diver in the 1957 Intramural swimming meet.

The intramural office has appointed a board composed of nonpartisan members of the Intramural Sports Ass'n. to investigate the protest. Convening date for the board is undisclosed at the time.

PDT edged out SAE by one point in the meet and if they are found in default, SAE will gain the swimming crown.

Table Tennis and Horseshoe entries must be filed with the intramurals office by 5:00 p.m. November 4. Entry blanks will not be sent through the mail and team representatives must pick them up in the Intramural office.

Miami, the Seminoles next opponent, is rated a three touchdown favorite over Villanova in the Orenge Bowl tonight. The Hurricanes now have a 2-2-1 record, with wins over Baylor and Kansas

The Canes lost to Houston and North Carolina. The Wolfpack from North Carolina State, which beat the Tribe, 7-0, tied the Miami squad 0-0.

Villanova carries a 3-4 record into the game. One of the Wild cat wins was over FSU, 21-7.

Frosh Gridders Face Southerners

With Florida State's varsity team idle this weekend, attention turns to the baby sippi Southern's 'B' team at Panama City tomorrow.

FSU's freshman team will be placing a two year unbeaten record on the line and Southern doesn't promise to be any push-over.

In last year's game with the Southerners, Florida State pulled the game out of the fire with only two minutes remaining to hand them their only loss of the season.

Thus far this season, FSU has outscored the opposition 107 points to 12 in three games South Carolina has been the only team to crack the Seminole defense

526 YDS. RUSHING

On the ground, the Seminoles have amassed 526 yards for the three games played, plus 163 yards via the air for a total of 1122 yards.

The power and the key to Seminole touchdowns, 17 so far stems from fullback Jim Calhoun from Winslow, Arizona He has scored six touchdowns in 45 carries for a total of 255 yards.

Aiding Calhoun in the backfield are halfbacks Bud Whitehead with 196 yards and three touchdowns and George Versprille with 143 yards and three touchdowns.

In the passing department the Seminoles have failed to cross the double marker but have completed 14 of 21 attempts.

Quarterback Bobby Conrad of Marianna has hit for 11 of the 14 passes completed for the Seminoles and leads the team in extra point attempts with four for eight.

INJURIES

In the South Carolina game the Seminoles had several men injured, including starting center Dan Worthington, and halfback Versprille

Another injured player is second unit quarterback Carl Meyer of Melbourne, who received a broken finger in scrimmages after the South Georgia game and may not see action the rest of the season.

Mississippi Southern had two starters on the doubtful list for his clash last Saturday with Southwest Mississippi But both guard Wilford Sconiers and right halfback Ralph Taylor are expected to play against Florida State.

Tally-Ho Photog Has Shot Presidents Dating To Taft

By MARCI SEITZ

Photographing presidents dating back to William Howard Taft as well as other national notable is part of the history of Tally-Ho's head photographer J. William Hawes.

This is Hawes' second year as photographer at Florida State University. He made pictures for the Tally-Ha last year under Cosona Studios of New York, and the book was rated first class, coming close to All American.

Hawes who is now 72, started in photography at 13 years old, when some photographers were still using the "wet plate" process.

45 YEARS

For 45 years Hawes has been traveling all over the country photographing men for newspaper and magazine publication. A few years back, Kodak company published in their yearbook a three-page spread on Hawes, featuring his life story complete with pictures.

Upon his arrival here Hawes had just completed an air circuit of the United States, from New York to Miami; San Francisco, Portland, Seattle, and Tallahassee taking pictures in each city of nationally known men.

When asked if he had ever photographed any Governors, Hawes replied, "I can't begin to count them."

Photography has been in the family a long time according to Hawes. One of his forebears, Josiah Johnson Hawes, was the first practicing portrait photographer in America and made daguerreotypes of Daniel Webster, Jenny Lind, Rufus Choate, Baron Bethschild, John Quincy Adams, and others in the post-civil war era.

NO STRANGER

Hawes is to attribute to college students. Two grandsons have already graduated from Cornell and Georgetown University, but neither one have chosen to follow in their grandfather's footsteps.

According to Hawes one of the reasons for his successful career has been his remarkably good health. "The only thing I've ever had," said Hawes, "was a good case of the measles when I was four."

Students Can View Sputnik With Projector

Sputnik has "arrived" at F.S.U. The influence of Russia's man made moon has reached the University planetarium, in the form of a newly-purchased sputlite projector.

The projector, demonstrated at a meeting of the Astronomy Club Wednesday night, will flash an image of a satellite across the planetarium's artificial "sky," right along with Venus, Mars, and the Big Dipper.

It can be adjusted to the orbit of any man-made moon, whether it is Sputnik or the proposed United States version, scheduled to be launched sometime in March.

How do U. S. scientists plot Sputnik's orbit? And how will they plot the path of America's satellite? Paul Atkinson, vice president of the Astronomy Club, outlined the mechanics of "moon-watching" stations during Wednesday night's meeting.

Observers stationed behind special "monoscopes" will record the position of the satellite as it crosses a "meridian" line at the station, according to Atkinson.

They will then relay their information to Harvard scientists who will calculate where the "moon" will be at what time, so that other observers can pick it up with high-power telescopes.

Sputnik can only be viewed at dawn and dusk, explained Atkinson, because of its nearness to earth (about 520 miles). "But even then, it's almost impossible to see it, due to its small size," he concluded.

Atkinson also explained the mechanics of telescopes and their use in moon-watching at Wednesday's meeting held in 124 Science.

Debate Congress Underway Here

By NANCY HANNAFORD

Current controversies will be aired by over a hundred high school debaters in the state capitol building this week-end, at FSU's Ninth Annual Florida State High School Congress.

The delegates to this congress, which FSU is sponsoring in cooperation with Leon High School, are representing eighteen high schools, all members of the National Forensic League.

Registering yesterday afternoon and this morning, the student delegates and their faculty advisers attended a joint congress session in the capitol building at 8:30 this morning. During the meeting Dr. C. W. Edney welcomed them in behalf of FSU, Mr. Malcolm Lonadon for Leon High School, and Mr. Russell P. Handy for the Florida district of the National Forensic League.

ALL PARTICIPATE

All congressmen-representatives staying in Tallahassee will take part in three legislative sessions today and one tomorrow.

Each delegation has two representatives in the Senate and a number of participants in House A with it proportionate to its total student membership in the NFL.

Competing for best speaker and presiding officer awards, medals and a gavel in each of the three chambers, the high school students will debate forty-five current issues, ranging from compulsory membership in labor unions to national uniform divorce and marriage laws.

Nominating from a list of recommendations of debate coaches, each chamber will elect four house chairmen, one to preside at each legislative session.

STUDENTS INVITED

FSU students and faculty are invited to attend any of the four scheduled tri-cameral sessions, according to Dr. Gregg Phifer, head of forensics at FSU.

Legislative sessions, to be held in the capitol building, are scheduled for 9-11 this morning, 1-3:30 and 3:45-6:30 this afternoon, and 8:30-11:30 tomorrow morning.

After a 12:30 awards luncheon the congress will be adjourned.

Judging the sessions will be delegation faculty advisers and FSU graduate students.

Leon High School is furnishing pages and time-keepers.

Most of the students attending the congress were at one of three Florida district congresses, sponsored by the NFL, where bills to be presented at this weekend's state congress were evaluated.

In Speech Dept.

Six TV Courses Available Here

The Florida State University Speech Department is offering a complete television curriculum this year according to Dr. Ernest Bormann, assistant professor in the department.

Courses are being offered in introductory lighting, discussion, designing, camera control, makeup, and other television areas.

The television programs are designed as a service program, said Dr. Bormann, but the actual TV performances being educational in content is a service to the citizens of Tallahassee.

THREE STAGES

The program is set up in three stages. The community series is the experimental series, and the television series.

The community series is performed for students on campus and the admission is free. The Rainmaker was the first in this series.

Try-outs for the second community series production of the year will be held in the Annex Auditorium, Wednesday, Nov. 6 and Thursday, Nov. 7 at 4:00 and 7:00 p.m. according to Dr. James Brock, Director of the University Theatre.

The casting for Caesar and Cleopatra, a famous romantic comedy by G. B. Shaw, will include thirty-two speaking parts, including one part for a 10-year-old boy.

The play involves seven scenes and complete settings and will be directed by Dr. Brock, assisted by Miss Beverly Homer.

The settings will be designed by Mr. Charles Kramer and the costumes will be designed by Miss Patricia Clift. Caesar and Cleopatra will be presented for four nights, December 13, 14, 16 and 17.

The experimental series is put on completely by the students, on campus and television and is for the purpose of gaining new ideas and giving the students experience.

WCTV SERIES

The television series is produced on station WCTV in Tallahassee. Four productions were just completed for station WCTV. "Behind the Scenes" was the title for the series explaining how a television production is prepared.

The Speech Department is also planning to present an experimental television program with all musicians drawn completely from the university, Dr. Bormann said. The show will be produced with dance, student choreography, and student stage crews.

Last summer the department presented three educational television shows on parliamentary procedure.

Young Democrats Schedule Elections

Students interested in joining the Young Democrats Club may do so when the group meets for the election of officers and discussion of policy next Tuesday in Longmire.

"To familiarize the student body with platform variations and general policy of the Democratic Party is the object of the organization," said Sam Skoglund, president of the club.

Last year the Young Democrats worked with state and local Democratic organizations during elections. They also were challenged by the Young Republicans and accepted this challenge, but no date was ever set for the debate proposed.

During the coming week a publicity campaign will be used to acquaint students with the club and its work. One of their objects for this year is to stimulate interest in Democratic policies and politics in general even though it is not an election year.

"Only by having an informed young populace can we choose the leaders we want to represent us," added Skoglund.

Elston Roady is sponsor of the club.

No Classes 8-2 Armistice Day

Classes will not meet between 8 a.m. and 2 p.m. Monday in observance of Armistice Day.

Charles Wilson, registrar released this information and the statement that an absence from a class scheduled for 2 p.m. or later that afternoon would be excused as well, but the student would not be penalized for the absence of 1 of the semester credit for the course, as is the usual practice following holidays.

Tally-Ho Proofs Should Be Returned

Tally-Ho proofs should be returned promptly to insure appearance of pictures in the 1958 yearbook, Tally-Ho Editor Jerry Lee Wilson announced.

Those students who have missed picture appointments can schedule another appointment by calling 74461 between 4 and 5 weekday afternoons.

ROTC CADETS MARCH FOR DISTRICT GENERAL

Brigadier General Lyal C. Metheny will be on the Florida State University campus Thursday to inspect special ROTC training drills between noon and 2 p.m.

Acting as Metheny's aide will be General of the United State Military District of Florida, General Metheny will also attend drills at Florida A&M this weekend.

He will serve as key speaker for Tallahassee's Rotary Club on Wednesday and for Jacksonville on Thursday.

Then World War II Methemy was general staff assistant to the European Theater of Operations and to the Army General Staff in Washington, D.C. In 1945 he served primarily becoming the United States delegate to the Five Power Pact in 1946.

Later he was appointed to the North Atlantic Treaty Plan Section of the Joint American Advisory Group in London, England.

After serving as the first U.S. national military representative to the Supreme Allied Powers Headquarters in Paris, Metheny graduated from the Army War College in 1953, and became military assistant to the Undersecretary of the Army.

Before coming to Florida, he was chief of co-ordinate group for the top level Army-Navy program in the Office of Chief of Staff.

Three History Profs Read At Convention

Three members of the Florida State University History Department will read papers at the annual meeting of Southern Historical Association in Houston, Texas, November 7-9.

Dr. Earl R. Beck, associate professor in the department, will read his paper on "The Southern Role in Foreign Policy on the Eve of the Civil War."

Odeneal Authors Volleyball Article

William T. Odeneal, assistant professor of men's physical education at the University, has written in the November issue of the Journal of the American Association for Health, Physical Education and Recreation

The article, which is entitled "Teamwork in Volleyball," describes the game of volleyball as primarily a team game and points out many instances of how team work in the game helps to develop good sportsmanship.

The many illustrations given according to Carl Troxler, executive secretary of the association, apply not only to volleyball, but in any team sport where one play er's action is dependent on another player.

Odeneal, who is now serving as golf coach, was for several years the coach of FSU's volleyball team, now discontinued as a varsity sport. During his tenure his teams won two national volleyball championships.

Crowds View New Version Of 'Rainmaker'

Emphasizing human comedy more than farcical laughs, the Speech Department's production of Richard Nash's "The Rainmaker" has played to almost capacity crowds the first three nights of its four-night run in Conrad's Theater.

A small preview performance of the play was held Thursday night before an invited audience of Tallahasseans, who afterward gave criticisms on the performance.

REACHED PEAK

A successful innovation in theater programming, this advance preview was responsible for the fact that the actors reached their peak by opening night," according to Director Fallon.

The seven-member cast—Ethel Gifford, Craig Monroe, Bryson Rash, Patricia Allen Walker, Ron McCall and George Goldstein —gave "The Rainmaker" an interpretation that surpassed even that of both Hollywood and Broadway.

The Broadway production, playing for broad laughs, made Lorter Curry's unmarried sheltion almost ludicrous. Warm comedy became sophistication in the Florida production. Perhaps in answer to this interpretation, Arthur Nash recently published a forward in his play stating that "The Rainmaker" is essentially a romance.

VERSATILE

The movie version of the play had, of course, more versatility than any stage production could have. For instance, on what stage production could Burt Lancaster replace the Easter full-speed in a circle by tying the steering wheel to the door handle?

In addition, the Hollywood production emphasized Starbuck and his personal problem more than the situation of the Curry family. Perhaps because of this Playwright Nash changed the script for the benefit of the play.

FSU audiences saw the revised play. In the Broadway production the opening sentence set-up over a gun between Starbuck and the sheriff, a scene that always seemed to lose audience sympathy for the rainmaker, who appeared to be a fool.

Director Fallon states, "The change is an excellent one and helped us to achieve our acuuber interpretation as far as the author's intentions were concerned."

Student Government Cabinet Is Announced

The Student Government Cabinet had previously adopted a policy of pushing for further trunk lines and the expansion of the Jennie Murphree type system to other dorms.

When Cavell presented the statement of policy to the university officials concerned at that time the statement, "Agreed to be in complete agreement with the cabinet's statement," and had been seeking the same kind of service on their own for some time.

Shaw, who handles all the university's business transactions, agreed readily to approve whatever expenditures are necessary when the requisitions are processed.

Lajole, who will be in charge of processing the applications, said that he expected the additional trunk lines within 30 days. The big holdup, he said, is the hesitancy of the telephone company at present to add further facilities on campus.

He added that he felt, upon proper application, that his estimate would prove correct on the time when they would be installed.

LINES LOADED

Under the present system, the trunk lines are overcrowded, making calling on and off campus difficult at times. The addition of such a system as is being considered for the women's dorms under the present arrangement would be virtually impossible.

Once the trunk lines are installed, the way will be open for Miss McCollum to begin extension of the Jennie system to other dorms.

One drawback from the administrative end would be the necessity of hiring more highly trained personnel to operate the switchboards, as they would differ totally from the present system of one incoming telephone per dormitory.

Miss McCollum, however, said that she thought that difficulty could be removed without a great deal of administrative difficulty. The problem could be helped not only by the hiring of additional people, but by the training of present available personnel.

There is no information available on how much time will elapse after the addition of the trunk lines until the women's dorms will receive the new systems.

Miss McCollum indicated, however, that application will be made as soon as the trunk lines are in.

Greenfield said that he felt this was one of the most constructive areas in which student government's influence has been felt.

New Telephone Trunk Lines Expected Here In 30 Days

Named 'Best Vocal Group' By Downbeat

The Four Freshmen, winners of the Downbeat Magazine "Best Vocal Group" poll for the past four years, will appear in Westcott Auditorium for two shows Wednesday, Nov. 13.

The group is being sponsored by Alpha Tau Omega fraternity with all proceeds going to the annual Campus Chest drive. One show will begin at 7 p.m., the other at 8:45 p.m.

Fraternity spokesman Ray Reinhardt announced this week that tickets for the performances are now on sale in the Westcott Ticket Office at $1 apiece.

The vocal group has not only won the Downbeat poll for the last four years, but has been awarded the Metronome Magazine "Best Vocal Group" award for the past three years.

They have also the field in the Billboard and United Press Dan Dockery's Poll, and won the coveted Playboy Magazine Jazz Poll as well.

BARBER SHOP START

They became a vocal group at the Arthur Jordan Conservatory in Indianapolis in 1948 while they were in their freshman year. Their sound started with a distinct barber shop flavor, but after a few months of literally "singing for their supper" they developed the idea of trying in get a free-voice sound with only four voices.

The idea was polished and perfected until the group, complete with instruments, was playing nearly nightly around the mid-West.

Stan Kenton, who recently appeared on the FSU campus, was the actual discoverer of the outfit. He heard them one night in 1950 in Dayton, Ohio, sent them to Hollywood, signed them to a Capitol recording contract, and gave them the push that propelled them to stardom.

Since 1955, and their highly successful single of "Day by Day," the Four Freshmen have had a succession of hits, including "Graduation Day," "Mood Indigo," and topped by their albums, "Four Freshmen and Five Saxes" and "Four Freshmen and Five Trumpets."

Coupled with their recording activities, they have appearances in "Rich, Young and Pretty," the Perry Como Television Show, numerous guest spots on other network TV shows, and outstanding successes in personal appearances in colleges and ballrooms throughout the country.

SELF-ACCOMPLISHED

A unique feature of their performance is the fact that they provide their own instrumental accompaniment—a fact that permits them almost unlimited versatility in concert performances.

Each member of the group is an outstanding instrumentalist in his own right, appealing in audience viewing as well as listening.

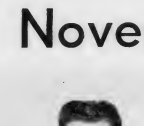
Ross Barbour handles all the introductions and baritone voice and plays drums and trumpet. Ken Albers, the bass voice in the group, plays trumpet, valve trombone and is featured solo-wise both vocally and instrumentally.

Flanigan and the two Barbours are original members of the group, and all of them Indiana. Albers, who replaced Ken Errair in the Freshmen in April, 1956, is from New Jersey.

Voting Proceeding For 'Ugly Woman'



Voting for the second annual Miss McCollum contest will end Friday, with the crowning of the winner at the dance to be held at a dance in the Suwannee Room.

Voting for the "ugliest" among the candidates will be conducted by the Student Center, Seminole Club, and Westcott.

Votes cast one cent apiece with five dollars counting as 1,000 votes. All proceeds from the contest will go into a special scholarship fund.

All fraternities, sororities, residence halls, and other campus organizations have been urged to help by sponsoring their "ugliest" funds.

The contest is sponsored by Alpha Phi Omega, national service fraternity, which in past years has sponsored an "ugly man" contest. This contest has been discontinued this year in favor of the "ugly woman."

THE FOUR FRESHMEN, nationally known song group which will appear here November 13, for two concerts.

Symphony Opens 'Susannah' Folk Hit Included In Concert

Opening its 31st season last night, the Florida State University Symphony presented a concert in Westcott Auditorium which included a selection from Carlisle Floyd's hit opera, "Susannah."

Under the direction of Robert Sedore of the School of Music, the symphony of 75 members, including students, faculty and staff, has the personalities this year of being the finest organization in the university's history, according to some observers.

The concert included the folk song era "Bye" were found in Susannah." This opera, written by faculty member Floyd of the school, got rave reviews in 1955 when it was presented a year ago by the New York opera Co. Its premiere was on the campus of FSU two and one-half years ago.

The second and feature presents in the School of Music were featured in the concert. They were Ann Kaup, as soprano, Calvin Hasbrouck of Tallahassee, trumpet, Dolores Conn of Tampa, piano, and Beverly Brown of Atlanta, soprano.

Last night a program opened with the three-movement Concerto for Two Trumpets in D Major by Antonio Vivaldi; with Hasbrouck and Robert Braunagle on the trumpets.

Miss Conn was at the piano as the Symphony performed Beethoven's Concerto No. 4 in G. Major, Op. 58, for Piano and Orchestra.

Following the intermission, the orchestra performed one movement of Rimski - Korsakov's "Scheherazade, a number from "Louise" by Gustave Charpentier and the folk song from Susannah, with Ann Kaup, student of Edith Kaup, as soprano.

Flambeau Not Obligated

The belief that the Flambeau is compelled or obligated to print every letter-to-the-editor sent to this desk is both capricious and invalid. While it has been our policy to print all letters meeting our standards of decency and good taste, this policy is within our power to regulate as we see fit.

IN THE PAST few issues, we have had to revise our policy somewhat; because of a limited amount of space we have had to limit the length of letters. We also will not print letters sent to us unsigned, although we will honor any legitimate request for anonymity. We feel it unjust for persons to hide their opinions behind such a cloak. If they want to express an opinion in public there should be no reason to hide their identity, unless the publication of their name will be detrimental to their job or position.

BY STANDARDS of decency and good taste, we reserve the right to decide upon the letters to be printed. Personal attacks upon individuals are libelous and therefore ruled out. This not only includes direct or per se attacks upon such as calling another person a slob, hog, nut, etc., but indirect or per quo attacks which more or less insinuate an insult on the person himself.

WE HOPE to keep our policy fair and consistent and keep our editorial page open for orderly debates on current or controversial issues. Stimulating the student body to participate in this type of debate accomplishes two things: widening interest in the paper and a furthering of the democratic process within the college community.

We welcome this type letters-to-the-editor column, but we reserve the right to select material for publication according to the standards and regulations stated above.

Bone Of Dissension

Again this year, Morrison's Food Services crops up as the focal point of campus dissension. The same company that has been operating the Student Center, Soda Shop, and the Seminole Club for its second year with much criticism and misunderstanding from the student body.

AN INSTITUTION serving such a large number of students is bound to suffer some complaints, but the situation has become so intense to those students that the student government Senate and Cabinet have launched investigations to gain improvements in the food services.

However, the student's appeals have seemed in vain and the management of Morrison's have only offered excuses, rationations, not a willingness to take the student's views seriously. Perhaps, this is because it is a commercial enterprise usually dealing with the general public and can better choose where they want to eat. Some students are restricted, though, to eating where it is most convenient and economical.

AS A profit-making organization, Morrison's should be just as interested in pleasing its student public as customers in regular restaurants. The main student complaints, it seems, are concerned with the cleanliness of the campus eating places, the quality of food served, the high prices, and the quantity served. Students just don't think they get their money's worth.

WHILE WE do not think all of these complaints are completely justified, there is no doubt a great deal of validity in the criticisms. Morrison's has its problems too; it contends with poor participation in the Seminole Club, overhead perhaps, and so forth. But the management has yet been unable to offer students any satisfaction.

It seems better relations between the food service and its student customers are badly needed. Any other business attempts to please its customers; why shouldn't they be regarded with as much importance.

WE SUGGEST that some type of mediation committee be set up composed of students, faculty members, and Morrison's management to discuss these problems and strive for improvement. We would also suggest that Morrison's take the initial step. It is only through understanding and willingness to cooperate that the situation can be alleviated.

If no satisfaction can be obtained, we would be in favor of giving the contract to operate the campus eating spots to another concern.

Honor System Needs Our Help

TO THE EDITOR:

I feel that the young lady ("I think it must have been a young lady) who answered Karl B. Nelson's letter last week somehow misunderstood the point he tried to convey.

All he stated was that in comparison with another school — honor system — "leaves much to be desired"... an unquestionable truth. I feel confident that poor Mr. Nelson has not worked against the honor system, as was implied in her letter, but by his intelligent observation is indeed striving for it; by assuring others to the fact that it is not all that it should be.

When I transferred here two years ago from a university whose code of individual honor exceeded even that of the college referred to in Mr. Nelson's letter, I was much interested by the grand statements and glorious claims made by speakers during the week of merit regulation in regard to FSU's honor system.

I had not expected such a perfected system at a school as large as ours and was therefore more greatly disappointed when I soon found conditions which did not live up to glib claims.

Why was it, I wondered, that within the scope of an honor system such as was "advertised", students during tests in large classes were stated a chair's distance from each other, while a professor "patrolled" the aisles. Then, if confirmed or not: I heard of a history exam conducted for several consecutive hours by members of the Honor Court were dispersed throughout the room as "spies". This is humor?

The truth is as Mr. Nelson has said, the system does much to be desired. Also, as he has pointed out, we should work with it not against it by recognizing its weaknesses and trying constantly to improve it.

I have great faith in the possibility of such a system. However, until it gains a greater degree of excellence, I suggest that we not describe it in glowing — but disillusioning — terms to our incoming freshmen and transfers.

Sincerely,
WESLEY W. CHESNUT

Horses Ridiculous

To The Editor:

It's about time someone said something about that ridiculous spectacle that went on the football field before the Pow-Wow Friday night and the VPI-FSU football game Saturday. I like horses and I like Indians but what I have seen in the way of horses and Indians A La FSU doesn't impress me. I don't even think the old West would accept our version. Stories have told it that Indians rode their ponies with perfect ease, but the poor fellow who was trying to live up to that line the other night was forced to read the "How to do it" part of the story book.

You have the right idea. Let's get us a mascot that boosts the school spirit and not as many of us fastidious students FSU has color and glamour so let's keep it.

Every time the Grand Growl seems to draw more and more FSU students in its gates and the students come back full of life and vigor looking for the same taste of the Pow-Wow, but what do we get? A couple of sway backed horses and two half biased Indians. Sammy sounds like the Sam Houston of Texas we need no more apart that has been lost for so long. The guys and dolls sitting in the stands will accept Sam if he just gets hard enough to help us win games and yell cheers. Horses can't do anything except mess up the football field and drop poor uninformed, hard working Indians on their heads. Let's get a mascot with real character as most of all mascots. Come-on FSU, let's go. Give SAMMY SEMINOLE all the time!

The type you are now reading is huge, the paper on which it is printed is yellow. This is my opinion but you probably won't share it simply because each of us see things differently from others.

I might say hearty of the individual, and even the comparisons must be personal since they draw upon the individual's own past experiences and accumulated tastes.

LITTLE MAN ON CAMPUS

The Critic's Corner

General Description Of Shows Given

By DALE JENSEN

It is a simple statement to say that at least one column a year is devoted to a general description of the many types of musical programs existing on our campus and an invitation to attend any and all of these.

THE TASK of writing this is not easy, for with a Music School as outstanding as this one, there is such an abundance of really exceptional performance that we cannot mention all the programs in one short column. So we shall start with those performing groups that present a series of concerts during the year.

Immediately at hand is the Symphony Orchestra. This group, directed by Robert Sidore, is composed entirely of students, but does have faculty and professionals who sit in. The orchestra has four regularly scheduled concerts per year, two of which present only music from the symphonic literature.

THE OTHER two include talented students who perform works for a solo instrument with orchestral accompaniment. Each night's program, to be reviewed in Friday's Flambeau, was the first of these, and featured two undergraduate and two graduate students. Also were carefully auditioned for this chance to perform.

Another instrumental group is the Symphonie Band directed by Manley R. Whiteomb. This band's first concert appearance will be the annual Christmas Concert, December 4, in Ruby Hall, as in the past, program some large-scale contemporary work as well as some of the familiar band repertoire. The Concert Band, under the direction of Robert Braunagel, plays music of a lighter, more popular vein than the Symphonie. First in January.

THE vocal side Betty Jane Grimm and George Booker are the conductors respectively, of the Women's Glee Club and the Collegians. These groups present their combined concerts of music from the Renaissance to the all-male and all-female choirs. Christmas will present a Christmas Concert, featuring the Ceremony of Carols, December 15, and the Collegians will sing Randall Thompson's Testament of Freedom (music from the writings of Thomas Jefferson) on a joint program with the Choral Union.

THE CHORAL Union, under Herman Gunter, is a massive organization of very large proportions that performs the great works for chorus, and in spring presents an Opera production. Last year they did Smetena's Bartered Bride a year before that, Carmen, the 26th of this month, in a joint connect with the Collegians they will do the Oratorio Elijah by Mendelssohn, Dec. and the two groups combined will perform Christmas's Psalm 86.

DR. WILEY Housewright recently returned from a Fulbright appointment year in Japan, is director of the select University Singers. Their first concert will be the 10th of December and will feature the Lamentation of Jeremiah by the Argentinian composer, Ginestera.

Finally, but by no means last, the Music Department has regular student recitals Tuesday afternoons at 3:30. Soloists and small ensembles make up these programs and take place in Opperman Music Hall.

BECAUSE of their importance, we tend to overlook little of these recitals. This is a mistake. Some of the very best performances of the year are given each Tuesday, and the program is always certain to have appeal for anyone who enjoys music.

All of these programs mentioned are free and open to the public. There are announcements made before each concert in the form of posters and also in the Flambeau and The Daily.

WE SUGGEST that you plan a moment the next time you are one of these, and listen to an, and requires no long attention. In addition, we suggest taking advantage of an opportunity that is not likely to be so easily found in other places. Let us place you an after your graduation.

Library Should Stay Open Sunday

By BUCKY CANON

Going through this year a Powwow, one can see the section which announces that the library is open Sunday evening. They're not.

Sunday evening. Yet, it shouldn't suffice anyone to stay in the library on a Sunday evening. They should get locked inside.

THE LIBRARY is open how over, on Friday evenings. This is admirable. But it should also be open on Sunday for the reason. Most of us would like to ace the library open both nights. But the university tells us that they have the money for this, and it can only be closed for one evening. So they open it Friday.

It is a well known fact on empus that Friday evening is a weekend evening—an evening for socializing. With no classes the following day, and a week's work behind him, the average student is not about to go into the library to study or do research. Especially when Friday is one of the two nights women can remain out until 12:30.

A REALISTIC student would rather go to the library Sunday evening with two nights of socializing behind him and a week of classes ahead of him.

So, if only one of the two nights can be picked, Sunday would be the student's choice.

Each year, under pressure from the students, the Student Senate, the library was finally opened Sunday afternoon. This year in the fall of 1958 "Daisy Chained" together for the second Sunday in succession. No book could be checked out, but students could and did study and cram on the reserves. It is better than not one of it.

Thus the proponents point to a few of the changes that are for the better, such as grammatical corrections, etc., and to say that the good outweighs the bad in the change is accordingly approve the while thing.

THE PROPONENTS in the proponents is Governor Collins Constitutional revision was one of the major planks in the election platform Thus he is obligated to fight for revision, but it appears that he has sacrificed principle to fulfill his words his platform promise.

In the regular legislative session he will submit the reapportionment proposal, the same measure that was incorporated in the proposed Constitutional revision. But he now claims that he is not "enthusiastically" support the proposed Constitution and recommend it to the people without reservation. However, even after saying that he contends that it does have weak points dictated by political "compromise."

THE RATHER meager arguments offered as to why we should accept obvious inadequacies and political hoodwinking in such a basic document as our constitution is that the Legislature won't give us any better. Now I submit to you the question, just who is better The Test Service Bureau notifies anyone who passes the test by mail about the fine — and the fact that they should notify students about the test before hand in the same way.

But help is on the way. Mr Charles Walker, registrar, and that he would consider the matter and try to find better methods of publicizing the test and finding a better date at which to have it for the benefit of future junior classes.

AS I KNOW Past Dept.: Motorists for years have crunched plained about the yellow pine in the Westcott plan at the entrance. The university cites nothing about it however, it says that scrapping it would mean that that spot is the exact center of the universe and have put the yellow post there to mark the spot for posterity.

The next complaint Dept. has been asked by many on campus Mrr: Mrr: puts a dozen kinds of menu in the Snack Shop. I give up, who don't they?

Constitutional Revision Shows Inadequacies

By L. A. HESTER

HOW all occasions of the year against democracy. Few arguments against the Constitutional revision of the Florida Legislature has for all intents and purpose answered the question. Florida's government and are these legislators using them where do they obtain such authority?

What if all bills down is that there are twenty-one of the thirty-eight senators of the Legislature that have proposed to equable reapportionment because of the inequities of power that would result.

THUS THEY have found any changes are dangerous trolling vote has discovered the rest of the Legislature is unwilling to conscientiously studying revision and as a result they have labeled any "real" Constitutional revision are heard and the rest always more or less in a state of apathy.

Reapportionment is the major failing of the present but in essence explains many other inadequacies, but leaves the electorate with the choice of forget for a minute that many more inadequacies do exist such as: the proposed lieutenant governor without any duties the "home rule" provision which isn't a "Home Rule" provision, the further lessening of executive authority, the inclusion of matters that don't belong in the constitution, and many more unlisted spare prohibits me from listing.

THE WORDS of Shakespeare "Tis better to be great" not to stir without great armament, but greatly to find quarrel in a straw when honor's at the stake" appropriately fit the situation at hand. The Florida citizens, some four million strong, going to vote mill to the arbitrary dictates of twenty man or are we going to let the petit and exploit our rights and demand of just due—good government derived from a good Constitution.

Panama City Tilt Draws Thousands

PANAMA CITY, Nov. 2—Ordinarily, freshman football games don't seem too much to too many people. But something like 3,000 fans filled the stands of this surprisingly large high school here tonight to watch Florida State's young Seminoles combat the Mississippi Southern frosh, 34-7.

There was a lot of promotion behind the game. It's become a annual affair over here and the enterprising people of this resort city go all out to do things in a big way.

A parade wended its way through downtown streets this evening as a drum-beating gimmick. Loudspeakers blared all along from special sound trucks which moved through fringe areas.

What the people saw when they filled this stadium tonight was much more than they expected. This you gathered from the gasps that floated up to the press box.

Some were so impressed that they broke a few rules by jumping into the box to verbally express their amazement at the amazing . . . phenomenal . . . classy" football team from

There's a story behind the success of this freshman football squad which carries an unbeaten streak that stretches over almost years to Miami Saturday night.

LENGTH IN SPIRIT

When you look at the roster, you count five players who ver 200 pounds, and the largest of the five is listed at 218 ing when you check it a little closer, you note that most of weigh in between 170 to 190 pounds. Except for fullback Calhoun, few of the backs push 170 pounds.

What, then, do they continue to win?

Phil Odom, the hulking coach with the soft voice that makes no emphasis it in many ways. In the locker room before tonight game, his talk went something like this:

You'll never hear me chew a boy out because someone is a better football player than him. But I will have some to say if I see one of you knocked on your rear and not ry right back up. . .

If doesn't do me any good to stand here and tell you that as a good ar better than any other freshman team around. record shows that and the reward's the thing people go ere's one thing I want to remind you of, it's that representing Florida State University out there tonight. ve a little proud of that. . .'

Odom honestly believes the things he said.

Earlier this afternoon in the lobby of the hotel, he remarked here isn't a boy among his group that isn't a potential ege student.

A lot of things are responsible for this," he said. "For one we're putting a lot of emphasis on the intelligence factor we're recruiting.

For another, the new entrance standards are having a big A boy can't get in FSU anymore unless he's pretty high the high school class."

COACH'S BIG JOB

Tonight is probably isn't evident to the average fan, the big for any freshman coach is to get a boy to remain in school his finish year.

It's very probable that as many areal athletes have been to leave their freshman and sophomore years as have gone to make the grade.

Again the reasons for this are varied

The freshman year in college is always a rough one for most men—there's always the girl back home and numerous frustrations. And, though a lot of people don't like to give it too much weight, it's just plain hard to mix football and

There's really no way to predict how many of the 30-40 young who wear the colors with the young Seminoles this fall will be next year. Any venture would be idle speculation.

But all of them will journey to Miami this coming Saturday to see the battle with a young Hurricane football team that is some something af an intrastate rival.

When the two teams met in Mi. Dora last fall, the Seminoles lost 14-0. It was an outstanding football game; it should be at this year

Seminole Frosh Cop 4th Straight

Led by Bud Whitehead and Bob Conrad, the Florida State freshman gridders won their fourth game of the 1957 season by rolling over the Mississippi Southern frosh, 34-7.

It was the eighth straight win for the frosh football team of FSU. The last game any freshman squad lost to a college was in 1955 to Mississippi Southern.

Conrad and Whitehead, who both scored twice, were teammates on the Marianna High School team for four years.

Conrad, 176 lb. quarterback, scored his first touchdown in the first period on a one yard dash around end. In the last quarter he speedy signal-caller broke loose for sixty yards and his second score.

Conrad also kicked four conversions.

WHITEHEAD SCORES

The other half of the FSU's version of the "touchdown twins," Whitehead, hit paydirt early in the second period as he bulled over from the three.

In the third quarter Whitehead, who only weighs 163, intercepted a pass on the Southern 28 and sped the remaining distance for the score.

Jim Calhoun, 196 pound fullback for the baby Seminoles, scored his seventh touchdown of the season in the first period. He scored both touchdowns against South Carolina last week and has scored in every game this season.

Southern scored its only touchdown in the second quarter on a 46 yard pass from Howard Mason to Bill Crawford. Tom McCraney kicked the extra point.

Conrad completed seven of eleven passes to bring his season's total to 18 out of 28.

THIRTEEN YARDAGE

The Tribe's rushing attack, which has been the bright light in the offense all season, picked up 378 yards to bring their season total to 1,317.

Southern's rushing attack, led by 136 yards and the passing attack

The FSU frosh played without the services of first string right half, George Versaville who was sidelined with the flu.

The baby Seminoles were also without Quarterback Carl Meyer who has a broken finger.

Although last years frosh team was beaten by a strong Bainbridge Naval team led by former All-American Zeke Bratkowski, last season, Coach Past Odum's teams have not been defeated by another college team in the past two seasons.

So far this season the frosh have downed Georgia Military Academy, 31-6, South Georgia, 43-0 and the South Carolina freshman 13-12.

ANOTHER SOPHOMORE to make the Seminoles' starting team is right end John Spivey of Panama City. Spivey moved up FSU's starting unit when Bob Nellums was switched to the fullback position.

Intramural News

No action has been taken as yet by the Intramural Board on SAE's protest against Sigma Chi in the swimming meet.

The Board, scheduled to meet yesterday, postponed their meeting until swimming coach Jim Shiels could sit on the investigating panel.

Should the Board decide in favor of SAE the Lams would get stuck in tie for the crown with PDT.

BASKETBALL

Moving into their fifth night of action, the Greek division opened the middle ranking teams intramurtal season. PKT pulled the upset of the day by taking 9th place KS 16-12 at 9:30 last. Hozza tacked 25 suns-handed for the victors in a wild scoring affair.

Third place KA tumbled LCA into 7th place by defeating them 25-17. ATO maintained their second place standing by squeezing past 11th place FKP 29-24.

DTD upset PKA 45-34 and dropped the PKA's into 8th place KS breezed past TEP and into 6th place by taking the TEP's 30-16 PDT moved into 4th place by edging SPE 16-11 in a seasonal low score record.

TENNIS

First Division of the Tennis competition was scrubbed Thursday with TC taking PDT in the singles on a forfeit and then finally taming KA in a rough doubles match.

KA really had to hustle in order to take a 7-5, 6-4 victory from SN in a singles match. PKT defeated a fleshing player from SC in the third singles

Hurricanes Win 3rd; Edge Wildcats, 13-7

Florida State's four remaining grid opponents won their games last weekend.

The Seminoles' opponents next Friday night, the University of Miami Hurricanes, edged out a 13-7 win over Villanova's Wildcats. It was the 'Canes' second straight win and their third victory of the season.

Villanova had defeated FSU 20-7 in an early season game

SOUTHERN WIN

Mississippi Southern extended their win streak to seven games as it downed Abilene Christian 7-6. The Southerners have had only six points scored on them all season

They have scored 109 Christian was defeated by the Tribe 34-7 two weeks ago. The Seminoles go to Hattiesburg on Nov. 16 to play the Southerners.

Auburn, the giants of the SEC, won its sixth straight game as it beat the Florida Gators, 13-6. The Tiger's defense continued to show their brick wall appearance and the offensive team did its job.

FSU plays Auburn here the afternoon of Nov. 23.

Tampa's Spartans won their third game of the year as they rolled over Southeastern Louisiana College, 25-13. The Tribe will travel to Tampa on Nov. 30 to play the Spartans in the last game of the season.

Cage Lineup 'Wide Open'

Less than four weeks remain until the opening of the 1957-58 basketball season, and starting positions are still "wide open" according to Coach Bud Kennedy.

Although guard Hugh Durham, leading scorer of last year is back, and undoubtedly will be a starter, the fight is hot and heavy for the remaining four positions.

"With practice only two weeks old our boys haven't had enough time to become a smooth working outfit, but I'm confident that we'll be ready by December 2," says Kennedy.

The first seven games should give a good indication of the strength of the squad as they play top opposition in the space of only 16 days.

Bob Casteel, who is supposed to be greatly improved over last year is giving veteran Larry Strom and newcomer Dan Ilotte top competition for a forward or center berth.

Junior college additions Bert Decker and Jim Lisesky are being pushed by sophomore Jim Savage for a backcourt position.

Nugent Lauds Miami's Curci As Dangerous Two-Way Man

Florida State's head football coach, Tom Nugent, offered his views on the University of Miami's football eleven after scouting the Hurricanes when they defeated Villanova, 13-7 last Friday night in the Orange Bowl.

The Seminole head mentor was impressed with the play of Miami quarterback, Fran Curci. "Curci is a dangerous runner and passer and is hard to contain. He's a real standout on both defense and offense," commented Nugent.

The 'Canes who are ranked fourth in the nation in rushing defense, use an eight and nine man line. Nugent figured Miami's line to be similar to last year's, heavy and fast.

Another big impression made on Nugent was the play of Miami's second team. The amiable coach estimated that the Hurricanes' second unit was the best he's seen this year.

Nugent guessed out that Miami's second team is what beat Villanova.

Commenting on the loss of Miami's captain and leading ground gainer, John Varone, Nugent stated, "He's a fine player and than Varone, but lack the experience."

Nugent is worried about the possible loss of fullback Bob Nellums and tackle Jerry Graham for the Miami game. Both are out with injuries and haven't dressed since the VPI contest

By comparing scores against mutual opponents the Seminoles come out on the short end of the score. FSU lost to Villanova 20-7 and lost a close one to N. C. State, 7-6.

Ticket Sales

Tickets for the Miami-Florida State clash this Friday night are going quickly, and all students are urged to pick up seats at their earliest convenience says Ed Cubbon, athletic business manager.

Group seats with 20 or more people can be picked up at the Men's gymnasium. Any amount under 20 can be had at the Westcott Ticket Booth.

Charles Carter Is Chiefs' 'Man Behind The Scenes'

By MARCI SEITZ

Halftime to every Seminole spells "Marching Chiefs"; one of the finest college bands in the country. Yet what makes Florida State's band so outstanding?

One vote of thanks goes to the man behind the scenes," Charles Carter, arranger for the Marching Chiefs.

Carter, who is an instructor in the School of Music, arranges all the music. Along with Mr. Manley R. Whitcomb, band director, he also arranges the formations for FSU's marching band.

PLANNING IN JULY

A tremendous amount of work goes into the halftime shows which Seminoles enjoy each football game. According to Carter, work for the first three shows was begun last July and completed before school resumed this fall.

Carter is well qualified for his job. He graduated from Ohio State and taught music there after receiving his master's in theory and composition at Eastman College in New York. He also did arrangements for the Ohio State college band before coming to FSU.

MUSIC FIRST LOVE

Music is quite naturally Mr. Carter's first love, and he is currently working on a series of high school band arrangements which will be compiled into a book to be published this spring. Although this is the first complete folio, Carter has had individual arrangements published.

It has been five years since Carter and his wife Dorothy who live at 40 W. College Ave. moved here from Ohio. When asked how he enjoys Florida State, Carter was enthusiastic in his reply. "I think FSU is a great school, and it has tremendous potential."

No News Is Good News? Says You!

By STAFF WRITER

It's not such a horrible catastrophe. It happens to all college news sheets at various times in their careers. Even to All-American biweeklies like The Flambeau.

It's just one of those things—the campus gets dull, the Homecoming aftermath leaves a void, news is...

Those are the times that try men's souls. These are the times when staffers are harassed by news editors and managing editors to go out and create news. Jump off West Hall, if necessary. Anything for a scoop and the Tuesday edition.

CREATIVE EFFORT

So here I am, creating. It's not easy, but we hope it'll serve as a reasonable facsimile thereof. At the crux of The Lofty One: Mr. News Editor, Sir. Al, cub reporters bow three times in the direction of his desk upon entering the scrambled, frustrated inner sanctum called The Office.

Someone suggested that, to fill space, we begin an open-ended, cartoon addressed to the sophisticates in an effort to end pinball(s) on campus. But that idea was shelved indefinitely when it was decided that such a thing would bring about immediate removal of the Flambeau Purse's That Be.

The folly of crusading once again for bermudas minus raincoats was quickly cast into the circulating files; why bother? we asked ourselves.

So we thought we'd just tick fo. some news. Something sensational, exciting, novel, that doesn't often happen around the campus.

LADIES LINGERIE

A panty raid, perchance. Or are you gentlemen too thoroughly indoctrinated with the idea that fun is a ladies' institution, that you can't violate the non-violence tradition? It happens regularly in the Outer World where colleges are truly co-ed, but would be a great scoop for the Flambeau, welcome relief from the Nowhere Blues.

Or perhaps one Women's P Club could stage a mass attack on the SAE lions with acetylene torches and purple-and-orange paint sprayguns.

A mass pool party instigated by Alpha Kappa Psi would be a great idea. And we'd really appreciate it if the editors of Smoke Signals would soon come up with a scandalously controversial publication—something to rival the notoriety of the yearbook's "eyebooh" days of yore.

Please dull creatures, do something different. Ridiculous, even. Start a fire in the middle of the Landis green, repeal an unattended library doors Sunday nights, demand a breath check on Saturday nights in Jennie Murphree, join the Russian Roulette craze, start raccoon coats to the football games.

Be different; be daring; be crazy. Smoke marijuana. Make news.

Thus, gentle hearts, has been a Flambeau extra, first and (we hope) last in a series.

We tried.

Two Florida State University professors have recently come out with books in their particular fields.

Dr. Victor S. Mamatey, associate professor of history, has recently had his book on the impact of Wilsonian and Bolshevik propaganda on East Central Europe between 1914 and 1918 published by the Princeton University Press in all pages, $7.50.

The book, entitled The United States and East Central Europe, 1914-1918, A Study in Wilsonian Diplomacy and Propaganda, deals with some of the influences of Woodrow Wilson on the thinking of the people of that area, Czechoslovakia in particular.

Dr. Mamatey is a native of Pittsburgh and conducted his undergradua te study in Czechoslovakia at Comenius University where he got his bachelor's degree in 1938. He later studied at Wittenberg College, the University of Chicago, and Harvard.

Dr. Victor Oelschlager, head of the Department of Modern Languages, is the editor of a publication of the first modern language history of the world as written by King Alfonso the Tenth of Spain in the 13th century.

MIKE'S MIKE

By MIKE CUREAU

"Make Love To Me," Julie London says on her latest album. Those of you who admire that London girl will understand what she means after one session of listening pleasure. "Make Love To Me" is Julies fifth LP but compared to, "Julie Is Her Name," "Lonely Girl," "Calender Girl," and "Meaning of The Blues," this one seems to have favor. Julie is backed up by Russ Garcia and his orchestra on Liberty label. The LP is available at Lewis Scoggin's on "Robin's Nest."

"Show business and romantic success" is the next theme in music at the "Robin's Nest." "Pal Joey," a new film out starring Frank Sinatra, Rita Hayworth, and Kim Novak, is also in record form now. The sound track is another first in music for Frank Sinatra's versatility that prevails in just about everything he does. Try Rita Hayworth and Kim Novak's voices on for size if you want something different in music.

Instrumentaly great! Some have been made in progressive jazz and one of the founders of new innovations is Johnny Richards. "Wide Range" spotlights new thought for those who appreciate hot band arranging and composing. His album a "Kentonism" can be heard throughout Richards themes. "Cuban Fire" and Johnny Richards' greatest attempts of composing, has sing on the new one. Also Scoggin about this one "Robin's Nest."

Going from the vocal to quartet, "The Modern Jazz Quartet" says that they have their "Body and Soul" on one. I have heard some sounds at the "Robin's Nest" a bit of partiality enters when I say that these boys done something less than traditional to the tracks on this album. From one side to the other they do nothing but swing. This is the four star LP album of the week for quartets.

"I'm in a business nobody dreamed of three years ago"

"In a company that develops new ideas by the thousands," says 30-year-old William K. Cordier, manager of General Electric's Man-Made Diamond pilot plant, "a young man's career progress need not be limited by his particular field. In my five years with General Electric, I've gained valuable experience in several different fields, and each assignment has helped me to move ahead. Right now, I have an exciting job. I run the world's first diamond-making plant — a business nobody dreamed of three years ago."

Diamond Making a Reality

The job Bill Cordier holds is an important one, created because General Electric has the scientific and technical resources needed to seek out new knowledge and swiftly translate it into products that people want and need. In 1955, the company announced a major scientific breakthrough — the production of real diamonds in the laboratory. Today, little more than two years later, General Electric is making and selling quantities of these diamonds for civilian and defense use.

Achieving Three-Way Progress

General Electric's ability to take on and solve big problems — in research and development as well as every phase of production — is constantly creating challenging new opportunities for the 29,000 college graduates at the company. As we see it, by providing a healthy climate for a young man's self-development in whatever area he may choose, we encourage not only his own progress, but that of the company and the nation as well.

WILLIAM K. CORDIER received his B.S. in Mechanical Engineering from Purdue University (1949). He joined General Electric's Metallurgical Products Department in 1952.

Gridders Face Favored Hurricanes Tonight

Varone Status Uncertain For 8 P.M. Clash

By FRANK RAMOS

Florida State's football squad will be pointing for an upset victory over the University of Miami's Hurricanes tonight in Campbell Stadium before an expected crowd of 19,000.

This will be the fifth contest between the two clubs with Miami claiming the other four victories. The Hurricanes were declared favorites in the previous games and are favored again.

Miami is expected to be at full strength for the game, although John Varone may see limited action. Varone, who a Miami's leading ground gainer was injured in the Kansas contest two weeks ago.

The Hurricane captain sat out last week's Villanova game, but will be able to play this week through the special efforts of Miami trainer, Dave Wike, who provided Varone with a special brace and mask.

Operating in the same backfield with Varone will be Miami's shaky quarterback, Fran Curci. Curci is a 142-pounder who is already billed as one of Miami's great quarterbacks.

Joe Plevel has the starting nod at left half for the Hurricanes, Byron Blasko and Ronnie Yarbrough will be ready to fill in for Varone.

Slated to start at fullback is junior Bill Bendik. Bendik will handle along with the fullback duties, the kicking assignments.

Operating at the ends for the 'Canes are Doug Hildebrandt and Phil Gesta. Nathan Kelly a 200-pounder and Gary Greaves a 205-pounder hold down the tackle slots.

At the guards Miami will start Don Wallace and Ball Hayes.

THE MEN TO WATCH in tonight's gridi ron clash will be quarterbacks Fran Curci (l) of the University of Miami and Bobb y Renn (r) of the Seminoles.

Prexy Assistant Bill Falls After Fiery Senate Debate

BY KAT WRIGHT

A fiery debate exploded on the floor of Senate Wednesday over the proposed Senate approval of a bill creating a presidential assistant in the President's cabinet.

Following an hour-a discussion, the bill was defeated by a majority vote of the senators. The bill was introduced on October 16th by Men's Vice-President Bob Murray, Women's Vice-President Polly Atwater, and Junior Senator Gerry Gredell.

Sophomore Senator Walton Hair, Secretary of the Elections and Constitutions Committee to which this bill was referred, moved the approval of the bill yesterday upon recommendation of the committee.

The main discussion concerning the bill was why the creation of the position was necessary, and why it should hold cabinet rank.

Men's Vice-President Murray speaking for the bill said, "New duties come up during the year that call the attention of the president's office. Presidents in the past have had to call on various individuals to handle new problems that arise and also make speeches for the President when he is unable to attend.

Murray replied, "The Speakers Bureau is unable to give all the speeches that people ask them to make, and usually the other student government officers are busy also."

Presiding officer Jan Kaminis next recognized Senior Senator Bob Lewis who said, "I have spoken to several cabinet members, and they do not seem to be overworked. The President does have a great deal of work to do, but I believe the cabinet members can adequately handle the matters that arise."

Senator Lewis then yielded the floor to Student Body Vice-President Jan Kaminis, who gave the chair to Men's Vice President Bob Murray.

"I don't feel that the duties of student government have increased in the past year to the point that the creation of a new position in student government is necessary," said Miss Kaminis.

NOT FULL-TIME JOB

"Not one of the cabinet positions is a full time job. Having served in the cabinet as Secretary of State, I feel qualified to say this. A presidential assistant would be appointed by the president, not elected."

Miss Kaminis continued, "While holding this office, a person could receive experience and grooming that would qualify him to hold the office of Student Body President. Other elected student government officers would possibly be in competition with the presidential assistant for the office," she said.

Men's Vice-President Murray, acting chairman, gave the chair to Senator Hair, in order that he might be recognized.

Murray said, "This position would not be a cabinet assistant primarily with the off-campus housing situation. He has spent many hours of research on this problem. It would be needless for one to spend hours in men's residence halls looking into the problem.

"People in this debate are as-

Poydras Story To Be Told At Coffee Hour

By STAFF WRITER

The story of Poydras, a Louisiana philanthropist who willed his fortune to poor brides, will be read this afternoon at the English Coffee Hour by the author, Mrs. Olive Cross.

Mrs. Cross, an instructor in the Florida State University Department of English, will use her paper on Poydras to serve as a model to demonstrate proper techniques in preparing manuscripts for publication. Her talk is entitled "Tailoring a Manuscript."

INTEREST TO ALL

"Although the talk is aimed at writers," said Mrs. Cross, "others should be interested in the unusual story of Poydras."

The only known important history to will his fortune to poor brides in need of dowries. Poydras provided that as much as $2000 be given yearly to deserving Louisiana girls.

Last year 11 bride-to-be, unable to provide the proper dowries required by custom in their communities, benefited from his will.

"The whole idea of Poydras intrigued me," said Mrs. Cross. "Although it is based on true facts, she has fictionized her paper.

OUTLINES POINTS

"I plan to begin my talk by outlining points for writers to keep in mind when submitting manuscripts for publication," she said.

After the reading the program will be turned over to Dr. Griffith Pugh, who will act as an interviewing agent in discussion the story.

Dr. Pugh, English professor, will question Improvements and bring out points used by authors' friends in criticizing manuscripts.

"We hope the discussion will be enlered in by the audience and that they will offer suggestions," Mrs. Cross concluded.

Movie Coupon Books Coming For Students

Movie coupon books worth $2.60, at a cost of only $2, will be made available to Florida State University students within two weeks.

Debaters Head For Alabama

For the ninth consecutive year, Florida State University will be represented by members of the varsity debate squad at the Alabama Discussion Conference in Tuscaloosa, Ala., this weekend.

Those competing for honors at the University of Alabama affair are Arlen Dimsdale, a Fort Lauderdale freshman; Sheldon Prettwell, a sophomore from Miami; Dave Harris, a senior from Miami; and Graham Sukeleiber, Tallahassee junior.

The four are being accompanied by Debate Coach Gregg Phifer, associate professor of speech.

The contest, which began this morning will include five rounds of discussion on the national discussion topic: "What Should be the Role of the Federal Government Regarding Membership in a Labor Organization as a Condition of Employment?"

900 Tickets Gone For 'Freshmen

About a third of the available tickets for the two appearances of the Don Freshmen, scheduled for Wednesday evening in Westcott Auditorium, have already been sold, according to the Office of Special Events.

Over 700 tickets had already been sold late yesterday, and with four days left to sell, they are expected to go fast, according to spokesmen for Alpha Tau Omega, sponsor of the appearances of the popular jazz quartet.

The ATO's, who annually sponsor a name group on campus, will donate all proceeds to Campus Chest. Last year, Louis "Satchmo" Armstrong and his dixieland aggregation played before two packed houses, under ATO sponsorship.

The shows are scheduled for 7 and 8:45 p. m. No seats are reserved; tickets can be had for $1 at the Westcott Ticket Office.

Speech Department Presents 'No Exit'

The second experimental production of the Florida State University Speech Department will be a stage presentation of "No Exit," by Jean Paul Sartre. November 14 and 15 in the Graduate Club lounge.

Wearing drama about three people in hell, No Exit will be followed by a discussion on existentialism.

On the cast for the play will be Bette Caldwell, as Estelle, Mary Stephomanac, Susan Coffrey as Inez, a lesbian; Robert Murphy as Cradeau, a coward, and Gerald Lavin Johnson as the bell boy.

The unusual production will be directed by Ina Mae Cohen, a graduate student in the Department of Speech, assisted by Walter Barlie with Virgil Austin in charge of lighting.

The audience will be seated on the aisles in a special setting designed by the graduate lounge.

Both performances are open to the public without admission charge.

Die Fledermaus

First Artist Series Show Monday Night

BY NANCY HANNAFORD

The first presentation of the Artist Series, Strauss' comic opera Die Fledermaus, will be performed by the Grass Roots Opera Company in Westcott Auditorium at 8:15 Monday evening.

Tickets to this musical version of a complicated practical joke are now on sale at the Westcott Ticket Office, free with No. 2 activity ticket, $2 without, according to Director of Special Events Kathryn Vernon.

Featuring young singers just beginning their operatic careers, the Grass Roots Opera Company, in keeping with its basic policy of "down where the people are", will present the opera in English.

WALKS HOME LOOPED

The wacky plot of Die Fledermaus involves mistaken identity, pronunciation fiddles, mouse, translation ... LYRIC TENOR Orrin Hill of New York will sing the lead male role of Eisenstein in The Fledermaus, when the opera comes to Westcott auditorium Monday night.

Program Of American Music Set Tomorrow

8:15 P.M. In Opperman

Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia, national men's music honorary, will present a program of American music tomorrow night at 8:15 p.m. in Opperman Music Hall.

The program will open with "The Fanfare for the Common Man" of Aaron Copland, performed by the FSU Brass Choir. William Cramer, conductor. This fanfare, scored for percussion and brass, is one of those commissioned for the Cincinnati Symphony during the early war years by Eugene Goosens, who was then conductor.

Although it was originally designed to call concert-goers back to the hall after intermission, it later became incorporated in Copland's Third Symphony and is now heard as part of the program as title.

SENATOR LEWIS

Senator Lewis was recognized and stated that he desired to ask Greenfield a question.

"What has your helper done so this year?" Senator Lewis asked.

Greenfield replied, "He has dealt primarily with the off-campus housing situation. He has spent many hours of research on this problem. It would be needless for one to spend hours in men's residence halls looking into the problem.

They are Harold Schiffman, who will perform his "Six Bagatelles" for piano; Dr. John Beda, who will play his recently composed "Sonatine for Clarinet and piano" with Gomer "The Fanfare for the Common Man" of Aaron Copland, performed by the FSU Brass Choir. Student Criticizes Pettiness

On page 4 of today's Flambeau readers will see an article contributed by a rather amazing FSU student, Joe Neggers.

NEGGERS, who is a junior in the physics department, is one of the outstanding students in the sciences at the university. He is devoted to technological pursuits and possesses the mental ability and background to make a significant contribution to scientific advance.

Neggers' article today is a thorough and stinging indictment of many of our pettinesses in contemporary American culture. He attacks our congressional witchhunts among outstanding scientists, our "well-adjusted" methods of education, and our stumbling around in such situations as the recent Little Rock incident.

AND THE criticisms are well deserved. They are carefully phrased and represent the opinions of a group which is needed more than anything else in America today: the thoughtful scientist who is not afraid to speak out against injustice.

Too often in the past few years have our scientists been shackled by fear to speak out, due primarily to the censuring of two of America's greatest scientists, Linus Pauling and Robert Oppenheimer.

NEGGERS' contribution in scientific research is significant in itself. Only a junior, he is engaged at present in basic research that is done usually by faculty members alone.

This work becomes doubly significant when it is realized that Neggers, though now a junior, is only 17 years of age. He entered the university two years ago at the age of 15.

HIS CRITICISMS of the domestic scene are guided not only by his observations of the internal workings of American government as an American citizen, but also as his status prior to becoming a citizen as a native of the Netherlands.

Neggers' thoughtful appraisal should not only come as a reminder to us as Americans to re-evaluate our present governmental and educational tendencies, but also should remind us as individuals of the right of intelligent criticism.

IF MORE of us look seriously our rights and responsibilities as citizens of a free state, perhaps the contemporary witchhunts and the "adjustment" school of educational theory could not have taken such firm rooting.

Read his article carefully and evaluate your own position in regard to these great issues. Then ask yourself if you have really measured up to your responsibilities.

'Tricky Dicky' Knives GOP Buddies

By JIM McINTYRE

After a couple days of behind the scenes hocus-pocus on the part of some of the GOP big-wigs, it looks like the once potent California Republican posse whose has hit the skids.

AND IT ALL because of what may turn out to be a knife-in-the-back maneuvere by Dena Richard Milhous Nixon, known to his intimates as young Dick, numbering in the millions as "Tricky Dicky."

The whole fairy tale began, children, when young Milhous saw a star rising on the horizon of presidential aspiration in the person of our friend William Knowland, a fellow Californian, and, likewise, a fellow Republican.

THIS MADE things look a little dark for "Tricky" since it is a well known fact that ha has been inching into Mr. Eisenhower's shoes for the past five years. At least as far into them as Sherman Adams would allow him to go.

Nixon, like all red-blooded American youths, wanted to be President of the United States. He is ambitious.

AND, BEING ambitious in this direction, and being the type personality he is, there are few things that he would not do to insure his getting the Republican nomination in 1960.

So kiddies, he looked around to see if there were some muscle that could be used to contain, if not destroy, the presidential aspirations of his fellow Californian, Senator Knowland.

AND, BINGO, right there in his own home state was the weapon he needed. It was Republican Governor Goodwin J. Knight.

Now, in order to use Governor Knight in his anti-Knowland campaign, Nixon found it necessary to adopt a new face, something at which he has become quite adept since his touching television performance during the 1952 campaign.

THE REASON for the new face was Knight's professed hostility to Nixon. The hostility had been professed in no uncertain terms during the 1956 Republican convention in San Francisco, when Knight joined with the Stassen forces in an attempt to leave Nixon off the ticket by declaring that Eisenhower might carry California, but that he wasn't sure he Eisenhower-Nixon ticket would.

Against this background, young Richard realized that the only way of guiding Knight into cancelling out Knowland was to appeal to his ambitions on the national level.

KNIGHT, like Knowland and Nixon, wants to be president. His mother brought him up that way.

Soooo, if Nixon could get Knight to run for the Senate, the night eliminate one of his competitors. But before he could swing into action, Knowland announced that he would run for the California Governorship in 1958.

Nixon then began his campaign to get Knight to run for Knowland's Senate seat which will be vacated in January, 1959.

He succeeded.

SO NOW Nixon has Knowland neutralized against popular Democratic candidate Pat Brown, to whom he will probably lose, and Knight running for the Senate after the California newspapers have withdrawn their support from him, as well as his most substantial financial backers.

It looks now like both will lose their ambitions as a result of their Nikonish brainwashing.

With his two powerful colleagues out of the way, Nixon has a clear field for the 1960 Republican nomination.

Let's hope the country votes Democratic.

Albrecht Column Misunderstood

The controversy initiated by columnist Art Albrecht's criticism of the idea of the two Indians who appeared at the Homecoming festivities has been carried on on a basis of misunderstanding.

THERE HAVE been letters to the editor condemning Albrecht for his column, with one containing a veiled threat of physical harm.

Flambeau columnists, like other columnists, are not above reproach. They sometimes err in judgement, and often incur the wrath of students and other interested parties for their opinions.

MANY OF THE letters concerning Albrecht's article were not in good taste, contained personal attacks and in general offended the standards of ethics that must be met in any paper.

The attacks were primarily based on what was termed "Albrecht's destructive attack on school spirit." These attacks, we feel, reflect the general misunderstanding and misconception of Albrecht's column.

HE DID NOT attack the foundations of school spirit. He merely attacked the perversion of the bases of a good school spirit which seemed to be evident in the appearance of two Cheyenne Indians when the school symbol is the Seminole.

His remarks were not meant as an attack on the two men who portrayed the Indians, nor as an attack at the instigators of the innovation.

THEY WERE meant to be critical of the use of non-symbolic mascots when there is a homegrown symbol and mascot available in the person of Sammy Seminole (not to be confused with Flambeau columnist Georgie Seminole).

Slightly over half his column was devoted to criticism. The remaining half was given over to the furtherance of adopting a symbolic Sammy Seminole to appear at campus functions.

WE BELIEVE that he was perfectly justified in his criticisms, and completely right in his suggestions.

The cheerleaders in charge of the project, evidently, think his suggestions worthwhile, as they have now converted the western-type Indians into authentic Seminoles, who will appear at tonight's game with the Miami Hurricanes.

IT IS OUR hope that in the future, when students wish to take issue with the thoughts of a columnist, they will do so on an ideological plane, leaving personal attacks out of the letter.

English Hour Retains Audience

Along with the excitement and enthusiasm of the football season usually comes a type of apathy toward cultural activities in general on campus.

CONCERT ATTENDANCE tends to rise somewhat after the fall season, and other activities, such as the Film Club, seem to suffer somewhat during the fall.

One cultural activity, however, tends to retain a fairly constant audience throughout the year, primarily because those interested enough in the field to attend one of its sessions usually find enough of a stimulating challenge to return again and again.

THE WEEKLY English Coffee Hour is the activity to which we refer in this manner.

Held at the Westminster House at the corner of Copeland and Park, this meeting usually provides a type of intellectual challenge found in many facets of literature which both students and faculty find so appealing.

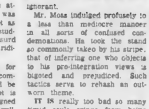
THE MEETINGS are conducted on a relatively non-spectacular plane, setting aside any theatric pretensions at the door, and begin at the heart of reading and creating great literature.

It is a shame that more students do not take advantage of the opportunities afforded by the English Coffee Hour. The years at college are far too short to overlook such a fine opportunity.

ONE MAT attend football games almost any weekend in the fall after graduation, but the old grad seldom finds the type of stimulation given at the Coffee Hour in the outside world.

This afternoon at 4 p.m. Mrs. Olive Cross of the FSU English Department will present a paper on "The Tailoring of a Manuscript." She will be aided by Dr. Bernice Pugh, chief of the English Department.

For an hour of relaxation and intellectual stimulus, visit the Coffee Hour this afternoon. You'll want to return again.



Moss Fails

TO THE EDITOR:

I've seen some pompous, vey dose jerks in many papers but nothing quite so ludicrous as the "compulsory exposition" submitted by author Moss in the October 25 edition of the Flambeau.

The opening paragraph, for instance, wasn't even a complete sentence. It may well be that the English department is relieved the letter was signed in part "Grad., Psychology". What a "Grad., Psychology" supposed to be, a royal title?

MR. MOSS apparently thought that little technique put the stamp of authority on his decree, overwhelming the mere undergraduate. Such ostentatiousness impresses no one saying the ignorant.

Mr. Moss indulged profusely to a class that mediocre manner in all sorts of confused condemnations. He took the stand as complainer, taked by his slight, that of inferring one who objects to the proliferation views is bigoted and prejudiced. Such tactics serve to rehash an outworn theme.

IT IS really too bad so many timid souls cringe from being called names by drooders and mascotnuts who condescend to come here and reform savage Southerners. Rather than remain silent these faint hearts should realize that the fault is in kind, even though it is questionable conduct and probably accomplishes very little or nothing.

BUT OH! I'm digressing as Mr. Moss would say. He wonders in his masterpiece if Nolan Adams has ever tired doing a research paper on this campus. Being intimately acquainted with him I can say he has not, but at least he has written English the composition papers, which is obviously more than his critic ever attempted. Mr. Moss may be an author in psychology, but he is hell on English. Mistakes, however, are easily made.

THE LIBRARY, sirrh, be a perfect repository for many good, but then who am I to disagree with authority? Such presumptuousness would make me a stupid, prejudiced rascal, as meso as homemade sin.

Our traditions, ways of life, and ideals, very likely don't suit our antagonist, but I don't feel it necessary to apologize for them. If he wishes he is free to take his superior attitudes, reforms, and great philosophies to higher latitudes.

Sincerely yours,
CHARLES F. ADAMS

Created Equal

TO THE EDITOR:

This is in regard to Nolan Adams' letter to you a few issues ago. I don't believe he realizes that God created us all equal, but didn't give us the right to choose our color, a person or personality to be judged by their merits and not their skin. We laugh at Russia and criticize many other countries, and about to the world Freedom and Equality.

The Arkansas order is probably the most horrible thing that has happened in our country. Imagine sending out men to stand in front of a school with guns to deny children an education. What an example the U.S. is to the world. It makes very good propaganda for the communists not to say anything of a possibility of a civil war.

New Subconscious Advertising Planned

By ART ALBRECHT

If we complain long and hard enough, eventually modern technology will cure most of our ills.

One of the public's chief complaints in the past decade or so has been the overabundance of commercials on television. Well, technology and a few wiser colleges have come up with a solution. The only trouble is the cure may be worse than the illness!

WHAT WITH Sputnik's wanderings, Ike's golfballs, Democratic victories and armed forces in Little Rock, relatively little has been written or said about the advertiser's newest weapon — subliminal projection — in the months to come, we can expect considerable controversy.

Back in the 1950's, a book satitled "The Richardson Story" forsaw what subliminal was would be used to transmit advertising messages into the consumer's subconscious. The public accepted the book as sheer science-fiction, smiled a little and put the absurd thought out of their minds.

Now that something very similar to this has arrived it's rather timid to smile about it.

IN SIMPLE TERMS, subliminal advertising is an effort to insinuate sales messages to people below their level of consciousness. This is accomplished by means of commercials that are neither seen nor heard. The advertiser simply flashes the message lasting only one three-thousandth of a second—on a screen every five minutes. It is impossible for the viewer to recognize the message consciously, but it impinges on senses and perception and is absorbed subconsciously.

Subliminal, subchasshold or invisible sell, as it is sometimes called, has been in the experimental stage for nearly two years. The first commercial in the field, first put it to use on television in June, 1956. Flashing a message subliminally on the screen during the showing of a ballet film, the home audience was asked to consume BBC if they noticed anything unusual. Four hundred and people responded correctly the message.

A NEW JERSEY theater tested the process. Exposing "Picnic" invisibly into the screen during a regular picture, a six-week period. Popcorn increased 57.5 per cent.

Similar and other tests have countible boost in Coca-Cola and ice-cream sales are recorded. Drive-in theaters experimented with subliminal projection.

So invariably the word "subliminal" appears have had success in influencing attitudes to support the product without the students being aware that any influence has been brought to bear on them.

THIS HAS serious implications! At this date there appear to be any sanctions or usage could be considered such; it could be used to control political indoctrination or the "selling" of anything commercial advertising.

A few choice messages — "Stamp out communism with Democracy," "Go Truman," "Paulsus for President" or "Demand Integration" — all hell might break loose.

Actually, James Vicary, the motivational research man who invented the subliminal technique that stirred up the controversy, says that only things that already exist in the public mind can be affected. Only then, says Vicary will react in a subliminal way. Vicary does not publicly admit, however, that the subliminal technique could be used to create needs.

AS YET the special media and precise has been confined to experimental situations. Whether advertiser has it, although Vicary states that it hasn't, is not known at present.

The advertising profession is split on the issue. Some media use it. However, dialogue the potential social and political dangers of subliminal advertising as an advertising medium itself. I can't understand the qualms.

If we do away with commercials and are limited to two or three-word subliminal messages, we're going to see an ad man to write scenes like "Eat Popcorn!"

The Critic's Corner

Music Concert Best In Several Years

BY DALE JENSEN

Last Monday night the opening concert of the season was presented in the University Auditorium with the musical direction of Robert Sedore. A rather large audience was applauded the orchestra's efforts and received, for the first time in this year's Flambeau Overtures, a slightly misplaced, it seems to me, encore.

First, the critic feels safe in asserting, once and for all, that this was the best opening concert within the past several years. The orchestra is better, particularly in the string section, and the musicality corresponds ondingly better.

The foundation of the orchestra, the string section, is small, ala considerably more solid than in the preceding seasons. The sound is much more satisfying sound, and helps quite substantially in improving intonation throughout the orchestra.

Too, the brass section is much more secure, and has a commanding presence from top to bottom that is new and exciting difference. If any one section is to be singled out for highest praise, this critic is inclined to select the brasses.

The woodwinds are possessed of fine articulation, and if the sections but still seem to lack unity in their approach to the music.

The concert opened with Antonio Vivaldi's Concerto for Two Trumpets, with Calvin Heabrouck and his teacher, Robert Sedore, as the soloists. They played superbly together and aside from the fact the sound was matched by almost flawless control. This latter, in the high range that Vivaldi's composer required, demanded great skill from each soloist. Happily, the demands were not in vain Monday night.

Miss Dolores Cobb, a graduate student from the studio of Edward Klamyt, next performed the Piano Concerto #4 in G Major, opus 58, by Beethoven. Miss Cobb played with an appealing delicateness and, if you will, tenderness that was most at all out of place in Beethoven, despite the common conception of the heavyhandedness of the man's music. The critic felt, however, that the bravura that is a part of the music was too restrained.

The lack of exciting excitement, lacked something, perhaps a touch of bravado, or of fiery-ness. The finesse throughout the rest of the performance suggests that this was deliberate, in which case the critic can only plead a difference of opinion.

After intermission, the orchestra opened the second half of the program with the first section of Rimsky-Korsakoff's Scheherazade, entitled "The Sea and Sinbad's Ship". Although it is felt that this number was slightly misplaced, it seems unfortunate to display the brass section at its best.

Arias from Charpentier's Louise and FSU faculty member Ida Pfeyl's Rosemary by Miss Beverly Brown, a senior from the studio of Edith Dunn, enchanting Miss Brown Gainesville, Ga., as the aria stated, was the soprano soloist.

Miss Brown has always possessed a voice of great delicacy and loveliness of quality, and Monday's performance were no exception. The effect was enhanced by most exalted choices of arias for her lovely soprano voice.

As in all the rest of the evening's features, there was a fine balance between solo and ensemble. Miss Brown was accompanied by the ensemble, not the soloist passages, and the orchestra responded to either her French or English.

The program closed with a return to Lado's La Fiesta. This was a real killer for the brass, and once again, they met all the sound and fury. It was worth it. However, the orchestra's work and as an encore forced "Poesa" from Dvorak's Symphony, for a soft and lyric performance of this piece have done in several previous concerts. It was a fine selection.

This critic would like to take this opportunity to direct attention to a noteworthy talent taking place unnoticed in Opperman Music Hall — the American Music Department, an annual presentation of Phi Alpha, men's music honorary.

The program will consist of works by Harold Schiffman, Elmer McDuffie, FSU graduate students, and Dr. John Boda the FSU music faculty, as well as works by Aaron Copland, Creston, and Gian-Carlo Menotti. Performances will be both faculty and student members of the music school, and will be in a pleasing variety of media from the Brass Choir to concerto soloist.

The worth of such a concert can scarcely be estimated. Only poetic writing, among others, to be heard. An opportunity as this, with outstanding performers and a University audience, is one of the greatest aids to further efforts that a composer can have. And any efforts on his part, however small, serve to broaden the American cultural scene whether as Nixon Edwards, Gershwin, Nationally, as Carlisle Floyd and is doing.

Big Night Ahead For Tribe Hopes

This is it!

...ght is of course the long-anticipated appearance of Miami's ...ated Hurricanes at Doak S. Campbell Stadium, and tonight's ...g night.

These are not the Hurricanes of old, the powerhouses that ...ded to a 9-1-1 mark in 1956, 8-3 in 1955, 7-1 in 1954 and ...-1 last year.

The sophomore-dominated 'Canes come into Seminole territory with a mediocre 3-2-1 mark to show, not much better than ...t Tribe's 2-3 mark.

But still this is Miami.

And the Seminoles have never beaten Miami in four tries, ...1956, 1955, 1955 and 1954. They have in fact scored but three ...indowns against the Hurricanes in four games.

The oddmakers are saying that Miami will make it five ...e row tonight.

Some people are offering "FSU and seven," some giving even ...ey, some are favoring the Seminoles. In view of the past this is ...to be expected.

One national "rating system" makes them 21-point underdogs. ...ough past results have proven this system inaccurate on more ...an one occasion.

DIFFERENCE IN DESIRE

The difference must be in the desire to win.

As head coach Tom Nugent said himself, it will take two ...ngths for the Seminoles to upset Miami. 1: FSU has got to ...ant to win more; 2: "We've got to fool the Hurricanes some ...."

Fooling the Hurricanes has never been a national pastime in ...e past years, mainly because it doesn't work often enough to ...ake the occupation profitable

Miami has always been noted as a strong team defensively, ...s has been the 'Canes offense not the defense which has failed ...o pin this for this season.

Defensively, they rank sixth in the nation, in rushing defense ...owewhat higher. This will probably send the Seminoles to the ...e a good bit this evening.

Last year, the 'Canes ranked tops in the nation defensively, ...d until the final quarter, they showed the Seminoles why they ...re in the top notch on that level.

That fourth quarter last year in the Orange Bowl is prob...bly the Seminoles' only claim to fame during their four-game ...tter with the boys from downstate.

During the fourth period of last year's 80-7 loss, FSU dom...ated play entirely, controlling the ball for about 13 minutes, ...oing once and having another touchdown called back.

I doubt that such a one-sided contest as Orange Bowl fare ...ained for three quarters in 1956 will be the situation here ...night.

For one thing, there can be no doubt that the home ground ...ould serve to inspire the Seminoles to great heights, possibly ...f them at their highest peak of the season.

Should they be at their best, it should be sufficient to down ...iami. Anything short of that, however, may be disastrous ...o the cause.

Most observers agree that if the Seminoles don't do it tonight, ...ey won't for some years. The Hurricanes are loaded with ...ecord sophomores and fully expect to regain the ranks of the ...ational elite next year.

The view from here indicates the Seminoles are not yet ready ...o take the step over the downstaters

I hope I'm wrong, but—Miami 13 Florida State 7.

FROSH FAVORED

On another gridiron front, the FSU frosh tackle the Baby ...urricanes in Miami tomorrow night, and their chances of victory ...re a bit rosier than the varsity's.

The Baby Seminoles haven't lost in collegiate competition for ...ny cant games and in winning four this year, have had difficulties only once, with South Carolina

The South Carolina frosh pressed them to a 13-12 win, but ...ther victories were hardly contested.

Coach Paul Odom has assembled a talented ball club with a ...d of horses, and it's doubtful that the junior Miamians will ...e them

The freshman statistics are somewhat phenomenal, as the ...by Seminoles have completely outclassed their opponents in ...ost every department.

Even in the 13-12 victory, the freshmen were far better ...an Varsity. A rushing offense which has averaged better than ...0 yards per game speaks for itself.

And it makes quite a bit of noise!

Varone Status Uncertain For 8 P.M. Clash

Handling the center's duties will be Victor Nevcomb who, this past week, was voted "Lineman of the Week."

Tom Nugent, FSU's head football coach, is expected to start five sophomores against Miami. "Our sophomores are coming to life," said Nugent this week. "They've made some costly mistakes, but they're gaining a lot of wonderful experience."

Fullback Sting and Ham Rabee is definitely out of the game as he sustained a leg injury in practice this week.

Also on the doubtful list is fullback Eddie Johnson who was banged up in a scrimmage and might have a cracked rib.

John Sivey and Captain Ron Schomburger will start at ends for the Seminoles Bill Musselman and Jerry Graham a pair of 205-pounders will open at the tackles

A pair of sophomores Al Ulmer and Abner Sizbee, have received the call at the guard posts George Boyer a 220 pound senior will start at center

ALL BACKFIELD

Directing the Seminole's multiple offense will be Bobby Renn Renn who is the Tribe's leading ground gainer is also third in the nation in punting despite his first kick traveling seven yards.

Sam Dobbert, who does the signal calling for FSU, will operate at right halfback. Fred Pickard who set the school record for the the longest run from scrimmage against VPI, 80 yards, gets the call at left half.

Ben Nelloms end-turned-fullback is slated to handle the fullback duties. Nelloms has been out with a charley horse for a week and a half, but has recovered well enough to start.

Statistically the Hurricanes lead the Seminoles in ground gaining and in rushing defense. Miami is ranked third in the nation in rushing defense.

Freshmen Tackle Miami Yearlings

By JOE GREENE

Florida State's unbeaten freshman round out a complete weekend of Miami football when they take on the Miami yearlings tomorrow night.

Postponed from last month, the game is set for the Police Benevolent Association field in Coral Gables starting at 8 p.m.

It will be the second of three games scheduled for the Miami frosh this season. In September they dropped a 9-7 verdict to Mexico Poly Tech in Mexico City. They are scheduled to play the University of Florida freshman in Gainesville later this season.

The baby Seminoles will be attempting to extend their unbeaten streak to five games in the season's finale with the frosh Hurricanes.

The Seminoles carry an offensive attack into the game that has amassed a total of 141 points over a span of four games, while battling the opposition in a mere 19 points.

Florida State's ground attack is one of the best to come out of FSU thus far in the school's history.

Fullback Jim Calhoun leads the Seminoles in the mush over enemy territory with 310 yards in 54 attempts He has lost only 3 yards from the line of scrimmage.

Halfbacks George Verspuille and Bud Whitehead increase the scoring potential of the Seminole backfield considerably

Verspuille has racked up a total of 175 yards in 29 carries while his partner Whitehead runs second to Calhoun with 288 yards in 41 carries.

Touchdown wise Calhoun, Whitehead, and Verspuille lead the parade with seven, five and three TD's respectively, and have accounted for 80 of the teams 141 total points.

In the air lanes, even though the Seminoles have failed to score they have picked up 291 yards off of 33 attempted and 21 completed passes.

Quarterback, Bob Conrad, does most of the passing for the Seminoles and has 18 bullseyes out of 28 shots for 237 yards. He has had three intercepted.

The Baby Seminoles possess a well rounded offensive machine in the fact that they have a forward wall capable of opening the holes for the backs to shoot through.

Defensively speaking, the Seminoles have been powerful enough to hold the opposition to 473 yards and two touchdowns on the ground in the four games played to date.

FSU's pass defense is not lacking either. The Seminoles have intercepted seven of thirty passes thrown and held yardage gained by air to 117.

One touchdown has been scored via the air route.

Gym Team Opens Season At Louisville Meet Tomorrow

Florida State's high ranking gymnastics team will open its 1957-58 season tomorrow in Louisville, Kentucky, when they compete in the Annual Louisville Turner Invitational Meet.

The meet should draw Turner teams from the north plus a possible entry from the University of Illinois nationally ranked gym team.

Accompanying former FSU NCAA all-around champ Jack Miles, will be Roger Webb, veteran tumbler and free exercise man who will compete in the all around event with Chet Witten, Bill Beaver, and Miles.

Non ineligible for collegiate competition, Miles will be taking advantage of the AAU competition to prepare for the National AAU's and a possible trip to Moscow for the World Youth games next year.

Freshmen tumblers and trampolinists, Dave Carmoll and Brandon Baker, will round out the squad making the trip.

In order that younger team members can get the added experience of the Turner meet, the Seminoles top three all - around men Chuck Cole, Larry Malmlin, and Fernando Lecouna will remain at home

Those three men will comprise Florida State's team in the Mid-west Open to be held in Chicago in a few weeks.

This year's entire gymnastic team will first perform before the FSU student body at the annual Gymkanna show November 15-16

All Grid Opponents Play Road Games

Florida State's three remaining grid opponents leave their home grounds to play games this weekend

Mississippi Southern journeys to Jackson, Miss. where they will meet the University of Houston Cougars. The Southerners are undefeated in seven games and have only been scored upon once this season.

Mississippi Southern is rated from a six to twelve point favorite.

The Seminoles meet the Southerners next weekend in Hattiesburg

The Auburn Tigers, victorious in six games this season, leave Cliff Hare Stadium in Auburn and will travel to Birmingham to meet Mississippi State

The Tampa Spartans move north to Jacksonville, Ala. where they will take on Jacksonville State. The Spartans now own a 2-2 record. The Jax squad is rated as an extremely dangerous passing team.

Russians Leading U.S. In Scientific Development

Editor's Note: The following is an article submitted by Junior Physics Major Joe Nogers, a 17-year-old native of Ireland. It does not necessarily represent FLAMBEAU policy, but is the expression of an individual student's opinion.

BY JOE NEGGERS

Beep, beep ..... from outer space these sounds should carry a significant message to the free world and to the American people in particular.

When Sputnik was launched by the Russians a few weeks ago, this was a warning to the West that the Russians had not only caught up with us technologically, but were ahead of the Americans in the all important phase of development.

Now at the eve of the fortieth anniversary of the Revolution, a second satellite in the air, fifty-six times as heavy and four times as far up as the Vanguard, the American plan to launch in March, the question we all ask is: "What can we expect now?" In view of their accomplishments in the past months, I would not put the moon beyond reach of their apparently rapidly developing space-technology.

The second and more important question we should ask ourselves is this: "Where does the free world and in particular the United States come in?" Surely we have an IRBM, we have shot a rocket four thousand miles up according to the Los Angeles Times that is; but how do they compare with the results of the Russians? We may deny being in a race with the Russians, but we are nevertheless.

There seems to be a few myths, the free world, including the Americans, has been believing in, which we are shocked to find false.

First of all there is the idea that a technology cannot develop in a totalitarian state. This is certainly not true, since a centrally controlled government can use its human resources indeed very efficiently. A good example would be Nazi Germany and the Pennemunde project.

Secondly, the industrial output and total production of consumer goods does not have anything to do with the level of scientific development.

Many errors have been made by the government and the people. The treatment of scientists, the nation's most important ingredient in the defense against the red-tide, is one of the biggest ones.

Is not it a terrible blot upon the nation's conscience, to think what has happened to so many eminent minds like Oppenheimer and Paulina? Accusations of un-American activities, because they were criticizing issues which needed criticism; taking away their possibility of working on vital defense projects, which they were the ones first to develop. This is a disgrace.

Is not this treatment by government inquisitions the cause that so many scientists will never go to work for the government and do the research the nation needs to regain the technological superiority necessary to defend itself and the free world against any aggression from the East?

Why then the administration failed to give priority to the missile program? Why has it allowed the degrading inter-service rivalry instead of embarking upon a unified program? A rivalry which caused the expulsion of an expert in the field of rocketry because he was trying hard enough for a priority of one of the programs.

And then, aren't the people to blame also? To blame for their self-certified lethargy. Why have the Russians been so successful in creating a vast basis of scientists, engineers and technicians? Because in Russia a scientist is better paid, looked up to, the pride of the nation, who has a lot more individual freedom than the masses and not vice-versa.

Because in Russia the educational system has been far more effective in developing people in the scientific and mathematical doctrines. Here the high-school student is given the freedom to select his own curriculum, as a result seventh grade arithmetic is to be taught in college.

We turn out large quantities of teachers, who know exactly how to teach, but not what to teach. How can one be expected to teach mathematics with only a rudimentary background in the field; how can one be expected to teach any of the sciences, when he has had no laboratory work at all? Subject than a high school graduate should have, how can a teacher ignorant of the subject he's teaching ever hope to inspire his students to become interested in that subject.

What is the current interest in the sciences? When one mentions the fact that one is majoring in a subject like mathematics, physics or almost any of the sciences, one is regarded as an "odd-ball," "egg-head," or something like that.

Instead one has to be majoring in bait-casting or any such field, where one has plenty of opportunity to be turned into an educational individual, as adjusted as a matter of fact that it will take many a year to recover even originality, instead of being stuffed full of platitudes, cliches and generalizations.

In view of all this, is not it time to examine our conscience? What have we done with the liberty that's given us? Have we used it to help give the United States the prestige it needs as the leading democracy in the world? No, instead the nation has stumbled on a Little Rock, not realising that prestige it needs as the leading democracy in the world is realizing that the prestige lost outside was more vital to defense than the whole ring of air-bases surrounding Russia, the 100 billion dollars given in foreign aid to the rest of free world.

Indeed Pakistan demagogy has in one stroke destroyed all of the confidence we had built up with much effort. It was time to wake our efforts at disputes at home instead of dissing ourselves to the preservation of peace, we soon will have to dispute anymore; we'd all be singing the "International" instead of the "Star Spangled Banner" and we'd be celebrating November 7 and May 1 instead of July 4.

Have we used it to educate ourselves in the sciences and the teachings of a communist society, so that we can counter and then see where we're superior and where we're in need of improvement? In any case knowledge always does more good than ignorance.

Have we used it to prevent any irresponsible attacks on open-minded individuals like so many of the scientists who had their security clearance for no reason at all, but the fact that they had an opinion on some issue? A negative answer prevails.

In a brilliant display of stupidity the United States during the last three years has succeeded in extinguishing some of the most distinguished scientific talent at her disposal.

These are some things I would like to put under the spotlight. It is not in my power to solve them.

To do this we need an outright effort by all of us. I only hope we succeed and prevail in an ever tightening struggle for power.

Dean Of Women Warren Familiar Faculty Member

By MARCI SEITZ

One of the busiest and most familiar members of Florida State's faculty is Miss Katherine Warren, dean of women at FSU.

Most women students have been acquainted with Dean Warren since pre-freshman days when their letters were headed "Office of the Dean of Women".

Born in Montgomery, Ala., Miss Warren moved to Jacksonville when she was five years old, and claims Florida as her "home state."

Miss Warren has been affiliated with FSU since the days she first picked Florida State College for Women to attend. "Because all my friends were going here."

"I've never regretted it," she added.

Reading, Chopin, and dog, "Scotty" are Miss Warren's special interests besides work "which comes first of course" and her home in Allaistor Point.

TWO ENCOUNTERS

In the ten years that Miss Warren has been dean of women, two of many encounters stand out in her mind.

"One" said Dean Warren with a twinkle in her eye, "was the time I was told I reminded a student exactly of Ethel Barrymore".

Another amusing instance happened while Miss Warren was shopping in Jacksonville. "A student friend I knew well passed me by without recognition." Miss Warren called after the student and was taken aback when the student turned and said, "Oh, Dean Warren, I didn't recognize you, you looked so nice!" Miss Warren explained that at the time she was wearing a hat.

Dean Warren is deeply devoted to FSU and Tallahassee. "I would not exchange FSU or Tallahassee for any other school or town," said the dean. "In all my travels I have never come across a college that has a nicer student body, better faculty, or prettier campus."

TRAVELED TRAVELER

Miss Warren's travels have included most of the United States, Mexico, Canada, and Europe. Next summer Miss Warren is planning another trip to Europe. "Only this time," said Miss Warren, "I'm going to rent a car and drive it myself."

Miss Warren has two months vacation this summer due to the fact she refrained from taking her summer vacation last year.

Dean Warren spends each Christmas at the home of her married sister who lives in Decatur, Alabama. Miss Warren's nephew Douglas spends his summers in Allaistor Point with his favorite Aunt.

READIN' AND WRITIN'

Miss Warren enjoys writing as well as reading, and has found time to have several articles published including "Education for Living in Dormitories and Residence Halls" in the Journal of The National Association of Deans of Women.

Miss Warren received her bachelor of arts in Mathematics here in 1933. During her four years in Florida State College for Women, Miss Warren was a member of Kappa Delta Pi, Phoenix Key, Mortar Board and Delta Delta Delta social sorority.

Miss Warren received her MA in 1939 at Columbia University Teachers College, and had one year of study at the University of North Carolina and Columbia University.

SPIRIT OF '47

Dean of Women since 1947, she was prior to that time secretary to the dean of students and assistant dean of students.

During the years 1948-55, Miss Warren served as president of the Florida Association of Deans and Counselors. She is secretary-treasurer, National Council of Alpha Lambda Delta, chairman, University Section, National Association of Deans of Women; program chairman, Regional meeting of Southern College Personnel Association; and a member of the Executive Board of the National Association of Deans of Women.

Dean Warren has been active for several years in the American Association of University Women, having served that organization as president of the Tallahassee Branch, state chairman of the Creative Arts Commission, president of the Florida Division and chairman of the National Committee to study Associate Membership.

Close Awarded Religious Grant

Carolyn Close, Miami, who was women's vice-president of the student body of Florida State University during her senior year last year, has been awarded a fellowship for attending the Candler Della, to do graduate work toward a masters degree in religious education.

Mrs. Theodore Stark, Minneapolis, chairman of the society's a Fiftieth Anniversary Scholarship Fund and the fellowship awarded annually to an outstanding undergraduate Tri-Delt on American campus had been given the FSU graduate on a basis of leadership and ability to study to work with other people. Miss Close is now enrolled at Kenia Theological School, Pittsburgh, Pa.

In addition to being women's vice-president, she has held student office held by a woman in the of FSU campus. Carolyn was a member of Mortar Board, the Student Senate, Varsity Debate Team, University Singers and the Disciple Student Fellowship.

Editorial Club Formed Here

The possibility of establishing chapters of Sigma Delta Chi and Theta Sigma Phi, national editorial fraternities, on the FSU campus was discussed at a meeting by about twenty editorial majors and minors in the press and room of such a men's room Dean Campbell of the School of Journalism, and Dr. Jack McIntyre professor of Journalism.

McIntyre stated that before these national fraternities could establish local chapters there must first be an editorial club on campus.

Meeting in the second floor lounge of Reynolds Club, the group after a short break for refreshments passed a motion made by Jane Spencer that Jo McIntyre head a committee to plan a tentative program for the club.

This committee will then report into the rules for becoming a club under university regulations.

The group set its next meeting for November 26.

It was pointed out that Tampa and Tallahassee journalists would support the establishment of campus chapters of Sigma Delta Chi and Theta Sigma Phi.

The Universities of Florida and Miami both have such campus chapters of these fraternities.

Pep Parade Set This Afternoon

A pep parade is on the agenda for this afternoon in order to generate enthusiastic backing and support for the FSU Seminoles as they meet Miami here tonight.

Originators of the idea, the Phi Kappa Taus and the Lambda Chis, have invited all other fraternities and sororities as well as any other students on campus owning or having access to a car to participate.

This showing of school spirit was formulated by the students themselves. It has been left up to it to on own initiative without pushing from any source," commented Phi Tau and Lambda Chi spokesmen.

All participants should meet at 6 p m on the corner of Jefferson and Wildwood. The color full motorcade will begin its parade at 3:30, and will go through the campus as follows: the route of the Homecoming parade down-town, and will wind up with another drive through campus.

suming that the president is not willing or able to use discretion in choosing and deciding matters I say to you "trust your president's judgment," said Greenfield.

Mac Kamins then asked Greenfield, "Has announced extended cabinet meetings in the capacity of the position you intend to create?"

Greenfield replied, "Yes" to the query.

Mac Kamins said, "Don't you think Senate should legislate first and then have the presidential appointments rather than have the presidential appointment and then legalize?"

Discussion ceased following the failure of an attempt by Senator Carl Butler to amend the bill in question. He proposed the removal of the clause "to serve with the cabinet."

Men's Vice President Murray called for the question on the bill. His motion was seconded. The vote was taken by roll call, and the bill failed to pass by a 36-5 vote.

Doctor's Degree Should Cost You $10,000, Survey Shows

It costs about $10,000 for a college graduate to go on and get a doctor's degree, according to a study made by the Educational Research and Service.

A 107-page study of questionaires sent the 128 persons who received degrees at FSU between Feb 2, 1952, and Feb 2, 1957 was made by the research office under the direction of Dr. W. Hugh Stickler.

The study found that the average cost of 103 reporting on the question was about $10,000 for all but post-graduate study leading to a doctorate. This cost included tuition and fees, living expenses, incidental expenses, and similar capenses. It did not however, include loss of income during doctoral work. About half of the cost was financed from contributions, fellowships, assistantships, waiver of fees, veteran's benefits and other forms of financial aid.

On the 87 graduates reporting on the question, 34 or 39.1 said the highest average salary made before starting their doctoral study was $4,214, while the average reported after setting the degree was $6,433. The difference of about $2,000 would finance the cost of a doctorate over a five-year period.

The average time actually spent working on doctoral study, 80 reporting, was 3.4 years, while the overall time lapse between starting the study and completing it was eight years.

The age at which students received the doctorate varied widely, the report showed, but the average was between 31 and 35. Of 120 replying, two received the doctorate before reaching 25 and five received it between the years of 46 and 50.

Those earning a doctorate in the physical and biological sciences got the degree much earlier than those studying in education. The report showed, "Virtually all of the individuals working in these areas completed the doctorate before age 33," the report said. "On the other hand, that was about the age at which the youngest graduates in the area of education completed their work for the doctoral degree."

Of the 120 replying to the questionaire here is the area of study in which various ones got a doctorate: biological science, 16; education, 25; home economics, 3; humanities and social sciences, 17; marriage and family, 14; music, 10; physical science, 28; and psychology, 17.

Magnolia Has Homecoming Spirit

Residents of Magnolia Hall haven't given up yet. They think it's still Homecoming.

We're the only group on campus that has bothered to have house decorations for the big Miami game," said a Magnolia spokesman.

Still feeling the spirit of Homecoming (they placed second in the men's residence division of the Homecoming decorations competition), the Magnolia gentlemen have not taken decked out once again.

This is the proclaim that the Miami "Hurricane" is going to turn out so be just a "breeze" for FSU's inspired Seminoles.

BY ANNETTE McINTOSH

A wagon filled with hay and Wesleyites is scheduled to leave the Wesley Foundation at 8 p.m. tomorrow for the first fall social event, an old-fashioned hayride!

Destination of the jaunty crew will be the Reservation, where they will unload, to eat and dance, according to De Anne Head, recreation chairman. She hopes that you'll plan to attend, bringing your friends and dates.

Every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday at 7:30 a.m. Matins is held in the chapel. This early service is designed especially to help those attending to better accomplish their day's tasks. This week's subjects will be "Endurance," "Sacrifice," and "Dedication."

The regular Sunday calendar: Church services in the chapel, 8:30 a.m. and 10:45 a.m. Sunday school, 9:30 a.m.; supper, 6:15 p.m.; Forum Hour, 8:15 p.m., this week's topic, "The Nature of the Church"; and Vespers, 7:15 p.m.

On Tuesday, Nov. 5, the Disciples Student Fellowship, a national organization for colleges students of Christian Churches, was honored to have Garlan Hanklin, president of DSF Ecclesia, as their guest speaker.

Garlan is a senior at Iowa State University majoring in Sociology. He is taking what he would have been his senior year out of school to travel for the Disciples Office of Student Work and for the Work Camp Committee of the Department of Social Welfare. Last summer he served on a cattle boat of Heifer Project, a relief program for refugees in Germany sponsored by several denominations in Hamburg, Germany. He visited several refugee camps in Europe. served in the Disciples-sponsored work camp at East Kilbride, Scotland and visited some of the Churches of Christ in Great Britain. His experiences were the center of his most interesting talk.

I hope that many of you heard about this event, although unavoidable circumstances prevented a column being printed

Gator Freshmen Have Two Prexies

The Freshmen Class at the University of Florida has two presidents. One is John Donahue who is serving as class president this semester, and the other is Bud Allen who will serve as the class's leading officer next semester.

This was all brought about when the election results ended in a tie between the two men. This situation had never occurred before in U of F political history, and really stumped the Honor Court when it came before them for settlement.

The Court resolved the issue, however, by dividing the term among the two contestants.

This week at the Westminster Fellowship Sunday—9:45 a.m., Sunday school, with Dana Beates presenting the program. 11 a.m., church, 5:45 p.m., fellowship and supper, Tuesday—9:30 p.m., devotions at the Westminster House. The Baptist Student Union's Presbyterian Guild has installed Sunday evening, Oct. 27, at Immanuel Baptist Church. Rev. John Hunt presented the sermon. "Ye Are Chosen" Election of a Presbyterian Guild is a new event at the BSU this year. Those elected and installed were Nancy Turner, president; Pat Naff Carl Butler, Sarah Barnes, Jennie Wood, Arthur Chapman, Ann Parrish, Bettie Ann Gober, Bobbie Summerall, Barry Willis, and Don Nelson. They will serve on the Council for a term of one year, including early fall of '58, relisting other freshman into BSU's program.

"The grossest people on campus are undoubtedly those of the BSU, for their new home, corner of Copeland and Call Streets is nearing completion. Plans are for an OPEN HOUSE from 4-10 p.m. next Friday, an Open House to which all denominations or non-denominations are more than welcome (see story in this issue).

The Lutheran Student Association elected officers at its last meeting. They are as follows: president, Phyllis Miller; vice-president, Angela Ambrosini; secretary, Susan Field; treasurer, Martha Anderson Luthren; student action secretary Sharon Gruel; Inter-faith council, Ron Wood.

There will be an important meeting Sunday night at the home of Susan Field, 2302 W. Tennessee. The new officers, to be installed then, will constitute a panel presentation, "Movement with a Purpose." Transportation will be provided from in front of Westcott at 5:45 p.m.

All LSA are urged to make plans to attend a retreat at Gainesville Nov. 22-24. Those attending include students from Florida, Georgia, and South Carolina.

The LSA had its meeting in the form of a service project last week. The group babysat from 3:30-6:30 p.m. with the children of members of the St. Stephens Lutheran Church while their parents attended a consecrational dinner.

Does the "Religious News" seem to you to be growing shorter every week? Ah-ha, yes, such is the case! The unknown reasons, very little items is coming in to me. Admittedly, each group will not have events to report every week, but can it be that some aren't carrying on any activities at all? Each group should be organized by now and have a program underway. Please have a representative contact me as soon as possible at 236 Landis or the Tri-Delt house. And those responsible for publicity from the already established groups, keep up your good work and come and try on hand in news weekly. Remember that having events before your student members will be to your advantage, for it will mean greater attendance, enthusiasm, and participation.

'Four-Frat Hop' Scheduled

By RUTH FRITCHIE

Something new, and from all reports pretty exciting, is slated for Saturday night at the American Legion Home. A novel inter-fraternity dance, billed as the "Four-Frat Hop," will feature a combo from the Royal Palace night club.

The four fraternities sponsoring the dance—which is only for members of those fraternities and their dates—are Delta Tau Delta, Theta Chi, Phi Kappa Tau, and Sigma Chi.

According to Dick Smith, Theta Chi social chairman, the idea behind this intra-fraternity dance, is to develop a feeling of unity among the Greeks and build more school spirit. Other similar dances are to be scheduled later this winter.

Could this be the year?

SPE thinks so. So confident of the outcome of the Miami-FSU game are the big Epsi Chi that they have challenged the SPE chapter at Miami to a "skin" to be wagered on the outcome of the same game. This skin is a large section of sheep-skin which has the results of the game and the SPE crest painted on it. Wonder what kind of a deal we can buy the skin for the winning school's chapter.

The FSU Sig Eps won a skin last year from Mississippi Southern and it is not display on one of the walls of the SPE house on Park Ave.

The SAEs are giving their annual Sweetheart dance tomorrow night at the house. The Commodores will be on hand to furnish the musical mood.

Highlight of the evening will be the crowning of a new sweetheart by outgoing sweetheart Carol Ann Brown. President Phil Hunt will present the winner with the large red carnations.

The SAEs were all shaken up during Homecoming weekend when their trophy was taken from the Tri-Delt house. The boys were afraid the trophy would be recovered in time for the dance, but just as the SAEs had begun to give up hope of regaining their trophy, two Tri-Delts recovered it.

Alpha Chi Omega has come up with a new idea for furthering sorority relations between actives. The AXOs gave a "come as you are" breakfast for the Tri-Delts at 8 a.m. Saturday or Homecoming weekend.

Girls gathered in the Alpha Chi house for coffee and rolls which were followed by songs to bring about the Homecoming spirit.

Following the game tonight there will be an Open House at the Pi Kapp mansion. Saturday night the Pi Kappa Alpha group when promises to be a "thunderful" Combo Party. Music for the evening will be supplied by a combo from Florida A&M. Last night the Pi Kapps entertained the Kaps. Along with dancing and refreshments, a first class skit was presented for the girl's entertainment.

The Alpha Xi Deltas are holding their Open House after the Miami game President Jan Kaminis said that all students are invited to attend. . . . The Alpha Xis attended an informal party at the Phi Kappa Tau house last Wednesday.

The Kas are planning a dancing weekend. Tonight after the game the boys and their dates will head back to the Kappa Alpha Mansion for dancing. Saturday night there will be another record party at the house.

Monday evening the AOPis announced their Man of the Year. Bob Lanaford of Lambda Chi Alpha. The girls serenaded the LCAs and presented Bob with a trophy on which was inscribed "AOPi Man of the Year '58."

Last night the Delta Tau Delta fire truck was heard shrieking down Park Ave. to pick up some Sigma Kappas for an informal party at the Delt house.

To reiterate Halloween the Phi Mu actives and pledges had a costume party with a prize for the best mother-daughter costume.

The ADPis entertained the and the Gamma Phi pledge class gave their version of a "spook-hop" pledge meeting. The Gamma Phis would like to know who "borrowed" their turkey . . . The Delta Gams gave a dinner in honor of their province secretary who was visiting here earlier this week. Last weekend the DG pledges entertained the actives with a Halloween Party at Lake Bradford.

The back yard of the Theta Chi house was a scene of a Theta Chi-ADPi Carnival Wednesday night. A MidWay with a variety of games and a fish-bowl featuring Theta Chi talent contributed to the carnival spirit. Cotton candy and punk lemonade were the finishing touches.

The Florida State Panhellenic Association is sponsoring a workshop tomorrow from 10 to 2 Ann Kelly, president, and all sorority members, both actives and pledges, are invited."

Following a general meeting in Longmire Auditorium, group discussions will take place. Topics for the discussions include rush, to be led by Dean Katherine Warren and Panhellenic President Ann Kelly; scholarship, to be led by Dr. Hoffman and Barbara McCraney; Miss Williams and Patty Parker will direct the group discussing social activities, and Miss Guthridge and Gayle Gardner the sorority and campus affairs discussion group

Trailer Park Begins Plan Of Community Improvement

By VIRGINIA DELEVAN

A wide-scale program of community improvement and governmental organization will soon be initiated at the University Trailer Park.

Trailerites, with the aid of the university Maintenance Department, will clean up, paint up, fix up, according to Don Rathbun, student manager of the park, and James Presley, housing manager of metro residence.

The trailer park, originally an eye property, was moved several blocks last December to its present location on West Campus.

Since this time, residents numbering some sixty families, have been gradually improving the park by sodding lawns, planting shrubs and flowers, and making additions to their trailers. A recent innovation has been the installation of street lights by the University.

IN THE RUT

Due to the heavy rains this fall, the dirt roads in the area are badly rutted and difficult to travel. The maintenance department owns county equipment, will straighten these roads and give them a permanent asphalt surface as soon as the county completes its own road project.

The community wash house, used as a laundry, will acquire a fresh coat of paint and incidental repairs.

Currently lacking a place to meet together as a group, residents will soon move into a combination recreation hall-community house.

A large building from an abandoned area of West Campus has been moved onto the park site and is being wired and redesigned for a maintenance crew. When this is done, the community will plan to paint and furnish the building.

This will give us a place to get together and discuss our mutual problems," Rathbun said.

SECOND HALF

The second half of the improvement program can then be put into operation. Under the leadership of Rathbun, a constitution has been drawn up and will take effect with the university's approval.

It establishes a student government whose aims are stated as:

1- Improving relations with the university.

2- Promotion of the interests of married students and their families.

3- Action as a legislative force in internal community problems.

4- General community improvement.

Voting in districts, each constituting not less than five or more than fifteen trailers," readers have elected a representative to serve each district. These are Mrs. Barbara Rathbun, Mrs. Rose Fernandez, Jim Hale, Joe Dorsey, Carl Dyas, Bob Crowell, and Rathbun. He will serve as chairman.

At the completion of the Community House this representative council will begin regular sessions and a general election will be held to elect a mayor to serve as executive.

Senate Seeks Complete Probe Of Morrison's

A resolution proposing complete investigation of Morrison's Food Service on the FSU campus was passed in Senate by a unanimous vote yesterday.

Introduced by Freshman Senator Carl Buthe the resolution proposed an investigation of the quantity, quality and cost ratio of food served in the cafeteria on campus which are served by Morrison's.

The resolution was made and adopted in response to petitions being circulated in men's and women's halls.

Senator Don Sink proposed an amendment to Senator Buthe's proposal suggesting a specific investigation of the West Hall Snack Bar.

Senator Sonia Moreno then proposed that it merely be added to the wording of the amendment as to what cost, quantity, and quality would not be the only things considered in the investigation.

VARIETY

The reported complaints from students about the lack of variety and the unbalanced meals were given as the reasons for Senate taking such a move.

Butler reread the resolution with the amendment, with the resolution being passed by unanimous voice vote.

In other Senate action, Sophomore Senator Matteo Hair reported that the reduction of prices for FSU students at the Tallahassee theaters has been investigated. A complete report will be made in next week's Senate meeting.

Senate also considered the nominations of several appointed committee members in various phases of student government.

All names unopposed except for one person on the Board of Publications were passed unanimously by the senators.

Madge Strain, recently appointed by President Greenfield to the board, had her appointment questioned by Senator Ronnie Clark.

Clark who said he had no knowledge of her qualifications, felt that the Election Appointments Committee should investigate each applicant thoroughly to determine whether or not they had sufficient background to be a capable member of a committee.

Senator Hair who had originally introduced the motion to approve all the candidates included in the Strain withdrew his motion in order to allow the committee a week in which to investigate Miss Strain's qualifications, reporting back to Senate next week.

SECRETARY OF HONOR

Senate also approved a bill to create as a full cabinet position a Secretary of Honor.

The position which has officially been until this time called "Undersecretary of the Interior in Charge of Honor."

The bill was introduced to Senate last year at the end of the semester, but Senate failed to have a quorum to vote on it.

It was passed this time with little debate, on unanimous vote by the senators.

The position is presently filled by Joyce Weatherup, and includes such duties as publicizing the honor system and revising honor procedures.

Dad's Day Scheduled Only For Players' Dads This Year

Dad's Day, an annual institution during the football season since its beginning several years ago, will be a med only at fathers of football players this year.

A meeting of four student leaders with Dr. W. J. Tait of Men's Physical Education produced the decision to limit the scope of the affair and provided for a parent's weekend in the spring.

Student government and already initiated plans for a weekend for the parents of all students during the annual circus presentation in May.

The feeling of the student leaders, according to Dr. Tait was that a widespread effort at this time to get parents to the campus would adversely affect the spring project.

CLUB BURDENED

They also felt that organizations are burdened during the fall term with several special events and that to add another would be an excessive load.

They were very much in favor of having the football players' Dads honored at the Auburn game but were unanimously agreed that the occasion should be limited to the football group.

These student leaders were very formal in their discussion of this project." Dr. Tait said, "and in my opinion I value highly their frank and thoughtful opinion."

It seems sensible and practical," he continued, "to center this year's Dad Day program on the football group and I will ask Mr. Cubbon to every way needed to carry out this limited program."

The recommendation that the present Dad's Day program be discontinued was made last spring in an evaluative session on the success of last year's program.

PARENTS FOR CIRCUS

The new weekend, which will coincide with the FSU Circus "Big Show," was formerly fixed by the celebrating of high school girls by the various sororities on campus.

Under the new student government proposal, every student will be requested to invite his parents for the occasion. With special activities other than the circus performances scheduled for their benefit.

Many of the former Dad's Day activities will be included in the Parents' Weekend, with the affair coming under the direction of the student body president's cabinet.

The meeting which made final the plans for the limiting of the years Dad's Day came as the result of contacts between Admiral Business Manager Eddie Cubbon, Dean of Students R. R. Oglesby, and Dr. Tait.

broadcast the concert live from Opperman Music Hall. As special features, the composers who have works on the program will be interviewed just before the program starts so that the radio audience will have a better idea of what will be on the program.

During the intermission Carlisle Floyd, Dr. Lee Ramsey, and Dr. Wiley Housewright will discuss American music in a more general way. This year WFSU-FM has broadcast five School of Music faculty recitals and the recent University Symphony concert.

Gibbs Scholarships Available Here

Two national scholarships for college senior women are being offered for 1958-59 by the Katharine Gibbs School.

These awards were established in 1955 as a memorial to Miss Katharine M. Gibbs, founder and first president of the school.

Each scholarship consists of full tuition ($785) for the secretarial training course plus an additional cash award of $500, totaling $1,285.

The winners may select any one of the four Gibbs schools for their training: Boston, New York Montclair, or Providence.

Winners are chosen by the Scholarship Committee on the basis of college academic record, personal and character qualifications, financial need, and potentialities for success in business.

Each college or university may recommend two candidates, and each candidate must have this official endorsement. FSU students who may be interested in competing for one of these Katharine Gibbs awards may obtain full information from the University Placement Bureau.

Flying Seminoles 'Novel Tradition'

By WARREN GERARD

It is not unusual to see a high-stepping drum major with plumed hat leading the band onto the football field at halftime.

But Florida State University has a novel approach in keeping with Seminole tradition.

In addition to the drum major and majorettes the Marching Chiefs are introduced to the crowds by "Flying Seminoles" "B" Carroll and Ted Daniels, in skimpy Seminole regalia.

FOUR-YEAR TRADITION

The "Flying Seminole" tradition was started at FSU four years ago by Dick Pockett and Ed Franklin. Now that they have left the brightly lit field they can watch their two successors present routines before thousands of halftime spectators.

Ted and "B" tried out for the "Flying Seminoles" in May of 1956 and last year they appeared in the "Pow Wow" for the first time. Later they performed in the Orange Bowl for the Miami game and also for the Garnet and Gold game. This year they appear with the band at all games, including trips to the Mississippi Southern and Tampa games.

Ted Daniels, who is a sophomore from Clearwater, started his gymnastic training with his high school band five years ago. After graduation he intends to teach high school band.

GEORGIA BOY

"B" Carroll attended high school in Statesboro, Georgia and is a junior. After graduation he intends to teach high school English or study dance in New York.

Both Ted and "B" are on scholarship and when this writer inquired on the amount of time consumed for rehearsal on a show, the answer was a tired look and 15 fingers for hours a

Graduate Students Given Fellowships

Three Florida State University graduate students have been awarded research fellowships for studies in the physiology of smell and taste.

Clarence W. Hardiman of Auburndale will get $2700 and tuition and fees. Thomas E. Champaign, Ill., $2300 and tuition, both from the U. S. Public Health Service. Hardiman is studying the mechanism of taste, using a variety of experiments on animals and men, and Tucker the mechanism of smell.

Kamal S. Yacoub of Lebanon will get $3800 during the academic year from the Chattanooga Medical Co. for research in taste.

Typography An Art, Says Noted Designer

The type you're now reading has something to say. Words talk but type also speaks its message, according to Sol Maikoff, famous commercial artist and consultant.

Speaking to advertising, art and journalism students here Wednesday evening, Maikoff emphasized that the correct choice of type the construction of types on a page and correct placement all contribute to easier reading and a more functional and pleasant design.

Maikoff, whose talk was sponsored by Alpha Delta Sigma, described typography as an art rather than a trade. "In reality, he said, the good typographer paints on the printed page with the printed word. He communicates the thoughts of an author graphically."

Called by Island Printers, a typographer's trade journal, "one of the generation's better typographers," Maikoff, who also teaches at the Atlanta Art Institute, commented that advertising should be offer the best opportunity to select types and create layouts which reflect the personality of the advertiser and his message.

"And appearance is greatly enhanced by the use of contrast," he said. The combination of dark and light, as evidenced by dark sentence in contrast to the adjacent sentences, is one example of contrast in typography.

Earlier in the day, Maikoff, while talking to an advertising layout class, encouraged the discarding of capital letters. Our language would be easier and would print educating students.

Tuition Rates Up At Chicago

Tuition rates jumped from $720 to $1,000 as of the fall of 1120 at the University of Chicago. The rate increase becomes effective beginning this summer.

Chicago officials explained that the increase was necessary in order to give the faculty pay increases that they deserve, and to hire new professors to replace those who have died or retired.

Chicago is a private university. Students tuition fees pay approximately one-third of the cost of Senate's Investigating Again! Guns Turn On 'Who's Who'

BY KAY WRIGHT

"Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities" came in for its share of attack in Student Senate Wednesday.

The motion was passed.

A resolution introduced by Junior Senator Gerry Gordon called for the establishment of an investigating committee to look into the organization and determine whether or not Senate should take action on the matter.

Gordon referring to a FLAMBEAU editorial from the October 22 edition, told the senators that the organizations should be investigated on both the national and local levels.

ENTIRE ORGANIZATION

"I believe the method of choosing members for "Who's Who" on this campus should be investigated as well as a n investigation of the entire organization," he said.

Gordon's action came when new business matters were being considered. He proposed a committee of four to look into the operation of the national Yearbook.

The resolution was passed unanimously by the 22 senators present. Although there was no quorum present, no point of order was called, allowing the Senate to continue in session, although no bills could be considered at the time.

The complete committee report will be given at the fist Senate meeting after the Christmas vacation.

In another action, Senator Pat Manning moved that Florida Student Body President Arnold Greenfield be invited to make the annual "State of the Campus" address at the next meeting. The motion was passed.

The appointments of Bill Smith, assistant attorney general; Mason Stinson, Board of Publications, and Rufus Jennings, Junior Senator, were all confirmed unanimously.

Sophomore Senator Mattox Hair moved acceptance of the committee's final report on the investigation of the prices of movie tickets at local theaters.

Annual DTD Slave Auction Set Tuesday

An authentic Greek slave auction will be held on the Westcott Hall steps, Tuesday, at 4:30 p.m.

The slaves—who will be clad in prison sacks—are members of Gamma Phi Beta sorority who are holding their 2nd Annual Greek Slave Auction

ANYTHING?

Approximately 65 of the Deltas will take part in the auction to be sold to the highest girl bidder. The feminine slave master may also command the Delt to do anything she wishes him to do for an hour.

Last year, the Delta served dinner to the girls, sang in their sorority houses, took a plunge in Wescott pool, washed the girls' car, and just about anything else they asked.

Normally the bids start from a quarter and may range to more than five dollars as two or more girls bid against each other for their slave.

$50 WORTH

The Delta collected over $50 from their auction last year for donate to the Campus Chest.

This year, the Delta will contribute all proceeds to the Tallahassee Easter Seal Crippled Children's Rehabilitation Center.

A spokesman for the fraternity said they were thinking of a home which does as much for the crippled children of Tallahassee, as the Easter Seal Society does for polio, and enlarged facilities."

Four Women Given Alpha Lambda Delta Membership

Four students were initiated into Alpha Lambda Delta, freshmen women's honorary, Wednesday night in Longmire lounge.

They were Patsy Lirb and Louise Andrews, who were inducted in 1956, '57, or will graduate in 1958, and who were previous members of Alpha Lambda Delta will be eligible.

The scholarship is $750 for one year's study in any college or university where there is a chapter of Alpha Lambda Delta, but it may not be used for private research or travel.

No Pensacola Branch Scheduled For FSU

Sartre's Hell To Be Staged Here Tonight

By NANCY HANNAFORD

Hell is a small room containing three people in French existentialist Jean Paul Sartre's No Exit, to be presented by the Speech Department tonight at 8 p.m. in the Graduate School lounge.

Betty Caldwell, Bob Murray, Susan Caffrey, and Phil Johnson will play in this second experimental dramatic production, which was also presented last night.

Directing No Exit will be Jan Childers, a graduate student who worked for two years as workshop head of Theatre Brown's American Acting Company. She coached such young stars as Lloyd Bridges, Beverly Michaels, and Richard Monahan. Miss Childers has also studied with Stella Adler in New York, her home.

SQUARE ARENA

No Exit will be presented in a small, square arena, which, Director Childers states, is "the perfect media because it adds to the idea of hell with its closeness."

Demonstrating mainly that a man isn't what he dreams, pretends to be, or plans to be, but what he does, No Exit presents a particular challenge to actors because the characters are so unlike any people they might know, be like, or portray in any other play.

In addition, this evening's close-in-type production will be very gratifying for the playwright according to Miss Caldwell, because the audience is on all sides, prompters are out of the question, and usually there are every character but the bell boy will be on stage throughout the entire play.

Estelle, a nymphomaniac, will be played by Miss Caldwell, a junior speech major who last year starred as Sabrina in Sabrina Fair.

GYMNAST STARS

French collaborator Cradeau will be portrayed by Bob Murray, a senior gymkana star who is majoring in psychiatry. This will be Murray's setting debut.

Susan Caffrey, a senior transfer student from the Los Angeles City College, will play Ines, a lesbian.

The bell boy, who introduces the three people to their room and to hell, will be portrayed by Phil Johnson, who took part in the FSU production of Hamlet.

Jim Reed and Virgil Austin will be in charge of lighting and Walter Saric is assistant director.

No Exit was chosen for production, according to Director Childers, because it gives university audiences a rare chance to see existentialist theater.

She hastened to add, however, that the presentation is only a dramatic offering, not a philosophical study.

Two Sellout Crowds See Four Freshmen

Everything happens to Westerlas. symphony concerts—and convocations and examinations.

But the big place never rocked before as it did Wednesday night when the Four Freshmen alternately murmured and blasted forth, in their inimitable style, to the pleasure of two sell-out crowds.

Appearing under the sponsorship of Alpha Tau Omega, with proceeds benefiting Campus Chest, the Freshmen were introduced by Lewis Scaggin. From that moment on the Freshmen in person showed FSU the reason for their recorded popularity.

ROSS MC's

Ross Barbour, the drummer, did the talking and led the between-n-subers banter that tossed up the show. Top voice in the Freshmen, he doubles on trombone and bass, proved to be the comedian in the crowd.

Ross' brother, Don, did the great work on the guitar, while Bob Flanagan, the baritone, and Albers, did cool work on the xylophone, trumpet and bass. Ken replaced Ken Errair a year and a half ago.

Old favorites comprised most of the shows. Among the twenty-odd numbers they did—most of them from their album — were "Somebody Loves Me," "In This Whole Wide World," "Hob-day." "The Day Isn't Long Enough," "How Should I Tell Her," and "Day by Day."

DON SOLOS

The solo work of Don Barbour was something of a surprise. Known chiefly for their precision harmonies, the Freshmen seldom use solos. But not a sound came from the audience during Don's improvisation of his quiet "Baltimore Oriole" and "Funny Valentine". Chanting his style, he went wild on "Mr. B's Blues," backed up by an unusual trombone-trumpet duo.

The crowd fell out laughing at Ross and Bob's take-off on the hillbilly-rockabilly faction, a la Homer and Jethroe, singing their Christmas song. "You'd Better Watch Out, You'd Better Be Cool—"

It wasn't a good night for Ross Barbour. An abbreviated intermission, hordes of autograph-seekers, and a brief appearance on a local disk-jockey program after the Westcott show kept the Freshmen on the run.

This was ATO's third annual concert. Leaving here, the Freshmen will be in Gainesville this weekend for the University of Florida Fall Frolics.

Do Seminoles Ride Horses? Eight Students Offer Opinions

BY NANCY FRAZER

Should Seminoles ride horseback? And if so, should they gallop across the football field as FSU's official mascots?

Ever since the appearance of two noted authentic-looking Seminoles at the Homecoming Pow Wow, strong opinions both for and against this idea have been expressed.

When Art Albrecht a Flambeau columnist, returned to the Pow Wow scene of Homecoming Pow Wow, strong opinions both for and against this idea have been expressed.

When Art Albrecht a Flambeau columnist, returned to the Pow Wow scene of Homecoming President and suggested instead a beaked nose Sammy Seminole as mascot, several days after he had written for indicated even stronger feelings on the matter. Should FSU adopt these riders as the official mascots?

To get a cross section of campus opinion, the Flambeau conducted a recent pool, asking eight students what they thought of the new additions. The results range all the way from emphatic "No" to real enthusiasm, and contain several new suggestions as well.

LIKES HORSES

"I liked them—at first," said Joanne Kelk, a junior "They helped school spirit by leading the team onto the field. But after awhile I got tired of seeing them gallop around the stadium I think they were a bit overdone."

Ted Hook, a sophomore from Atlanta, told of three prospective students who were his guests at the Miami game.

"They were most impressed by the Seminoles on horseback," he said. "They'd never seen anything so unique and thought they added to school spirit and color."

Less enthusiastic was John White, a freshman, who thought that "there could be a much better representation for a Seminole mascot. I thought Albrecht looked more like a Seminole than the men on the head when he suggested a Sammy Seminole."

SEMINOLE RIDERS"

"Did Seminoles ride horses?" asked Ellen Beals, a sophomore, who thought the Seminole shirts and headdresses at the last game were a definite improvement but was less pleased by the horseback riders.

Jeanne Huber, a sophomore, was also glad to see real Seminole suits, but would like to see added the addition of "Indian ponies or better looking horses."

"They make a good showing in other schools," said Gene Powell a freshman. "But it's a bit hard on the field, isn't it?" he asked.

LIKES HORSES

James Dunn, a freshman "Liked them—just fine—as long as they stay on the horses."

A new suggestion was added by Pio Simone, a senior who asked: "What are the Seminoles on horseback, anyway? Certainly not mascots—other schools have animals, such as the Navy goat, etc. We were going to have a mascot why not run an Indian "pacer" or run around the field with a flag in his mouth, or something? I think the Seminoles on horseback look a bit ridiculous now!" she concluded.

Press Reports Wrong, Prexy 'Disturbed'

Despite press reports to the contrary, Florida State University is not considering opening a branch in Pensacola, Dr. Robert M. Strozer said yesterday.

Dr. Strozier, who said he was "somewhat disturbed" over the press coverage given a move by a Pensacola delegation which sought the establishment of an FSU branch in that city, denied any move on the university's part in that direction.

"The only official connection we have had with their cause," he said, "was a visit I made to the Cerry Field site while in the city speaking to the Kiwanis and Alumni chapters."

Strozier emphasized that he was not aware of the ultimate interest of the citizens in the establishment of a branch of the university there.

READS IN PAPER

"I did read in the paper that a delegation from Pensacola had visited the governor about the proposal and that he had not looked with disfavor on the matter," Strozier said. But no direct proposal has been made to us."

Chemstrand Corporation, which has a large plant located on the outskirts of Pensacola, approached the university officials last year on the possibility of establishing courses in chemistry and business for the benefit of employees in Pensacola.

"There is a possibility of setting up this type of arrangement," Strozier said, "but there are many complications involved."

"We commissioned Deans Davis and Rovetta to look into the possibility of such courses as proposed by Chemstrand, but nothing else has been done," he continued.

"I don't think this type of arrangement is impossible," Strozier said, "but this is an enormity different from a branch of the university in Pensacola."

The Pensacola Junior College is a definite factor to be considered in any of the planning stages. The college now offers courses on a pre-community college level, primarily for the benefit of local citizens and first and second year college students from the area.

NO DIFFERENCE

"If we did establish certain courses in Pensacola," Strozier said, "there would be no difference with the junior college."

It is expected that whatever courses might be offered in Pensacola would be in fields not overlapping the present community college program.

Congress offered by the university would be open to students of more advanced level, probably, than those offered in the Pensacola junior college, with emphasis on specialization.

Dean Rovetta's association by Rovetta and Dean Davis would be limited to the Chemstrand proposal, as any action taken by the government on a branch of the university would have to be made by the proper persons of the community themselves in direct contact to the university.

"There are no definite plans for any committees to visit Pensacola on the matter," Strozier concluded.

Five Parking Lots Set For Finishing

Five campus parking lots will be finished and marked shortly after the Thanksgiving holidays according to Gerald Jones, director of service units.

Receiving first priority to be completed are the Dick Cawthon, Old Dorm School, Home Economics, Library and Conrad parking lots.

"This will allow the lots to be fully utilized," he said.

During the Christmas holiday the Student Center parking lot will be improved so that students can drive around inside the lot without having to leave it if a parking space is missed Jones said.

The entrance of the Maintenance Building lot, used by ROTC students, has already been changed and spaces marked off to improve traffic conditions.

Also a drainage behind the Alpha Phi Omega and Kappa Alpha houses has been opened so cars can exit on Virginia Street a clay road which may be paved in a few months.

"The City of Tallahassee is allowing the university to use a lot to alleviate the APO house which holds 20 or 40 cars. The unpaved lot now in use is scheduled for improvement," he said.

Runaway Buick Does $150 Damage

Approximately $150 to $200 damage was done when a runaway Buick belonging to the Florida school bot this week hitting a parked parked on the main drive.

This was the worst accident that occurred on the campus this year, according to Gerald Jones, director of service units.

The Buick was parked in the center of the lot on a hill incline.

Owner of the runaway car, Gloria Dowling, admitted that she did not know how the car had overturned. She heard the crash shortly after leaving the school car and returned to find the vehicle involved in the collision.

Damage to Mrs Dowling's car is about $150.

Jones said there have been numerous minor accidents during the year but have had many complaints from students whose cars have received minor damage of $15 or $20 and the persons responsible for the accidents have left the scene without leaving their name or address."

If a person is responsible for a minor dent in another car he should leave his name and address for the owner, Jones stated.

SG Improves Dad's Day

Dad's Day won't be held for the entire student body this year, but the Auburn game has been set aside for members of the football team to invite their fathers to Tallahassee as special guests of honor.

ALWAYS a popular occasion, the player's dads will root for them from the sidelines wearing their son's jersey number on their backs. This not only adds interest to the game but gives the team members that little extra incentive to perform well.

But Dad's Day hasn't been too successful as far as getting the rest of the student body to participate. Much work has gone into these programs in the past which did not merit the end results. Therefore, the student body Cabinet last year devised a new idea which we believe will better fulfill the purpose of the disbanned Dad's Day.

THIS PLAN is to initiate a Parent's Weekend to be held during the annual Circus homecoming show. Visitors to the campus have decreased on this weekend due to the Pan-Hellenic rule which forbids rushing high school girls at that time. If Parent's Weekend is successful, it will give a boost to Circus attendence as well as providing an opportunity for students' families to visit the campus.

Parent's Weekend will be planned by student government to entertain guests and will include special programs and activities. This has possibilities of developing into a fine tradition and deserves the support of those who will benefit from it —the student body.

Car Owners Victimized

A grave injustice is being done dozens of Florida State University car owners. They are the victims of the neglectful and unthoughtful behavior of careless drivers who, after causing an accident, leave the scene without identifying themselves.

IT HAS been brought to the attention of traffic officials that this practice is becoming quite frequent. Complaints are received daily from students who have returned to their parked vehicle to find it damaged and that the person responsible has left no information telling where he can be reached.

With campus traffic as congested as it is, it is not surprising that there are many minor collisions. But there is no excuse for those not being reported, even if the damage amounts to a very small sum.

LITTLE effort is needed for the conscientious person to leave his name and address on the car he has damaged; especially since most car owners carry liability insurance which will cover the cost of such small repairs. Even if the car owner responsible for the accident carries no insurance it is illegal for him to leave the scene without giving proper identification.

The frequency of this practice is making it a serious problem and a definite blow to the integrity of FSU students. We hope students will improve this act of bad citizenship.

'Down' To The People?

"Down where the people are," the basic theme of the opera group that performed on the Westcott stage Monday night, is all but insulting.

In the first place, the implication that an opera troupe has to stoop "down" to appeal to an average audience is uncomplimentary.

In the second place, why was this group chosen for the Artist Series of a Campus that boasts one of the finest music departments in the country if its stated aim is to appeal to an audience that lacks sensitivity, intelligence, and appreciation of an opera that, if performed well deplicity, is extremely enjoyable?

The Critic's Corner

About The Four Freshmen—Zow!

BY DALE JENSEN

We have just returned from the second performance of the Four Freshmen, and our impressions, in twenty-five words or one syllable or less, are ZOW!

IN THE vernacular, they swung the end. Or, as the New Yorker might put it, "An interesting aggression was heard Wednesday evening in the Westcott Auditorium at the top of the Hill. Mainly concerned with music in the Jazz Idiom, they displayed amazing familiarity with a wide variety of instrumental and vocal combinations, with particular emphasis on a four-part vocal ensemble utilizing counterpoint, harmony with extravasant use of suspensions and deceptive delayed resolutions."

We repeat, ZOW!

THE ATO's deserve a great big pat on the back for providing this magnificent treat for us and doubly so for donating the receipts for the Campus Chest Drive. This is the same group, and with the same purpose that has in the past brought us Woody Herman's Third Herd and Louis Armstrong & Co. In the humble opinion of this critic, they do better each year in their choice of artists, and after Wednesday night, one wonders who they can possibly get for next year to continue the tradition.

Before we are royally "put down" by sundry Individuals for such wild praise, let us explain the grounds for our assertions. In the first place, this group is capable of some of the best sounds going in the jazz world, as they ably demonstrated. They swing. In the jazz sense of the term, and do so most consistently.

IN THE second place, they manage, without prostituting jazz, to appeal to those lovers of "popular" music, and to sell well in competition with Elvis to the same people who buy Elvis.

In the third place, and coming as a surprise to us, they can also appeal to the clown in all of us with occasional novelty tunes like the ones with that aching in our stomachs that follows a helpless laughing fit.

FRANKLY, we went fully expecting to want to leave before the show was over, thinking that the Freshmen couldn't possibly maintain interest for an hour-and-a-half. We couldn't be happier to apologize. To place the responsibility for the continuity of interest on any one of the four performers would be unfair. They all contributed, and the audience all had fun.

We hope that the ATO's are as fortunate in their choices for future years. And we think it might be fine if more concerts by outstanding Jazz groups could be brought to the campus, perhaps by a branch of the Artist Series, or another music-minded fraternity with the interests of Campus Chest at heart. With programs like the Four Freshmen, they couldn't miss.

First Artist Series Fairly Enjoyable

BY LOWELL RODDENBERRY

Last Monday evening's production of Die Fledermaus was, if not an auspicious beginning to the Artist Series, at least fairly enjoyable listening.

AN OPERETTA, as opposed to an opera, is based on a libretto of a light nature and is a combination of music and spoken dialogue. In this particular instance it was as much dialogue as music and there you have the major shortcoming.

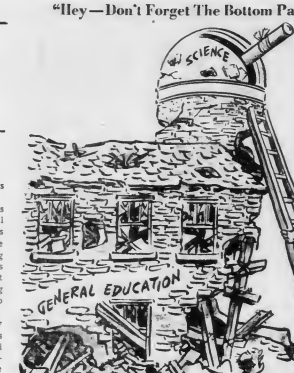
Strauss' music is among the best of its kind and the farcical text is not of any great consequence. The translation used was a good one, but by the emphasis on the libretto, Fledermaus failed to come across as an operetta of quality.

THE CUSTOMARY overture was done away with and the prologue began the performance. Granted that a piano reduction of the overture would have been inadequate but there are solo piano transcriptions of melodies from the score that would have fulfilled the same purpose. As it was the prologue seemed unjustified and failed to protect.

Westcott's extensive lighting system could have been put to greater use. What lighting was used made the inexpensive sets look attractive, particularly the palace courtyard scene. The sets were serviceable . . . one set turned around converting into another. Other productions on a limited budget might well do the same.

THE CAST, while hardly a distinguished one, turned in some good moments. Arlene Saunders as Rosalinda was at times quite charming. If her diction wasn't consistently good, she did turn a pretty ankle and tossed a provocative bustle.

Jeanette Scovotia' portrayal of Adele was properly saucy. Her high notes were weak which indicates either a tired voice or a limited range.



OF THE MALES, it would be kinder to leave much unsaid. Let us just say that their intonation was occasionally faulty. Jayden Blanchard as Alfred was, comparatively speaking, in good voice. He has a certain flair that further vocal training will improve.

Some of the more pleasing work of the evening was done in the ensemble singing. What it had in verve however, was lost in balance. Miss Scovotti's colorature rang out distinctly in all their concerted efforts.

IF THE tone of this review seems unduly critical, then it is because this was a professional production and to be evaluated as such.

The Grass Roots Opera is laudible for the service it renders in that it presents opera in English. As such groups flourish, cultural standards rise and opportunities open up for aspiring young talent. Here's wishing them continued growth and much success.

Postscript: Backstage gossip has it that Rosalinda is engraved to Dan Merriman who played Frank the jailor. Vive l'amour! Chacun a son gout.

Football Should Be De-emphasized

LETTERS to the EDITOR

TO THE EDITOR:

The article entitled "Sid News from the Campus: Nobody Loves the Football Hero Now" appears in the current "11, 1957" issue of Life magazine. Sentiments included therin well reflect the opinions of many of FSU's student body; that football games are merely social events; and additionally, a large number of students only go to the games to see and hear the band. Needless to say, "school spirit" for such outings is unnecessary and, if worse, seemingly quite childish when the purpose for it is examined. Much of the "school spirit" ingrained in a deep pride for higher academic standards so that we might truly have something worthwhile for "publicity" and proudly boasted!

Yes, football is entertainment of a sort, but need we financially support such folly with our Registration Fees and taxes? Loosing of more useful outlets—such as higher faculty salaries and more scholarships for worthy students, just to name a couple—can be easily be found and would, furthermore, be far more satisfying and constructive results.

Certainly the vast majority of FSU's administration and the Board of Control are aware of and hold these views, too. It would seem to this writer that leadership by them giving de-emphasis to football at FSU should be the role they would take. No doubt it would take courage in face of raucous, male, Florida taxpayers who would worry about "all the stupid things they're doing at FSU." But wouldn't true leaders regard the welfare of the school as their sole responsibility? The responsibility to chance is here, if its the alumni they would be encouraged over, how many alumnae of FSCW would really complain if it was so done? Leaders "Lide," not "go-ers" follow the leaves us with that aching in our stomachs that follows a helpless laughing fit.

FORMER ATHLETE

Servicemen Branded, Sometimes Abused

TO THE EDITOR:

The American serviceman is just an erstwhile civilian summoned by his friends and neighbors to be a soldier for a while.

But, he wonders, do his former "friends and neighbors" remember him once induction day is a past mark on the calendar?

Young men we know they've been called into service report that a definite apathy toward servicemen does exist. It's one of those attitudes no one will admit but which can be sensed by the excluded person.

One of FSU's alumni, stationed at Fort Jackson, South Carolina, warned that the University of South Carolina forbids its coeds to date servicemen.

Despite a limited income—$72 after taxes for the lower rank of private—the soldier usually pays a full price for everything except public transportation.

The signs in stores—"Service accounts welcome" — doesn't make him feel better because he knows that's the only thing about him that's welcome.

Stories in newspapers don't help. They read, "Soldier held in hold-up . . ." or "Soldier wrecks car . . ." but one never sees stories about the same officers written as "Civilian in auto smashup."

Some cities have a friendlier attitude—many baseball parks admit men in uniform free; but they seem to be the exception.

What it take a war to show the American people that the soldier is no one else but one of them, serving them and protecting them, training to fight, and if necessary, to die for them?

Does he have to be dead before his civilian brother and sister wish they hadn't walked by staring through him as if he weren't there?

There is something for college students particularly to ponder —because they are the soldiers of a few years hence.

A FORMER STUDENT

Turn Food Service Over To School

TO THE EDITOR:

I am still hungry. Why? Because I just ate in Morrison's food service.

Morrison's food service is the strongest ally to capitalism The owners believe strongly in making a profit. This we can not deny them their right to do.

The only way the students who pay for the food service can receive better quality food and cheaper food prices is that the University must take full control of the operation of the food service.

Morrison's food service is not here on campus to give cheap food. They are here to make money. As much as they can to show profit. That is why food prices have been rising in all the campus food places (Sweet Shop and Seminole).

When Morrison's food service buys food at a higher cost, they must raise their prices and give less quantity on your plate.

If the University can be taken over by the University or an organization of the University, lower prices would be the result.

The University would pay for the operation by the small cost of the food

BARRY SILVERSTEIN

Indians All Right

TO THE EDITOR:

I have read several letters in this column taking some broad swipes at the boys who rode the horses at the Pow-Wow and other festivities. Let's keep in mind that those boys volunteered to help. They gave their time and effort to help put on those events. I think they deserve a better show from the student body than sarcastic letters.

As for school spirit, it seems there is a long line waiting to criticize and a short line waiting to help. Those who so freely criticize can possess effort and better take a long look at their own spirit.

TV Talent Scout Seeks Performers

Anyone on the campus of Florida State University who is trying to keep his talent hidden or who do well to avoid the sharp eyes of Paul Warner, a junior from Lakeland.

Miss Warner is the campus talent scout for the Ted Mack and Show "Menus and Manners," which appears on television station WCTV Monday through Friday from 3-3 p.m.

The attractive journalism major turned talent scout appeared on television herself during the summer of 1956 when she did pantomime in Albuquerque, N. M. This past summer she worked in the television theater group at FSU.

Miss Warner is looking for actors, singers, dancers and other performers and is interested not only in student talent but also of talent among staff and faculty. Auditions of potential talent from the campus will be held on Thursday afternoons from 3-4 p.m.

Let's Unhitch Our 'Horsecollar' Rule

BY BUCKY CANON

With the Thanksgiving holidays approaching, FSU students are becoming increasingly aware of the "horse collar" system. This is the name given to the regulations requiring attendance at certain university designated classes—the week before and after a holiday.

THOSE WHO are unfortunate enough to miss one of the required classes are docked one sixth of their credit hours in the course. Thus for a three hour course, you would receive only two and one half hours of credit.

Now, what is so important about these pre or post holiday classes that attendance must be required? I have been to these required classes and have found them no different from any other class. In fact, I've decided that one learns no more on those days than on any other day.

IF WE students are supposed to be adults (as the university assumes when it is convenient to their purposes), why are we not allowed to make up our own minds as to the importance of attending these particular classes?

It will be said that if there were no regulation, some students would cut the day before or after a holiday in order to get a longer vacation, a long weekend, or some other reason. This would only be natural.

HOWEVER THOSE who are poor students would only be inturing themselves intellectually by not attending these classes. Does the university have to add insult to injury by taking part of whatever credit they do earn?

There are many excellent students at this university—students availing consistent A's —who cut anywhere from three to five classes a week when they take. If they can cut other classes and still come out with A's, is the pre or post holiday class so important that it can not be made up later?

The Iconoclast

Did Cheerleaders Stage A Fiasco?

BY L. A. HESTER

Well, we lost another game and if that were whole story we might easily forget the whole thing and look forward to a victory next week.

However, as anyone sitting in the east stands probably well remembers, that isn't the whole story: one finds it rather hard to forget the unpardonable conduct of our cheerleaders.

NO ONE has any criticism of their spirit or enthusiasm, but when it reaches the point where they begin to help the opposing team's cheers and even fight against a visiting female cheerleader one can no longer classify it as good natured fun. The whole fiasco started when the visitors scored a fine touchdown and their cheerleaders, practicing a school tradition, congregated in front of the field waving symbolic hurricane flags. They got to where our cheerleaders had left their effort upon their pain was blocked and a struggle to get the flags of the opposing cheerleaders ensued. A regular pitchfork fight ensued. With brute strength prevailing, our male cheerleaders managed to get most of the said flags.

IT SEEMS to be the height of folly and vainly tried to tell the mayhem and get the meaning of it all straight. It would seem to have begun to reach the proportions of a full scale civil war before a school official talked to them. Although I was not close enough to hear the conversation of the discussion, I was from the scowling expressions and angrily waving arms of each, it concerned the matter we are discussing.

I prefer not to label the event as a poor sportsmanship, but rather a lack of good judgment. Certainly we do not expect our cheerleaders to be angels, but we are supposed to be representing the student body. The next time I think they miscued, although it won't right now, wrong already done I feel that our cheerleaders should write a letter of apology on the behalf of themselves and the student body.

Tomorrow's Battle Key To Season

EN ROUTE TO MISSISSIPPI. In a season loaded with big ...s from one end to the other, one game doesn't seem to loom ...arger than another.

It may be the Seminoles' last chance to guarantee Tom ...ved at least an even season of 5-5.

...ven the most loyal Seminole fans refuse to acknowledge any ...ce of their toppling Auburn next Saturday here, and it is ...ally conceded the Tribe is too strong for Tampa.

...hat leaves us with a 4-5 mark and the Southern game making ...difference between a losing campaign and an even one.

However, the Semholes have never won in Hattiesburg, and ...that their two victories here over the Southerners were the ...st that you hold your breath for.

...hey beat Southern here, 20-19, last year, and 19-18 in 1954. ...so, MSC prevailed 21-8. In 1953, 21-0, and in 1952 by a whop... 40-21 count.

And Southern to be sure has been no pushover this year. ...ey rolled through seven games unbeaten before losing to ...nconquered Houston 27-12 last Saturday.

More important, though, during their first victories only one ...covered on them, West Texas State, which managed to cross ...outherners' goal once.

...MPARING SCORES

If you're the type who compares scores you can point out that ...ey nipped Abilene Christian, 34-7, and Southern beat them ...0.

...owever, you must also look at the fact that Houston beat ...Mississippi boys only 7-0, while the Texas boys scraped ...Miami by only a 7-0 count. Add that Miami defeated the ...oles 40-13, and you have Mississippi three touchdowns bet... than FSU.

Comparative scores rarely mean much, however.

Dickinson was hurt in Southern's 20-0 win over Chatta..., and evidently didn't play when the Southerners lost to ...ston last weekend.

...e's back and running at full speed, those who saw last ...game will tell you he is quite a boon to the Southern forces. ...It looks pretty bleak for the Seminoles, doesn't it?

...he fact remains, though, that the Tribe has never had a ...winning under Nugent. This may inspire them enough to ...ch a victory tomorrow night.

...o doubt it.

Gridders Seek 4th Against Southern

By FRANK RAMOS

Florida State's Seminole football team will be trying to even their season's record and even their rivalry with Mississippi Southern's once beaten Southerners Saturday night at Hattiesburg.

The Southerners who had allowed only one touchdown up until their loss to Houston last week, hold a 3-2 edge in the series and have yet to lose in the Seminoles in Hattiesburg.

"To put it mildly, Southern will be difficult to handle," Seminole Coach Tom Nugent said. "They've made this one their Homecoming and they will be at a high emotional peak.

But we're sound mentally and physically. We'll be ready for a good effort."

BIG FULLBACK

The Southerners have pinned their hopes on their 215-pound fullback Bo Dickinson. Dickinson, scoring a 5.5 yard rushing average, has missed the last three games, but is expected to be ready for Saturday's contest.

Coach Pie Vann's starting line averages 211 pounds with right tackle Sam Torcia weighing in at 240 pounds.

Expected to start at ends are Curry Juneau and Bob Yescho, both are seniors. Holding down the tackle spot opposite of Torcio is John Russell, a 209-pounder. Jim Taylor and Burnett Black-

Bob Nellums, who led the Seminoles in scoring last year with 31 points, and has already scored 32 points for this season and holds a wide lead in the scoring race again, will be at fullback.

Captain Ron Schomburger and sophomore John Smvey will start at the ends while Bill Musselman and Jerry Graham hold down the starting tackle posts.

George Boyer is expected to get the call at center.

Tankers Defend Georgia AAU Crown Tomorrow At Atlanta

The Florida State University swimming team opens the 1957-58 tank season tomorrow, defending their Georgia AAU crown in Atlanta, Ga.

Last year the Tribe amassed 67 points as they topped Georgia by 15 points and Florida by 21. Other teams entered this year are Swanee University and Georgia Military Academy.

Commenting on State's chances to successfully defend the title, Coach "Bim" Stults said, "Its too early in the season to really tell how well the boys will do, but I feel sure that we can come out on top again if the team is up for it."

TESCHKE OUT

With Graham Teschke, holder of two FSU school records in the distance freestyles, out with the flu, Stults will have to depend on sophmore Ken Abbott, Jim Jacobs, and Ryan "Beaver" Ray to make up for the defect.

Abbott will compete in the 100 and 200 yd. backstroke, and Ray, the 100 yd. freestyle. Ray won the 50 yard freestyle in one meet last year, and currently holds the school record of 23.1 in the event.

Jacobs is the holder of the 200 yd. breastroke mark and will be bidding for national recognition this year.

Paul Stoffhagen, up from the freshmen ranks, along with Abbott, gives the Seminoles a definite advantage in the backstroke. Stoffhagen placed 3rd the last year's meet.

Assistant coach Al King stated that, "Definitely the backstroke and freestyle events will be our strongest events. If Ray, Stoffhagen, Hammond and Thatcher are in top form, they will be hard to beat."

RELAY TEAM

Paul Hammond, Abbott, Glen Thatcher, and Ray will team together to attempt to defend the 400 yd freestyle relay, an event the tankers won hands down last year.

Stults will take along two transfer students on the trip. Don Ackerman from Newberry College, competes in the butterfly event, and Ken Loehr, a sprint sensation from Ohio State will enter the 100 yd. freestyle.

The freshmen, headed by Bucky Hilton, who entered in six events and Cirtis Gender, state high school champ in diving last year, will be out to better the fifth place they got last year.

Gymnasts Win Louisville Meet

Florida State's gymnasts opened their season Saturday by copping six gold medals and walking off with the Louisville Turner Invitational crown, outdistancing the Toledo Turners, their closest competitors, 33-10.

Jack Miles veteran Seminole gymnast, accounted for all of FSU's firsts, and tied teammate Chet Witten in free exercise, the seventh event he entered.

Witten, a Maryland transfer, took a second on the high bar, and according to Miles, showed his potential by edging out Junior Roger Webb in free exercise.

Florida State's number two scorer at Louisville, Bill Beavers, placed third in the all-around behind Miles and Jack Sackstelder of Toledo.

Beavers earned silver medals in side horse and still rings, in which FSU swept all three places with another gold medal performance from Miles and a third from Webb.

Webb picked up two more shards in tumbling and calisthenics, while Brooding Baker rounded out Seminole scoring, winning a bronze medal on the trampoline.

Miles reminded that, "Witten, Beavers, and Baker faced their first collegiate competition at Louisville and came through like polished performers."

All the men who competed this past weekend plus the rest of the varsity can be seen performing in the Gymnasium next week at the men's gym.

Plainsmen Favored To Top Bulldogs

Both of Florida State's remaining opponents will be striving to extend win streaks in their games this weekend.

Auburn, who comes to Tallahassee on Nov. 23, will go to Columbia to meet the punchless Georgia Bulldogs. Auburn who stands as the SEC leader and one of the few undefeated major college teams.

The Tigers have a 7-0 record as compared to the Bulldog's 2-6 mark. Last weekend Auburn added Mississippi State to its list of victims in the form of 13-7.

Tampa's Spartans will be going for their third straight victory as they host Jacksonville. Last week the Spartans edged Jacksonville State 14-13. Not only was it a tough win for Tampa, but a costly one.

Three players including star halfback Don Herndon received injuries and it is not probable they will see action tomorrow. But experts figure that the Spartans should have no trouble with Appalachian and rate them four touchdown favorites.

PDT, SAE Both Given Swim Title

A two-way championship title has been declared for PDT and SAE in the 1957 Intramural Swimming Meet, as the result of a protest board meeting held November 8.

SAE discovered that SC used an ineligible diver in the competition and filed formal protest. This protest was acted upon by the board and declared legitimate. The SC diver was disqualified and therefore placed SAE in first place.

There was a one point difference between PDT and SAE in the original meet scores. With this added first place win, SAE gained one point and tied PDT with 50 each. All other meet positions remain the same as originally reported.

Hurricanes' 2nd Half Drive Buries Tribe In 40-13 Rout

If the Florida State football team had gone home after the first half of the game last Friday night, they would have had a 7-6 upset win over Miami.

But as it was the Seminoles were not so lucky and came back to play the second half, only to be beaten 40-13. The first time the Seminoles got their hands on the ball they drove 60 yards for a touchdown.

The drive was highlighted by a 19 yard end sweep by FSU quarterback Bob Renn. Bob Pellum crashed one yard for the score.

John Sheppard kicked the point and FSU enjoyed its first lead over the Hurricanes in four games.

Miami came back to skew its offensive power as Fran Curci, the slight of hand sophomore quarterback, led the Canes to their first score. He passed to Joe Flevel for six points and Bernie Yarbrough missed the conversion.

The halftime statistics showed that the Tribe led the Canes 9-4 in first downs and gained 97 yards rushing compared to Miami's 78. In the second half Miami got logical and used its depth to run the Seminoles into defeat.

Flevel scored two more times and Bryon Blasko and Phil Gesu got one TD apiece. FSU got its philosophy," she said, explaining that after the performance Dr. J. L. Ire of the Philosophy Department will answer questions the audience might have on either the play or existentialism itself.

A critique of the acting will be held in the speech department sometime next week. The exact time and date will be posted on the dramatics bulletin board in the History Building.

Miss Childers remarked that the people planning to attend the play should come early, as there are only 200 seats and the tickets are free, and that they shouldn't come at all if they have weak stomachs.

After Miami Loss

Frosh Gridders End Year With 4-1 Mark

Florida State's freshman team wound up its 1957 football season the past weekend, and suffered its only setback of the year at the hands of the University of Miami, 21-7.

The loss was the first for a FSU freshman team over a span of nine games and three years. This years crop of frosh was regarded as the best in FSU's history.

The story for FSU's frosh was almost the same as for the story of the varsity's 46-13 loss to the Miami senior club, just too much manpower.

Miami's Baby Hurricanes led 14-0 at the half on touchdowns by halfback Mike Harrison and quarterback George MacIntyre

'CANES SCORE

Miami's first score came on the heels of a drive that covered 34 yards in eight plays. Harrison plunged over from the one on the third play of the second quarter. The extra point was good and Miami led 7-0

Then with a little more than a minute left in the half, MacIntyre scored from the six to end a 70-yard drive that took 14 plays, and the Hurricanes had the 14-0 half time lead.

FSU's only score came in the third period as quarterback Bobby Conrad scored from two yards out.

The touchdown march covered 64 yards and was highlighted by passes from Conrad to end Bob Kavanaugh.

The Hurricane's final touchdown started on its own 19 and covered the distance in 17 plays of which only two were passes. MacIntyre climaxed the drive with his second touchdown on a 10-yard jaunt.

The Hurricanes were the only team in statistics the Baby Seminoles this year. They outgained the Seminoles 171 yards in 37 on the ground and 333 in 225 overall.

For the season, FSU gained a total of 1,653 yards to the opponent's 873. Miami gained almost a third of the total yardage picked up against the Seminoles.

PASSING YARDAGE

In the passing department, the Seminoles picked up 419 yards to the opposition's 166, while on the ground, FSU outgained its opponents 1,234 to 709 in the yardage department.

In the scoring parade, fullback Jim Calhoun led the tally sheet with 7 touchdowns and 42 points. Halfback Red Whitehead was next in the scoring column with 3 TD's and 20 points.

Quarterback, Bobby Conrad finished in the money with a three touchdown, and nine extra points for a total of 27 points

Grads Slate Square Dance

Members of the Graduate Class will "swing their partners tonight at the square dance sponsored by that organization in the Reservation.

The square dance will begin at 7:30 p.m., according to Marvin Rosenblatt, president of the Graduate Class. Cars will leave from the Graduate School at 7 p. m. to take students to the Reservation.

Rosenblatt stressed that no ticket or admission fee is necessary and stags will be allowed. Dress is informal and refreshments will be served."

Dr. Tait, head of the Recreation Department, will furnish a caller, and instructions in square dancing will be given.

Sue Mahoney, social chairman, is in charge of the event, and Ab Rhodes will assist.

"The Graduate Class and 'Graduate Club' are one and the same," Rosenblatt said. "There has been some confusion in some minds about this. A merger of the Graduate Class has created membership in the Graduate Club."

The aims of the Graduate Class are: (1) to represent the non-graduate students; (2) to foster social relationships among students who are in varied fields; (3) to foster and promote friendly, cooperative relationships between graduate students and faculty.

Dr. Ralph Witherspoon, director of the Child Development Institute, serves as faculty advisor to the club.

The group's next social function will be a semi-formal Graduate Dance, held December 7 at the Junction with the Dames Club.

Keene Leads FSU Debaters At Tourney

Four Florida State University novice debaters returned this week from the twelfth annual Alabama Discussion Tournament, with one of the participants bringing back a certificate of excellence.

The FSU group, composed of Sheldon Prewsell, David Harris, Lonnie Keene and Graham Stakelsbier, Jr., was accompanied on the trip by Dr. Gregg Phifer, debate coach.

Keene, who, like the others, was competing in his first intercollegiate tournament, was rated among the top 9 tourney participants. There were 16 schools represented at the debaters.

The discussion topic, "What should be the policy of the government regarding membership in a labor organization as a condition of employment?", was resolved by the group on a majority vote at the end of the tournament.

The final resolution of the conference came out strongly in favor of the state's "right-to-work" laws, in favor of union security, and in favor of the repeal of section 14B of the Taft-Hartley Act.

The resolution will be mimeographed and sent to the various university officials, state officers, and national officials of the states and universities participating.

The conference, held at the University of Alabama in Tuscaloosa, saw individuals from Alabama, Alabama State Normal College, Southeastern Louisiana and Vanderbilt receive the top five awards.

Concert Of 'High Caliber'

BY DIXON REDDITT

Phi Mu Alpha sponsored a concert last Saturday night of American music. This is an annual presentation of the group and is noteworthy in several respects.

In the first place, it is an exceedingly rare experience to hear a program of nothing but American music. Most of the American music that is heard is placed toward the end of a recital and before one's ears can scarcely comprehend it, the program is over.

The high caliber and variety of the music and the relative palatability of the musical idiom in other words, it was easy to listen to, represent a desirable trend in the production of concerts of contemporary music.

THE BRASS choir, under William Cramer, began the program with "Fanfare for the Common Man," Copland. The difficulty of this piece is its extreme range, and even though there were a few technical inaccuracies in its performance, it served as a very effective opening for the concert.

Harold Schiffman gave an understanding and meaningful reading of his "Six Bagatelles" for piano. Although only the second of these pieces is actually based on a twelve-tone row, the other five seem to have more than a passing acquaintance with this system of composition.

THE CROUP that performed Roger McDuffie's "Woodwind Quintet in One Movement" met the unusual demands of the composer in regard to ensemble and rhythms with poise and musicianship.

The Creston "Preludre," owing to their straight forward rhythmic and harmonic construction, have an immediate appeal that was made even more evident by Billy Alton's performance of them.

JOHN Boda's "Sonatina for Clarine and Piano" is a significant addition to the literature of an instrument which does not have many sonatinas of this quality.

The large work of the second part of the concert was the performance of Copland's "Piano Sonata" by Lowell Roddenberry. This piece is earlier, chronologically than the Copland that opened the program and is noticeably more dissonant, more percussive, and he gave a powerful exposition of the general tenor of the work

THIS SONATA really must be heard more than once to be understood, but Roddenberry's masterful and expressive renditions must have been appreciated even by those hearing it for the first time.

Chris Bryan chose to "star" her performance of the final aria of the first act of "The Medium," Gian-Carlo Menotti. By singing from behind the piano, having the curtains only partially drawn and by having the stage flooded with violet light. Thus Madame Flora's song was not only very musical but highly colorful and a satisfying conclusion to a stimulating concert.

BSU Slates Open House

By WILLIAM MOYLE AS TOLD TO ANNETTE McINTOSH

Open House will be held at the Florida Baptist's "New Baptist Student House at FSU," corner of Call and Copeland Streets, tonight from 6 to 10 p.m. The BSU Executive Council, Faculty Advisory Committee, Associate Director, and Director invite you to behold "the goodness of God" toward them in this building and its furnishings.

Executive and Freshmen Council members will be happy to guide you through the newly-completed house, Dr. and Mrs. Dale S. Campbell, faculty members, local pastors, their wives, and others plan to greet those attending, and students will serve as floor hosts and hostesses.

The first BSU building was erected in 1937 at FSCW, which did not have many Baptist and Baptist preference students in attendance as compared with the present enrollment of nearly 2000 Baptist students. Through the growth of the University there has been a comparable growth in the number of students.

MODERN DESIGN

The new BSU house, of modern contemporary design, contains 12,250 square feet in the new addition and 5,450 square feet in the renovated building, or a total of approximately 18,-000 square feet.

It was designed by Mr. Prentice Huddleston and Associates, Architects and Engineers, of Tallahassee.

Plans from all the BSU houses in Florida were studied, as well as ideas received from Dr. Charlie C. Bass, Jr., of the Department of Church Architecture, Baptist Sunday School Board, Nashville, Tennessee.

The Florida Baptist Convention appointed a Building Committee, composed of Mr. S. O. Bess, Dr. Dale S. Campbell, Miss Anne Embry, Rev. John Hunt and Dr. Harold Sanders.

Travel Service Lists Rides And Riders

Anyone interested in finding rides or riders anywhere in the United States should contact the Student Travel Service, according to Pat Finlay, secretary of the service.

The service will find rides and riders for weekends and holidays, Miss Finlay said.

The travel service is located in 204 Longmire building. Its office hours are 10-12, and 2-5 weekdays.

Interested students should call 72191, or see Ruth Fountain or Marguerite Edwards at the Travel Service Office according to Miss Finlay.

with William R Moyle, BSU Director, as chairman.

This committee decided that the building should be attractive as well as functional, and therefore it should serve a dual role, i.e., it should be planned for the present but be made adequate to compensate for the future growth of the University.

$37,000 PURCHASE

Through the wise counsel of Dr Campbell, then president of Florida State University two pieces of property immediately behind the older BSU house were purchased by the Florida Baptist Convention for $32,000, looking forward to the day when activities could be expanded in the BSU.

GROUND BREAKING

D Campbell turned the first shovelful of dirt at the ground breaking, which was held in late January of 1957. Actual construction began in late March and concentrated activity about the first of April. The completion of the building was set for early fall, but the date had to be postponed, due to a delay in securing steel.

Still further help was needed, therefore so Mr. Jim Youngblood, an interior decorator, was secured to "layout" the entire building. His suggestions were carefully scrutinized with some of them being completely discarded and others completely accepted. Many of his ideas fell inbetween these two extremes.

It is the source of planning for the building's furnishings, catalogues and brochures were received from every major furniture manufacturer in the United States. The very latest equipment and furnishings, costing approximately $20,000, was selected for the building.

It's been said that the atomic submarine "Nautilus" stays submerged so long that it only surfaces to let the crew re-salut.

Perhaps for this reason, the Navy has taken valuable space aboard the "Nautilus" for the only soft-drink vending machine in the entire submarine fleet.

Naturally (or you wouldn't hear about it from us) it's a Coca-Cola machine. And not unexpectedly, re-enlistments are quite respectable.

Job-Getting Seminar Opens Wednesday

More Than 50 Businessmen Expected For 3-Day Confab

More than 50 representatives of business, industry and government are expected to interview graduating seniors and alumni at the ninth annual Job Getting Seminar here Nov. 20-22.

James Hardy, FSU placement officer, said the seminar is largely for the purpose of acquainting firms and agencies from throughout the country with FSU's facilities for training personnel.

Last year more than 50 firms were represented at the seminar and more than a thousand interviews were conducted. Facilities are being readied for a much larger number of interviews this year.

Hardy said few on-the-spot job offers are made during the seminar. "Company officials like to return to the home office and review qualifications. The prospective employee will oftentimes be invited to visit the campus before the actual job offer is made," the placement officer pointed out.

Representatives from several large insurance companies, chemical companies, social service and recreation groups, accounting firms and retailing establishments from a wide area will be on hand during the seminar to interview persons and graduate students.

The program will open with an informal afternoon reception at 4 p.m. Wednesday when deans and department heads will meet with the visitors.

A panel discussion on the job opportunities for 1958 graduates will take place that night following a welcoming talk by President Robert M. Strozier.

The panel will consist of five leaders of business, industry and government who will outline the opportunities in their various fields. It will be held at 7:30 p.m. in Copeland Music Hall Auditorium.

J. Velma Keen, prominent Tallahassee attorney and civic leader, will moderate the panel. Mr. Keen was president of the Florida Bar Association in 1949-51 and is a former member of the State Advisory Council for Education. He is the author of many articles which have appeared in the Florida Law Journal.

Roberta Applegate, club editor of the Miami Herald, will represent communications on the panel. Mr. Applegate has written many special features and series which have won state prizes and have been nationally syndicated. She is also the only woman to ever hold the position of press secretary for a governor of Mississippi.

TECHNICAL MANAGER

Representing technical fields will be George A. Brons, assistant technical personnel manager of Chemstrand Corporation of Pensacola. Mr. Brons joined Chemstrand in December, 1955, after three years as a personnel assistant with Avo, Inc., at Talladega, Tenn. He also worked six four years as an assistant buyer of Montgomery Ward in Chicago.

Management representative on the panel will be I. W. Carmack, general employment manager of Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Company of Atlanta. Having been associated with Southern Bell since 1930, Mr. Carmack has been traffic manager in the Columbus, Ga. and Division Traffic Personnel Supervisor in Atlanta.

Don B. Frye of Washington, D. C., will represent government. He is chief of placement for the Housing and Home Finance Agency, which includes the Urban Renewal Administration Community Facilities Administration, Public Housing Administration, Federal Housing Administration, and Federal National Mortgage Association. Before assuming this position, Mr. Carmack was regional personnel officer of the Public Housing Administration.

PENNEY'S HEAD

Representing retail will be C. J. Wilcox, head of the Employment and Placement Division of J. C. Penney Company of New York. He started in the chain store field in 1926 and became a store manager in 1930. Mr. Wilcox is active in the College Placement Officers Association.

Thursday and Friday, Nov. 21-22, will be devoted almost entirely to personal interviews in the Suwannee Room.

The seminar is only one phase of a year-round program to help FSU graduates find a job, Hardy stated. Miss Margaret Blair, assistant director of placement and student aid, said the university has an excellent record of placing its graduates. She pointed out that at the end of the year few students remain unplaced.

Although the seminar season will be a busy employment period for students, undergraduates will have ample opportunity to meet and talk with the representatives of business and industry after the opening night session.

Vets Club Launches Membership Drive

BY JOHN RAY

The Vets Club recently launched a month-long membership drive, President Joe Moffa announced today. The quota for the drive is 200 new members when will double the present membership.

Members of the club have been divided into five teams for the drive. The team which recruits the most new members will be awarded a cash prize.

Moffa stated that the drive is the first activity of a busy schedule which the club has outlined for this semester. The club is formulating plans to tackle many veteran problems on campus, one of which is the severe shortage of housing.

A recent survey revealed that many veterans are forced to drop out of school each year for financial reasons. Club members feel that more university housing facilities for married veterans, with reasonable rates would help many vets solve these problems and permit them to stay in school.

Moffa also said the club is discussing methods in which it can be of a greater service to veterans and the university.

A stag party for members of the Vets Club will be held Saturday afternoon near the airport. Refreshments will be served throughout the afternoon.

INTRAMURALS

Veterans interested in participating in any intramural sports may be requested to contact Curry DuBois, phone 3-5218.

DuBois said the vets have not entered many sporting events because of the lack of players. He urged all vets to support the athletic program.

Players are now needed for football, volleyball, and track.

VET SOLONS

Two veterans, Dayton Roberts and Gary Kissinger, were elected to the Student Senate in October as representatives of the Day Students.

Both Senators have urged off-campus students to contact them when they have suggestions or problems concerning student government.

"After all," Clark said, "we're not a bunch of cattle to be fenced in."

The motion was passed unanimously. Senate is now officially on record as favoring "the abolition of barbed wire on campus."

Suspense Art Set For 'Hour'

"The Art of Suspense in Fiction" will be discussed by Dr. J. Russell Reaver, associate professor of American Literature at Florida State University at the English Coffee Hour at 4 this afternoon at the Westminster House.

Dr. Reaver will illustrate the use of suspense by reading a few scenes from a novel he has recently completed. When The Lamp Is Shattered, a historical narrative of two rival families in nineteenth - century Alabama. The story, combining comedy and tragedy, attempts to hold the reader's interest through the tensions of physical danger and psychological conflict.

EXTREME METHODS

In introducing the subject, Reaver will briefly show the extremes of methods for attaining narrative suspense. He will point out how the repetitious adventure episodes used by James Fenimore Cooper were made ridiculous by Mark Twain's amusing satire on Cooper's Literary Offenses.

"By contrast, Tolstoy, disenchanted with recording superficial conflicts of everyday life, drove himself to despair in writing War and Peace," Reaver said. "In some unobtrusive principle to explain the shifting drama of history."

FOLKLORE SPECIALIST

A specialist in American literature and folklore, Reaver teaches courses in Romanticism, Folklore and Contemporary Trends. He is the author of a monograph, Emerson As Mystic, and of numerous articles and reviews in professional journals. At present he is completing two textbooks, One Fundamentals of Folk Literature in collaboration with Dr. Bruce Bowrell, of Austin Peay College in Tennessee and the other Humorists in Contemporary Life, with Dr Sarah Herndon of FSU, and Dr Robert Davidson and Dr. William Ruff of the University of Florida.

They do produce a basketball team, though, and one of note. They figure to be among the big teams in the Ohio Conference this year.

Only one man on the starting five will be under 6-1 center is 6-9, one of the forwards, 6-8.

The opener gives an idea of what the schedule will be like the toughest in the school's basketball history.

However, Coach Bud Kennedy's cagers appear to be ready.

Kennedy won't admit his starting lineup at this early date but it appears to be set from this writer's point of view.

JC graduates Dan Boltz and Burt Deckel will run at forwards, vet Larry Strom at center, high scorer Hugh Dodd and JC grad Jim Litsky at the guards.

Kennedy's double post offense, Strom and Boltz operate on the inside, Dekle, Durham and Litsky on the side, with Dekle probably the middle man.

Durham may have a real struggle maintaining his hold on a post. He tallied 509 points last year for a 19.6 average. Litsky, Boltz or Deckel may press him this season.

JC's To Get Service Keys

Women's Senate recently announced that Junior Counselors will receive keys in recognition of services in the freshman dormitories.

The project has been up before Senate at various times during the past year. This is the first time that definite action has been taken.

Committee chairman Pat Manning announced that the key may be purchased by present day student, transfer and former Junior Counselors.

According to Senator Manning, the key resembles Garret Key and can be worn as a pin or a charm.

Junior Counselors may order a key by turning in the money in a sealed envelope at the Longmire Director's Office. Deadline for ordering is Friday, Nov. 22.

Each Junior Counselor is appointed in the spring to serve the following fall. She must attend meetings and training programs in which duties are outlined and is assigned to a freshman dormitory. Each group then elects a dormitory president and vice-president, who along with each floor chairman makes up House Council.

MIKE'S MIKE

By MIKE CUREAU

This is more or less an open memo to all lovers of good jazz and fun. Its been brought to my attention that there is now at a leg around Tallahassee for this residents and students, in the atmospheric department. If this is true then lord we want our ass and let me tell you of the great discovery I have found. This discovery is the INTERLUDE. Th new place is a few miles out on the old Quincy Highway. No. 27, in really an establishment of luxury. Song your date and plenty of good taste, and Lewis Scoggin, your host, will furnish the rest. He has music done up for you modern style and atmosphere that can't be excelled by anyone within fifty. tertainment and excitement drag in to th Robin's Nest on Park Ave. and asked one of the crew or Lew about the INTERLUDE.

This INTERLUDE has something special to offer the novice as well as the professional and that is the good brand of jazz that comes in every Friday and Saturday night. The whole place is really something to look forward to. In fact these guys, who are referred to as the INTERLUDERS, are so swell that after the Homecoming dance some of Stan Kenton's boys want out to the INTERLUDE and tat so for a set or two.

The owner is something also that makes the interlude very appetizing for you starved party-goers. Lewis Scoggin is noted for having the finest in music and imaginable. This guy will fulfill every you desire you wish in music. Some of you must know just by some of the sounds he brings into his shops. Once again, if you listening to his Sunday night show "The Nightwatch" and hearing people out there are really hand work though, his semicans at the Robin's Nest about going to the INTERLUDE. I promise, you won't regret doing it.

Gymkana unwrapped its first "Headlines" show before a near capacity crowd in the men's gymnasium last night. The second show will be held at 8 p.m. tonight, and is dedicated to the Recreation Department and Talla-hassee public schools.

The 90-minute student-produced show features acts of every gymnastics by some of the season's best college gymnasts—performing on the high bar, flying rings, sidehorse, parallel bars and tables and chairs.

A series of acts, unfolding around a news vendor's stand, carries out the newspaper theme of the year's big show which includes dancing and music.

McCall, Cranford To Star In 'Caesar And Cleopatra'

Ron McCall and Cay Cranford will star in George Bernard Shaw's Caesar and Cleopatra, to be presented by the Speech Department December 13, 14, 16, and 17 in the Augusta Conradi Theater, according to Dr. James R. Brock, who will direct the play.

In almost extravaganza proportions, this play will be, according to Brock, a real challenge from the standpoint of production.

The scenery and props, demanding a great deal of research and construction, are being designed by Mr. Charles Reimer, speech instructor.

Costumes will be directed by Miss Pat Clift, instructor of costuming and designing.

Assistant director will be graduate student Beverly Hooper.

Over thirty parts have been cast as follows: Caesar, Ron McCall, who recently appeared in The Rainmaker.

Chosen to play Cleopatra was freshman Cay Cranford. Her servant, Ftatteta, will be portrayed by Susan Caffrey, who appeared Thursday and Friday in the Speech Department's standing room only production of Sartre's No Exit.

Tom Appleyard will play Rufio; Oliver Dixon, Britannus; and Bryant Simms, who appeared as File in The Rainmaker, will portray Apollodorus.

John Walker, who portrayed Noah in The Rainmaker, will play Achillus.

Virgil Austin will appear as Pothinus; Bob Murray, seen as Cradeus in No Exit, will portray Theodotus.

CLEO'S KID BROTHER

Cleopatra's young brother, Ptolemy XIV, will be played by alliterate make-up and costuming Monk Guilford. John Venables will appear as the centurion; Beti Seay as Iras; Susanne Matzat as Charmain, and Phil Johnson as the god, Ra.

Roman soldiers will be played by George Goldstein, who appeared as the sheriff in The Rainmaker, James Powell, Gerald Deley, and Robert Spangler.

Reggie Ivory and Bob Nash will be porters, and Patricia Doyle and Carol White will appear as women of the court.

John Walker will play a musician; Marshall LaCombe, a bostman. Bob Harris and Marshall La Combe, Egyptian officials Reggie Ivory, an Egyptian priest; and Patricia Greenwood, a slave girl.

A few other bit parts are still to be cast, according to Director Brock, who mentioned that several parts are being doubled to problems.

Criminology Meet Begins Tomorrow

Dr. Raymond J. Corsini, one of the nation's leading prison psychologists, will be guests speaker at a seminar on criminology and corrections here tomorrow night.

The seminar, which is being sponsored by the School of Social Welfare, will be held at West-minster House, starting at 8 p.m.

Dean Coyle E. Moore is inviting the public to attend.

Dr. Corsini, who is now research associate of the Industrial Relations Center of the University of Chicago, will also be at FSU for a short course on delinquency control to be held Nov. 21 and 22.

He was psychologist for the New York State Department of Correction at Auburn Prison from 1947, senior psychologist for the California Department of Correction at San Quentin Prison, 1947-50, and chief prison psychologist for the Wisconsin Department of Welfare from 1950-53.

At the University of Chicago, Dr. Corsini teaches group psychotherapy and psychodrama and is engaged in the private practice of psychotherapy. He is the author of a recent book, "Methods of Group Psychotherapy."

Five Seniors Get AFROTC Awards Here

Superior achievement in Air Force ROTC was recognized Thursday as five seniors were named "Distinguished AFROTC Cadets" by Colonel Howard J. Withycombe, head of the Florida State University Air Force unit.

Colonel Withycombe names Douglas C. Greene, William A. Grow, Edward B. Miller, Donald D. Preisser and Frank J. Sattler as recipients of the honor.

To qualify for candidacy in this distinguished group, the senior cadet must have a "B" average in his first three years of AFROTC and rank in the upper 25 per cent of all students in the Air Science IV course.

In addition, the cadet must be in the upper 25 per cent of all the students in the university who are pursuing the same academic major and are scheduled to graduate in the same academic year.

Cadets selected must also demonstrate outstanding leadership especially in the AFROTC summer training unit and in extra-curricular activities.

The appointments of the five were recommended by a board of officers of the Department of Air Science. Concurring in the recommendations were Dr. Charles Davis, military coordinator, and dean of the College of Arts and Sciences.

Third FSU Soap Box Derby Roars Off Friday Afternoon

The third annual derby, sponsored by the two groups for Campus Chest, will start at the Westcott circle and cruise down College Avenue, with the melee beginning at 2:30 p.m.

Fraternities build the soap boxes and the sororities wreck 'em—that is, drive them. The event will be divided into five heats with three racers in each heat. The five sub-winners will then compete in the finals, with a trophy as the winners' prize.

At the end of the race-course, Phi Delt pinboard will be stationed, along with hay-stacks, to halt the sorority-chauffered racers. "It's a good way to get rid of the pledges," said a Phi Delt spokesman.

Last year, the trophy was taken home by the Gamma Phi Beta's, who drove a soap box constructed by Delta Sigma Pi. The Alpha Gams and Phi Delts dominated the event netted $200 for Campus Chest last year.

In charge of planning the event this year are Arlene Sargent and Jim Magee.

Receives $6,500 Grant

Ocean Institute Here Studying Sting Rays

A grant of $6,500 for research on sting ray venom and other marine toxins has been received

Dr. Sidney W. Fox, director of the marine laboratory, said in addition to this grant from the Eli Lilly and Company pharmaceutical house, the Institute has been awarded a grant of $10,000 from the National Science Foundation. This grant will be used for continuing studies on possible marine drugs and that may have led to the origin of life in the sea.

STING RAY VENOM

The Institute will be able to begin studies on the chemical composition of toxins and irritants found in marine creatures such as sting ray venom the red tide "poison", and the stinging substance of jellyfish, as a result of the Lilly grant. Attempts to extend knowledge of culturing the red tide organism have begun in the Institute chemical laboratory, Fox said.

Dr. Fox said once the basic chemistry of these substances is known, scientists will be better able to develop counter measures against them. However, he explained, the work of the Institute at the present is simply to find out all it can about the chemical nature of these little studied toxins.

The National Science Foundation grant of $10,000 will support Dr. Fox's research on the biochemical origins of life in the sea.

PLAUSIBLE THEORIES

There are a number of plausible theories concerning marine conditions which could have led to the rise of the first living things, the director stated. By comparing experiments based on these different theories with chemical processes common to all living creatures, Dr. Fox and his co-workers are attempting to find which of these theories fits the known facts most closely.

Working with Dr. Fox on the project are Kaoru Harada, Alonzo Vestaby, and Peter Rowland.

Commencing tonight's performance will be a group of patriotic songs: "America, Our Heritage," by Helen Boel; "This Land," by Hilton Ross; Al Jacobs, "You're a Grand Old Flag," by Mel Olshan; and "America the Beautiful," by Samuel A. Ward.

The spirituals "All Night, All Day," arranged by Miss Schoolcraft; "Good News," and "Ezekiel" will be sung by the children. The latter will feature soloists Susie Cannon, Kitty Tucker, and Dickie Dumas.

John Boda's "We Thank Thee," Gladys Mencotti's "Small and the Night Visitors," and Mae Aubrey's "Sandman" will be sung by the Schoen's "Beneath a Southern Sky" are other selections to be presented.

Following intermission, the children will sing "Babes in Toyland" by Herbert MacClain and "The Fortune Teller" by Herbert Bostaon. American Folk Songs "At the Gate of Heaven," "Reuben, Rachel," "Louisiana Lullaby," and "Sandy Land," will entertain the audience.

"TAMMY" SUNG

After the singing of "Tammy," the program will be concluded by Calypso songs from the West Indies.

Piano accompanist this evening will be Janice Burrell, assisted by Stanley Rosen, Effie Mills and Willia m Pippin, trumpeters. Soprano will be Gwen Waters.

Last Culture Test December 18

The General Culture Test, required of each student before the first semester of his junior year, will be given for the final time this semester on December 18, Dr. K. D. McLaughlin announced today.

Dr. McLaughlin, who is in charge of the General Culture Test for the University Testing Service, said that the final test will be given at 7 p.m. in the Opperman Music Hall.

If the test is not taken at this time, a penalty fee of $5 will be automatically assessed. Registration for any subsequent term and graduation will be withheld until the test is taken and the penalty fee paid.

Excuses will be considered only if presented to the University Testing Service in Room 210, Education Building, before the test.

No 'Week' Planned For Honor Emphasis

The Student Honor Committee has decided to promote a continuing emphasis on honor emphasis rather than instead of an "Honor Emphasis Week" Acting Chairman Pat Wolfe said this week.

Wolfe, who took over the reigns of the committee when Chairman Joyce Westerberg began student teaching, also announced that a "mock trial" had been held on October 31 for the benefit of informing student leaders of honor court procedure.

The "mock trial," which was attended by presidents of women's dorms, representatives of fraternities and sororities, the Deans of Men and Women, a faculty member of the Honor Committee, and the members of the Honor Court, featured a member of a court as the defendant, with two witnesses testifying against him.

After the witnesses had testified, Chief Justice Barbara Burke Jones spoke briefly on court procedures, reporting procedure and practices, and rehabilitation procedures.

A question-and-war period followed with questions directed to members of the court and to the acting Secretary of Honor.

The students attending the meeting returned to their dorms and fraternity houses to lead small in formal discussions, giving students a chance to ask questions about the honor system.

The Honor Committee has made available wallets size cards with a clarity stated reporting procedure the names and addresses of the Honor Court members, and a schedule for the academic year. These cards will be circulated on the same informal basis as the Gestuncons.

Meeting Starts Tomorrow Nite In Opperman

A panel discussion tomorrow night at 7:30 in Opperman auditorium will keynote Florida State University's ninth annual Job-Getting Seminar, again sponsored by the Placement Office.

The conference will bring in the campus representatives from 87 organizations, to discuss job opportunities available for senior and graduate students.

"This is a real opportunity for these students to ask questions and get varied responses from representatives of different fields," said Dr. Avery C. Hardy, FSU placement officer.

JOB FOR ME IN '58

Centered around the topic, "Is There A Job For Me In 1958," the panel tomorrow night is open to all students as well as seniors and graduates. "It will be of value to undergraduates, as it is helping them to decide on their field of interest, and to get direct answers to people actually in that work," said Dr. Hardy.

Taking part in the panel are Attorney at Law Velma Keene who will serve as moderator; Robert Applegate, representing the field of communications; L. W. Carmack, management; Don B. Pryor, government; C. J. Wilcox, sales, and C. A. Bross, technical fields.

The three-day conference will officially open tomorrow at 4 p.m with an informal reception for representatives of organizations and faculty, in the Longmire lounge.

Dr. Hardy will preside over the panel discussion which will be in Opperman Dr. President Robert M. Strozier will extend a welcome and Mrs. Margaret Blair, assistant director of placement and financial aid, will introduce panel and make announcements. The student body will follow in the speech.

Closing the evening, there will be a social hour and scheduling of individual interviews.

On Thursday and Friday, from 9 till 11:30 a.m., and 1:30 to 4:30 p.m., the individual interviews will take place in the Suwannee room.

Students may register in advance for the interviews by visiting the Placement Office in the West cott. Dr. Hardy emphasized, although some of the representatives will be on campus before, six deans are urged to go ahead and make appointments for fields in which they are interested, since arrangements may be made for extended stay interviews.

Morrison's Launches Changes

Students should notice the story on the fourth page today about Morrison's Food Services and the improvements they have agreed upon to make in the Seminole Club and the Soda Shop.

MORRISON'S seems very receptive to student and university opinion about improvements which could make the eating places more pleasant and enticing for the customers and probably more profitable for the food service in the long run. It is commendable that the three representatives involved in the meeting—from the university, student government, and Morrison's—were able to work out definite action for the immediate future.

The few changes to be made will not achieve complete satisfaction, however, but other problems may be able to be worked out in the long run with the same type of cooperation.

THE HIRING of more bus boys in the Seminole Club is a measure which is badly needed during rush hours. Clean tables have been a rarity lately and students have had to shift for themselves in order to find a place to sit. And the improvements to be made in the Soda Shop are much overdue. There is much uncertainty as to what the prices are in the eating place, and sometimes find a different price charged by the cashier than is quoted at the end of the line.

THE establishment of a separate coffee line, which is one of the planks set in the agreement, will greatly ease the line in the Soda Shop and enable it to move more quickly.

Students' complaints of Morrison's have centered around price, quality, and quantity. These problems are fairly nebulous, however, and will probably always be a subject of criticism.

Nevertheless, we hope to see a genuine effort made toward the improvement of these factors; if the university must aid in this effort that's fine too.

Let's Have More "No Exits"

A "Standing Room Only" crowd Friday night greeted the players in the Drama Department's first experimental production, Jean Paul Sartre's "No Exit."

IT IS encouraging to note the new steps taken in drama on campus this year. Not only are the regular productions being preserved, but the experimental series gives the campus audience a chance to see seldom-staged offerings that not only entertain, but challenge and enlighten as well.

"NO EXIT" is, of course, a subjective experience. We do not intend to give it a review here, primarily for that reason.

There can be nothing but commendation for the bold venture on the part of Dr. James Brock in bringing more esoteric plays to the students and faculty through the experimental medium.

We hope the further experiments will prove as rewarding to the playgoers.

Get Camp Program Moving

The weather around Tallahassee these days is kind of pleasant, except for an occasional rainy day. It hasn't yet become biting cold; in fact some days are warm and sunny.

This brings the thought to our minds that it's still not too late for outdoor recreation. And when we think of outdoor recreation, we are reminded of the Florida State University Reservation.

Not long ago we were told by an enthusiastic young man that very soon facilites would be available at the Reservation for students to enjoy many kinds of boating: sailing, canoeing, etc. He said a program had been set up, lifeguards hired, and all other necessary arrangements made for the recreational project to get under way.

It has been a long drought for FSU students as far as Lake Bradford is concerned. Three years of lack of rain has left the lake and docks dry until this summer when the rain returned to more than adequately fill the empty basin.

The rain overdid itself at first and the camp program was stymied by too much water. Now the water line has receded and it seems the boating idea could be put into effect.

There isn't much in the way of this type of activity for students here, and no doubt a great many would enjoy the university camp's facilities if they knew they were available.

We do not know what is keeping the boating program at the Reservation from forging ahead, but we hope the difficulties are ironed out quickly—before students shy away because of the cold weather.

Science Ignores Subtleties Of Nature

By L. A. HESTER

The pages of history may well record the first atom bomb explosion in 1945 as the heralding of the age of science. The scientific advances in the past twelve years have been almost limitless and with Sputnik and Muniak growing lustily so their way overhead there is no telling what is yet to come.

THE WONDERS of science are apparently infinite, but with sober forethought I sometimes find myself wishing that the progress of science would abruptly come to a halt. The cold and harsh realities of science seem to bear down on us like the weight of an elifanth century romanesque church: heavy, massive and severe.

As the thrust of science marches unrelentingly forward the question that arises is whether the minds of men are equal to the challenge that it presents. So far it appears that we are slaves to science rather than masters of it. Until we discontinue measuring progress in terms of military prowess we would be better off without scientific advances.

NO DOUBT since the invention of the bow and arrow each innovation and discovery has been met with fear, with "surely this will undo mankind." Can you imagine how this analogy certainly appears dubious when one thinks in terms of a comparison between a hydrogen bomb and say for instance the discovery of gun powder.

Foolish logic! Perhaps! is all one can cry when you look at some of the state of the world today.

Can you imagine two men, one on each side of a street, stockpiling arrowheads without finally throwing them at each other; and on how history does repeat itself in this respect.

ONE WOULD LIKE to view science as the key to an ultimate goal of bettering mankind, but as it stands today it is hard to view it in any other term than one of survival.

The beep, beep of Sputnik is too close to the voice of a Shakespeare ghost to not hear and anytime a Shakespearean ghost appears you can expect the worst conceivable and usually end up getting worse than you expected.

THE PLACE OF religion comes to the forefront when one tries to delve into the mysteries of science. No matter what one thinks of religion you can't help but be a little thankful that there is something to temper the cruelty and ardor of "a metallic element heavy, pliable and inelastic."

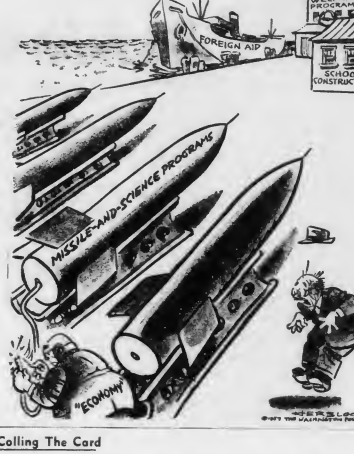
But in time of year many organizations are thinking about choosing men and women who will offer them guidance and direction during the coming year. In selecting these leaders they must be careful to choose persons who will fulfill the the first rather than the second definition of the word.

ONE DANGER a leader must guard against is the desire to be heavy handed in his leadership, to force and push rather than to persuade.

A certain amount of telling rather than asking is always necessary, but the leader, especially if he is leading for the first time, must guard against expressing his own insecurity by forcing others to conscientiously conform to his own ideas.

A GREATER danger than "heaviness" on the part of the campus leaders is that of pliability. All too often leaders are little more than putty in the hands of professors, administrative officials or other advisers.

In order to earn the title of leader a student needs to be more than a figurehead. The man or woman who stands up for what he believes even when "the guy on top" disagrees with him often



Phi Mu Epsilon Meets Tonight

Pi Mu Epsilon, campus mathematics clube, will meet tonight at 8 p.m. in 213 History.

Howard E. Taylor, associate professor of mathematics, will speak on "Recent Developments in Undergraduate Mathematics."

Dr. Taylor returned to FSU this semester after a year at the University of Chicago on a Carnegie grant, where he participated in a program of study and exchange of ideas on the liberal arts curriculum.

"Watch Where You Aim Those Things"

Colling The Card

True Image Of FSU Is Revealed

By JIM McINTYRE

People who inhabit the campus of the University of Florida are not all monstrous ogres, evidently, although that is the impression one gets at FSU.

I'VE ALWAYS been a little leery of over-active criticisms of the G'ville Branch of Florida's high education system. I read a friend (really!) who went to school there. He seemed to be an average chap, not at all unbearable, and as far as I could ascertain, possessed no homicidal tendencies. He had never even been in a riot.

So, being a college-type liberated intellectual, I curiously pried into the matter and tried to find out if they really were different.

THEY'RE NOT. They have many of the same problems that us bona fide Seminole types have. They don't like the food in the university cafeteria, they have massive trouble, honor trouble and woman trouble.

Dan Hackel, the Florida Alligator's Special Editor, wrote a column last week giving "Some Inside Info on our FSU Cousins."

HIS ARTICLE was humorous and well written, and showed that possibly the same type misconceptions exist in the Gator mind as exist in the FSU student.

He compared the editorial issues at stake in the two student newspapers, mentioned the honor court setup, poked good natured fun at our freshman class election turmoils, and requested that we send some of our excess girls down that way as a starter.

I HOPE that in the near future he will write something about the concept of the Florida student as an estate in the Seminole mind. He could do a lot to clear up the vision of the drunken fraternity man who can't get a date because there aren't enough girls and feels he must float down the river in a tube with a beer but not before leaving a tear ass flight with the Gainesville Police while smashing the SAE lion and hanging Bob Woodruff in effigy.

To start the ball rolling, however, I would like to mention a few things that might help destroy the average Florida man's impression of Florida State University.

FSU STUDENTS do not turn flip-flops on the way to class. Of course, some cheer and gymkana athletes do swing in the trees, but ...

FSU students are not all music majors. Some major in art.

FSU PARTIES are not the tamest things around. You ought to attend a women's dorm Wednesday afternoon tea for excitement, Zoweee!

FSU does have a football team. Quality is not an important consideration in a matter such as this.

FSU DOES have many versatile coeds. Witness the appearance of Lynn LaGrange, homecoming queen and Miss FSU, in the APO "Ugly Woman" contest.

FSU does have many coeds. Quality is an important consideration in a matter such as this.

FSU DOES have a humor magazine. I think.

FSU does have high educational standards. Only those who have hich standing in high school are admitted. They must also have a high I.Q. or else they flunk out.

FSU'S FAMOUS eleven story dorm has only ten stories. This is a fireman exclusive!

FSU women are allowed a good deal of freedom. As long as they stay within the law.

THESE ARE but a few of the things that I hope will go to clear the minds of UF students about our campus and its inhabitants.

And as for columnist Hackel's request for us to send some of our excess girls, all we can say is, we don't have to send them. They go themselves every weekend they can get off.

Definition Of Leaders Given By The Kansan

(ACP)—Needed: intelligent leaders in today's college world. So thinks the editors of the UNIVERSITY DAILY KANSAN. In the current editorial they defined leadership this way:

Not enough could ever be said about the value of intelligent leadership in our collegiate world today.

THERE ARE two meanings of "lead." One has the connotation of guidance and direction; the other means, in the words of Webster, "a metallic element heavy, pliable and inelastic."

All that time of year many organizations are thinking about choosing men and women who will offer them guidance and direction during the coming year. In selecting these leaders they must be careful to choose persons who will fulfill the the first rather than the second definition of the word.

ONE DANGER a leader must guard against is the desire to be heavy handed in his leadership, to force and push rather than to persuade.

A certain amount of telling rather than asking is always necessary, but the leader, especially if he is leading for the first time, must guard against expressing his own insecurity by forcing others to conscientiously conform to his own ideas.

A GREATER danger than "heaviness" on the part of the campus leaders is that of pliability. All too often leaders are little more than putty in the hands of professors, administrative officials or other advisers.

In order to earn the title of leader a student needs to be more than a figurehead. The man or woman who stands up for what he believes even when "the guy on top" disagrees with him often wins the respect of his colleagues, his adversary and more important, himself.

ALONG THE SAME line, a leader must not be too easily swayed by people within his own group. He must walk the narrow line between spinelessness and dogmatism. He must be firm in his own convictions and still be able to accept the opinions of others.

One final danger of the lead-like leader is inelasticity. Like bearyhandedness this often is a symptom of lack of faith in oneself. Only the leader who is firm in his own beliefs and who has self-respect can afford to be flexible in his leadership.

HOWEVER, flexibility and pliability should not be confused. The great difference between elastic and putty is that elastic can be stretched and it will snap back into shape. Once pushed around, putty loses all semblance of its original shape.

No one can tell a person how to lead. It is an art which must be acquired through practice. Leaders are made, not born, and self-respect, the art of persuasion, flexibility and firmness of conviction are three of the basic elements in the formation of a leader.

Letter Influenced Football Game?

TO THE EDITOR:

I will never doubt the ability of student opinion and the Flambeau to influence University actions.

Last Friday a "Former Athlete" wrote a letter-to-the-editor decrying the expense and over-emphasis of football. He implored the administration to substitute higher academic "spirit."

Apparently a copy of the Flambeau got into the hands of the Director of Football Because no one would doubt that Saturday night's game with Miami Southern was a major over-de-emphasize football at Florida State.

Club's 'Juarez' Good Movie Fare

BY ALAN KASS

The intellectual film goer and is, missing m substantial movie-fare if delinquent in obtaining membership to the FSU Film Club which is presenting tonight at 8 and 8:40 p.m. Paul Muni and Brian Aherne in the exciting story of Mexico's hero, "Juarez."

AS OF yesterday, there are several openings available at a very low cost to the student for the duration of the year, enabling him to see seven more fine and unusual films than one would not ordinarily see at a commercial theatre at the present time.

Since most of these pictures, which are very thoughtfully selected by Dr. George Lensen of the History Department, are what one might call cinema classics, in that they are available only for cinema scholarship and other intellectual functions as museums and art exhibitions we are fortunate to have them on our campus. Besides this, many of the pictures are upcoming programs are the best of their kind from foreign studios and European film-makers.

I DELVED into some pre-war reviews of "Juarez" and it appears one aspect of critical acclaim this picture has received in the past. Time, Newsweek and Nation were my sources and since these blurbs were of the highest praise we shall let them speak for themselves.

Nation asserts, "In 'Juarez' a remarkable cleanness is reached. The fact alone puts this picture in a class with 'Citizen Kane' and 'The Story of Louis Pasteur.' The scope of the film is immense and it is widened still farther by the desire to present it with useful meaning for our time."

Time said, "It is a story of democracy in government. Juarez is elevated to stature to be driven out of office a year later when France declares war on Mexico. As a historical panorama it is both interesting and entertaining."

IN SHORT all of these critics agreed that no one who wants sense, story and message should miss this one.

Another clue to the picture is evident by the fact that the huge cast headed by Paul Muni, who is still the greatest actor of historical personalities in the world, there are six academy award winners. For those who wish to catch a glimpse of where Brando and Meeker received their inspiration to serve in a minor part, John Garfield, one of the last of Hollywood's natural' actors.

It might be worth your time to check into the school's only opportunity for students to see the elite in movie classics by coming by the Demonstration school tonight.

What? 'Whatniks' For Real Or Not?

BY BUCKY CANON
Exchange Editor

The Mississippi State Mareon recently took a poll of student opinion concerning the firing of lecturers, or as the Mareon prefers to call them, the "whatniks".

OF THOSE polled, six students believed in the existence of the "whatniks" and four did not. The lowest age of those who believed varied from the idea that the "whatniks" were U.S. Air Force aircraft to ideas that they were interplanetary investigators from the moon or Mars. One disbelieving student thought that some of those people who saw "whatniks" were seeing things, while others were using their imagination.

Another student opinion poll—this one from the University of Delaware—was taken to determine their opinion of the quality of campus life.

STUDENTS ARE generally satisfied with the physical facilities of the university, the pollsters found out. They also give an "okay" to services such as the bookstore, the food services, the counseling services, the laundry, and the cleaning services, though students are reluctant to take advantage of them.

Chief gripes of the Delawarans concerns the administration. Many students, especially upperclassmen feel that there is not enough communication between the administration and them, and that when they do express them, university officials will not listen.

THE DELAWARE students also think that the administrative officials lack faith in the students, and place needless, arbitrary rules upon their behavior.

In addition, the university-administration communications could be better. (ICP)

Who says that politics is clean? At Fordham University the Campus Republican Club was tried by a student court of holding "unauthorized activities of offense." The student court found the club "not guilty."

AFTER THIS verdict the court proceeded to censure the club for having an "unorganized and highly chaotic election." The Republicans were then fined $50.

I wonder what would have happened if the club had been found guilty?

Homecoming Can Do Wonders

HATTIESBURG, Miss.—Homecoming can do wonderful things some football teams.

There are some which the alumni return does not seem to notice, such as Florida a 20-20 loser to Mississippi and Miami which dropped a 16-6 Grads day contest to and last Friday night.

However, 45 Seminole athletes (or at least those of the 45 who played) will tell you it affected Mississippi Southern Saturday night here.

The Southerners succeeded in injecting a good deal of life into the residents of this rather sleepy old Southern town Saturday and in sending the handful of loyal Seminole fans home crushingly.

Reporters who had watched the Southerners in most of their seven victories will tell you that they had never put on an inspired performance as they did for the Homecoming ed of 14-500.

The crowd itself is quite significant, for the stadium has a ng capacity of only 12,000. I'm told also that they have ordarily larger standing room only crowds for Southern games.

In direct contrast to the victors' inspired play, there apared to be a definite apathy on the part of the Seminoles ho their only serious scoring threat of the night failed late the first period.

They beat us in desire," Seminole head chief Tom Nugent told ers as he boarded the bus after the contest.

RE LACKING?

It's a sad but true story that desire seemed actually to be difference in the ball game.

The second half was almost a repetition of the gruesome 30 minutes of the Miami game, and but for two goal line ds by FSU, it could well have been.

It may be small consolation to the Seminoles, but it is ible that Southern's great fullback, "Bo" Dickinson did very of the offensive damage outside of his one touchdown run.

At that, Dickinson lost yardage on 4 play from scrimmage for first time in his college career.

It was Dickinson's first appearance in three games due to knee injury, and, perhaps because of spasmodic inspiration on part of the FSU line, he was only a shadow of the fullback he battered Seminole defenses here last season.

Southern apparently has another outstanding sophomore fullback on the way however, in Dickinson's sub, Buddy Sapp, ed up consistent gains all night.

By far the outstanding feature of the Southern attack may be very junior halfback Bobby Lance, whose 57-yard touchdown ramble for Southern's first score seemed to break the seminole spirit.

It is quite significant that FSU's leading ground gainer, soph Bill Pickard picked up but 29 yards, as Southern scored its 3 shutout of the season.

Texas A fine Homecoming, but a long plane ride back for the EN SEASON HOPELESS?

Most observers, including your reporter, feel that Nugent's chances of an even season disappeared with the loss to Southern, genial Tribe mentor, ever optimistic, is still hoping.

With both Oklahoma and Texas A&M falling to Father Upset last Saturday, it appears possible today's national polls may have Auburn the nation's finest football team.

This may be both advantageous and disadvantageous to the Seminoles' chances of upsetting the Tigers this Saturday afternoon.

It is doubtful that the powerful Tigers (or Plainsmen or War Eagles if you prefer) are looking for too much trouble from the Seminoles Coach Lloyd Jordan will not forget last year's 13-7 ister, however.

Though they have not yet proved to be as tremendous an offe machine as they are defensive one, the Tigers will be to enhance their national status by putting on good show the Seminoles

Their offense has exploded only twice this year, in a 40-7 win Chattanooga and a 48-7 romp of Houston, though Houston ose contributed heavily to the latter victory.

It is evidently not too difficult to prevent Auburn from ing more than once or twice, but to score on the Plainsmen nother matter entirely.

Boston, Mississippi State and Chattanooga are the only ns which have managed to do so, and only State came close ing, dropping a 15-7 decision.

Auburn will cooperate with a blocked kick or a fumble in their own territory and our boys play their finest football of the year—Who knows it?" Nugent comments.

Auburn has not been exceptionally cooperative to opposing this year.

SOUTHERN SHORTS. Though losing the battle of the grid- the Seminoles probably came home with honors in the batof the bands, as is typical . . . the Southern band's only claim ame is the "State Darlings," an all-girl dancing group whose rainbly clad females raised quite a stir on their appearance ay here.

The Southern band attires in "Scotsman" uniforms, and it employs six bagpipes in the halftime operation . . . the 95- "Pride of Mississippi" falls somewhat short of the Marching ds however, and the Chiefs drew a rousing applause for their ce show . . . It might also be said that the Southern ecoming Parade hardly compared with the Florida State ion either . . . the floats lacked the color and elaborateness ch makes the FSU parade a yearly spectacle worth seeing.

Tribe Falls To Southern, 20-0

Second Quarter Tallies Crush Seminoles' Hopes

By LARRY BLOCK
Flambeau Sports Editor

Mississippi Southern picked up steam in the second quarter, and defeated Florida State, 20-0 at Hattiesburg, Saturday, apparently applying the crusher to the Seminoles' hopes of breaking even this season.

With two games remaining on the '57 slate, the Seminoles stand at three wins as against five losses, and chances of them upsetting the Auburn Tigers Saturday appear all but nil and seem to indicate the first losing season for Tom Nugent here at FSU.

The Southerners, after having been pushed around the field for the first 20 minutes, scored twice in four minutes on touchdowns by halfback Bobby Lance and fullback R. L. "Bo" Dickinson to the approval of a homecoming crowd of 14,500.

Quarterback George Sekul added the third and final score late in the last quarter by sneaking over from the one yard stripe.

It was probably the last game between the two schools with Southern holding the edge four games to two, and save MSC their eighth win in nine tries.

OPENING KICKOFF

Florida State took the opening kickoff and behind the end runs of Fred Pickard and plunges of fullback Bob Nellums carried the ball to the Southern 39.

But Southern ends Curry Janeiro and Bob Yen-bo spilled Seminole runners for losses, and Renn punted out of bounds on the 17.

After a punting exchange the Tribesmen a break when Nellums jarred the ball loose from Sekul's hands and Captain Ron Schoenbaerer fell on it at the 47

Quarterback Bobby Renn passed to Nellums and picked up 14 more on an end sweep to put the pigskin on the Southern 22

Four plays later FSU had the ball on the four yard line. Nellums made a dazzling catch of a Renn pass on the two, and on fourth down halfback Stan Dobosz was stopped on the one, and southern took over.

Midway in the second quarter, Renn quick-kicked 46 yds. to the Seminole 14. Lance picked up enough to go over the Tribe's left side on the line.

But on the next play he went through the right side for 57 yards and the first tally of the game. Hugh Mallinac's extra point attempt went wide and the score stood at 6-0. MSC

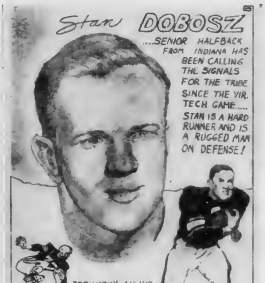
Second-string quarterback Joe Majors fumbled and Donnie Bush fell on it at FSU's 23.

Sekul passed 12 yards to Charley MacArthur on a fourth-and-seven play with MacAurthur being tackled at the 1.

FULLBACK SCORES

Three shots later, Dickinson, playing the first time in three weeks, carried the football and the FSU defense into the end zone with him from seven yards out and Southern led 12-0.



Ollie Yates spoil the upstarts for the extra point making the score 13-0.

In the second half Florida State dug in and halted two Southern drives that had penetrated beyond the Seminoles' 10 yard line.

Grand Jon Jenkins stopped the first by intercepting a pass in the end zone and falling forward to the one-foot-line.

After Jerry Henderson had punted for 48 yards, Mississippi Southern started a 50-yard drive that was stopped on the one. The Southerners had a first down on the eight, and twice, halfback Larry Weeks was stopped cold at the one by the FSU forward wall.

The MSC final tally came with 3:10 left in the game. Gerald Southerners after the kickoff, Phelp fumbled and Charley Elzey recovered at the 42. Tommie Purvis sprinted 32 yards to FSU's 8. Three plays later Sekul took it over from the one, and Yates converted to make it, 20-0.

Tigers Whip Georgia; Spartans Win Fifth

While Florida State absorbed a 20-0 loss at the hands of Mississippi Southern, its two remaining opponents, Auburn and Tampa, won their games.

Auburn won its eighth game of the season by slipping by the scrappy Georgia Bulldogs, 6-0, including last season it was the 12th straight victory for the Tigers.

The meo from the Auburn plains, who come to Tallahassee next weekend to meet the Tribe, had trouble against the Bulldog defense all Saturday afternoon. The Tigers pushed their only score across with one minute remaining in the first half on a pass from Lloyd Nix to all-American end candidate Jim Phillips.

TOPS DEFENSIVELY

Auburn, which is ranked the number one defensive team in the nation, showed why, as the limited Georgia to three first downs and 97 total yards. The Bulldogs had two opportunities to score in the third period when they recovered fumbles on Auburn's ten and seven yard line But the Tiger defense was too much and held them both times.

The Tampa Spartans, hampered by injuries, had a hard time getting their attack started but put out enough effort to down Appalachian State, 26-8. The win was the third in a row for the Spartans who play host to FSU on Nov. 30.

Appalachian State, a small college in North Carolina, was outmanned and could make little headway against Tampa's strong line.

Tampa played without the services of its two halfbacks, Billy Shields and Don Herndon. Fred Casoo, 245 lb fullback, led the Spartans attack and scored one touchdown and kicked two extra points.

51 YARD PASS

Quarterback George Staroulis thrilled the homecoming crowd when he teamed up with end Ken Gambrell on a 51 yard pass play which was Tampa's third score. Appalachian scored its touchdown in the second period on a two yard plunge by fullback Joe Walker.

The college from North Carolina got a safety in the last quarter to bring its total to nine. For Tampa it was the fifth win of the year against two losses.

Tankers Win Georgia AAU

The Florida State University swimming team swept to their second straight Georgia AAU title Saturday, compiling an overwhelming 133 points to second place Georgia's 33.

Third piece went to FSU's freshmen team as they nosed out Atlanta Athletic Club swimming Assn., 31 points to 30. Tied for fifth place with 12 points each were Clemson, Emory and Georgia Tech.

Ken Abbott and Joel Jacobs tied for high point honors, both winning a first and plus being a member of the winning 400 yd. medley relay team.

Abbott won the 220 yd. backstroke and 200 yd. individual medley events while Jacobs hit top form winning both his specialities, the 100 and 200 yd. breaststroke events.

Movie Books Go On Sale

Movie coupon books will go on sale today in Tallahassee theater box-offices, at a special rate for Florida State University students.

The coupon books will contain tickets worth $2.60 for admission and refreshments, but will cost only $2.

This reduced-rate plan was arranged through the cooperation of Florida and State Theater Manager Tommy Hyde, who worked with a Student Government composed of Senator Marion Hair, Womens Vice-president Polly Atwater, and Student Body President Arnold Greenfield.

"We are urging all students to buy and use the coupon books, in order to make the arrangement successful," Hair said. "In the past, we've tried to reach a solution to the problem of high theater rates, with no results.

But now we've arrived at a plan that we think will be workable. We hope the students will take advantage of the lower price of coupon books." Hair said.

Educators Hold State Meet Here Friday And Saturday

How to find and train teachers for Florida's mushrooming Junior college system will be the subject of a statewide meeting of educators at Florida State University Friday and Saturday, Nov. 22-23.

The occasion is the 6th annual Junior College Conference at FSU. Invitations to attend have gone out to county school superintendents in areas considering new junior colleges, presidents of junior colleges, college deans of education and others.

BIG PROBLEM

"The significance of the problem we plan to discuss is this," said Dr. James W. Thornton, professor of education at FSU and director of its new program of training junior college teachers, "there are seven public junior colleges in the state now and at least 20 more are to be established in the next three or four years. Obtaining qualified teachers for them is one of the main problems in getting off to a sound establishment."

Dr. Thornton, who is making arrangements for the program, said Dr. Robert M. Strozier, president of FSU, will welcome the approximately 150 persons attending the meeting gets under way tonight in the University School Auditorium at 2 p.m. Friday.

At this session President Kenneth Skaggs of Chipola Junior College in Marianna will speak on "The Qualifications of Junior College Teachers" and Dean Mode L. Stone of the School of Education will speak on "The Recruitment of Teachers for Junior Colleges."

At a banquet meeting Friday night Dean Milton W. Carothers of the Graduate School will preside and Dr. Thornton will speak on the subject, "Who Are the Students in the Junior College?"

Cavalier—Cotillion Fall Tryouts Set Tonight At Student Center

By ANN BARRINEAU

Fall tryouts for all students interested in becoming members of Cavalier-Cotillion, dance organizations on campus, are being held tonight at the Student Center at 7:30.

Fall dance classes have been held during the past several weeks at the center, under the direction of present Cavalier and Cotillion members. Attendance at the lessons is not required in order to try out, but anyone wishing to enter must attend tonight's preliminaries.

Finals will be held later in the week.

Dancers are judged on poise, dancing ability, personality, and interest. During the year, the clubs have their main functions, the fall and spring dance lessons, Freshman Frolics, and their annual Valentine dance.

Both groups at present have 15 members. They work together to promote interest in dancing and further social activities in the student body.

The Alpha Chapter of Cavaliers is at Gainsville, while the FSU group is the Beta Chapter. The Cavaliers originally had only five members, and held their meetings at the old airport Officers Club. Cotillion formulated their group in 1951.

Officers of Cotillion are: Ginny White, president; Sonny Dupree, vice-president; Mary Lillian Carver; and Joyce Daniels, chairman.

Cavalier officers are: Jim Davis, president; Wally Hall, vice-president; Jim Arrington, secretary; and Bill Ryan, secretary.

Morrison's Hires More Bus Boys

More bus boys will be hired to insure added cleanliness in the Seminole Club and several changes will be made to improve the efficiency of the Soda Shop it was decided in a meeting this week of university representatives and Morrison's.

Milton Dennis, manager of Morrison's; Gerald Jones, assistant business manager; and Arnold Greenfield, student body president, decided in the conference that three changes can be made in the immediate future.

The changes to be made in the Soda Shop include the erection of a menu board which lists items and prices, the assignment of a cashier for that duty alone, and the moving of the coffee urn to the other end of the line where other drinks are served.

Greenfield said, "there are many long range improvements to be made, some of which require large expenditures, but these modifications are a beginning in the right direction."

Morrison's, a subject of considerable criticism since its arrival on campus, is now being invest'gated by the Student Senate.

Miss Gymkana Crowning Set For Tonight

"Who's gonna be queen?" will be in the collective mind of "the biggest crowd yet" when the next-to-last Gymkana show begins tonight at 7:30 in the Men's Gymnasium.

But the identity of Miss Gymkana of 1957 won't be known until her crowning is featured at the final "Hesdlines" production tomorrow night.

Tickets for "Headlines" have been going fast in advance, but most of the tickets have been sold at the door the preceding nights," said ticket office personnel. "The biggest crowd yet" is expected for tonight's performance they said; the size of the crowds has been steadily increasing each night since the opening of the show Monday night. A large number of Tallahassee school children were special guests the first two nights.

Stan DeHart will serve as "ringmaster" or master of ceremonies for the 80-minute show, and will introduce the featured acts of FSU's renowned gymnastics team. The activity will take place around a newsstand, with the acts emerging from a giant newspaper.

Last year's queen was the former Linda Jones. On her court were Myra Ann Lay, Carol Ann Brown, Jan Hinson, Jesni Sue Bell, Beverly Laurent, and the former Vangie Carruthers. The theme of the show was "Alohe" and a stop-over in Hawaiian islands.

The shows each night have been devised by various dorms and personalities. Tonight's show is hosted by Delta Chi Frosh Frontier, while the final production tomorrow night will be dedicated to Tallahassee residents and FSU students.

Tickets can be obtained at the Newcomb ticket office and the athletic ticket office in the gym. General admission for non-students is $1, with students admitted for 50 cents with the ID card. Reserved seats cost an additional 25 cents.

Cites Golf Ball

Prexy Keynotes Conservatism In 'State Of Campus' Address

BY RAY WRIGHT
Flambeau Staff Writer

Student Government's actions should be motivated by a concern for conservatism, and the university is a perpetual institution whose demands go beyond the desires of the moment, Student Body President Arnold Greenfield told Senate Wednesday.

In his "State of the Campus" address to the legislative body, Greenfield summarized what Student Government has done, and challenged the senators to use the awareness of what needs to be done what is being done about it, and what should be done in the future.

GOLF BALLS

"Too often criticism of Student Government has been justified because officeholders have practiced the "golf ball" theory of operation. They think Student Government, like a golf ball, should start off with a burst of speed, enjoy a glorious but uncontrollable flight, and end up God knows where," said Greenfield.

"It is my sincere conviction that there is a need for real, responsible leadership to replace the relatively simple function of passive office holder. It is my desire to be directed by a basic philosophy of action within the always serve as a guide—both in day to day operation and in time of crisis," he said.

Continuing Greenfield said, "If I had to give a name to my philosophy of student government I would call it Conservatism. Being callous or apathetic to student demands should be unthinkable to us, being destructively radical should be equally unthinkable."

The methods of the executive branch of our organization this year will be those of cooperation with the total university community—for I am dedicated to the idea that what is good for the university is good for everybody and will be acceptable to all but a very few."

LITTLE DEVILS

"I believe that we should not view our student problems as generated by devils who are determined to frustrate progress. Through a practice of this philosophy much progress has been made, but the most important step we can take is to realize that the university is a dynamic institution and everything we do may manifest itself in long range improvements which will be enjoyed by students in the future."

Summing up what student government has done this year Greenfield pointed out that a better working relationship has been established with the university business office as a result of this action, two problems which recently came up were given immediate attention.

The unfortunate traffic and parking situation between the ATO and KA houses was relieved when Greenfield recommended appropriate actions be taken to the Traffic Committee and Business Office. Within two days a new construction road was opened up and additional parking space was made available.

FOOD ACTION

Action taken by student government in response to food service complaints resulted in a meeting between the manager of Morrison's, a university representative, and Greenfield. Greenfield reported that an understanding of mutual problems had reached that will serve as a basis for continued progress in this area.

"Student government owes a vote of thanks to Mr. Gerry Jones and Dr. Harry Day in connection with many lesser instances of progress," said Greenfield. "They have both cooperated with us in every way possible. Through Dr. Day's foresight last year, and Mr. Jones' cooperative work this year, the students have been given access to the workings of the business office in all its various departments."

What has student government done? Greenfield answered this by pointing out that action last summer helped to avoid the impending $500 more car ban "Student government shall continue to oppose this action," he said.

A student-staff Infirmary Board has been formed which should develop into a workable outlet for grievances and suggestions concerning the health service Student opinion in this area should be directed to the Secretary of Student Welfare," Greenfield said.

CHEAP INSURANCE

Also in the field of student health, Greenfield stated that the "best and cheapest insurance program ever" is being offered to the students this year

Greenfield reported that steps have been taken to get additional trust lines and dormitory switchboards installed. "This will eventually allow direct communication with your party in any dormitory and make it easier to call from off campus," he said.

Greenfield also said that student government is getting a more practical program designed to improve the honor system.

"The campus chest effort got off with a bang at the recent Four Freshman concert, sponsored by a generous fraternity," he said.

"At the present time student government is taking an active part in re-shaping the university policy on scholarships and

Bus Seating Case To High Court

A Florida State University student and two Florida A & M students convicted of violating Tallahassee's segregated bus seating ordinance said this week they will take their case to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Circuit Judge W. May Walker on Friday upheld city police conviction of Joe Spagna, FSU student; and Leonard D. Speed and Johnny Herndon, FAMU students.

At the request of their attorneys, Municipal Judge Walter Walker granted a stay of the student's jail sentences and fines for violating the ordinance until the Supreme Court can be asked to review their convictions.

They were sentenced to 60 days in jail and fined $500 each.

Rodriguez said he would contend in his appeal that the constitutional rights of the three students were violated and that the ordinance was a "subterfuge" to perpetuate segregation.

The ordinance was enacted May 7 over a veto by the Tallahassee City Commission during a dispute over segregated seating on city buses. It requires drivers to assign riders to numbered seats on the basis of weight distribution, safety, and other factors.

In practice the ordinance has not been enforced recently.

The three students have been given liberty on $500 appeal bonds.

TAMPA TICKETS NOW AVAILABLE

Tickets for the Florida State-Tampa football game at Tampa's Spartan stadium Saturday, December 30, at Tampa may now be picked up at the men's gym.

The Tampa game at Tampa is being made a special reserved seating for FSU students. Tickets are $1, and students must show their ID cards with them when they attend the game.

A guest ticket will cost $1.50

There are 1,000 seats available, and all seats must be purchased at the athletic business office of the men's gym, according to business manager Ed Cubbon

It will be the final game of the season for the Seminoles, and as an added attraction the Marching Chiefs will be in attendance and will perform at halftime.

Student Nurse Dies In Miami

A Florida State University student nurse, who was interning at a Miami hospital, died early Wednesday morning in an explosion and fire which swept the third floor of the hospital.

Ruth Carol Hackathorn, daughter of Mr and Mrs. Alfred F. Hackathorn of Miami, was living with her parents while interning as a junior at Jackson Memorial hospital.

Dean Vivian M. Duxbury of the School of Nursing said the student nurse became ill three weeks ago and an operation was performed Tuesday afternoon. A brain abcess was found, the dean said.

Miss Hackathorn graduated from North Miami High school in June, 1953 and entered FSU the following September. She was enrolled in the four-year program leading to a bachelor's degree in nursing.

During her two years on the campus, Miss Hackathorn was active in the Baptist Student Organization and in other organizations. She was considered an outstanding student.

Going Home? Travel Service Offers Rides

The frequent question of "how to get home for Thanksgiving" is being solved for many students by the Student Travel Service, with headquarters located in 206 Long Hall.

The growing service, which began operations just last year, is under the direction of Ruth Fountain, who also served as traffic chief.

Under the program, files are kept of students who have cars and want a ride.

"We also can arrange trips to Gainesville and Atlanta for Proliv and other big weekends." Mrs Fountain added. That's in addition to the regular holiday service to Miami, Jacksonville, or Pensacola, an extension 72191, can help all cars for those who want riders and riders for those who need them, she emphasized.

'Miracle Of Sean O'Casey' Is Flory's Topic For 'Hour'

"The Miracle of Sean O'Casey," the topic of Dr. Claude Flory when he addresses the English Coffee Hour, will be heard this afternoon at 4 at the Westminster House.

O'Casey, regarded by critics as one of the greatest living playwrights, is a personal friend of Dr. Flory who has been on the Florida State University English faculty since 1945. The two met in England while Dr. Flory was a student at Oxford University and had since been maintained an intermittent correspondence.

Pointing out that O'Casey's dramatic life might have prevented his writing, Dr. Flory said, "it is a miracle he actually ever wrote at all." The Coffee Hour talk will be centered around this point.

Further details of O'Casey's plays, has been showing in New York for more than a year according to Dr. Flory and was previously produced in London. Other late Irish playwright's successes were Jone and the Paycock, The Plough and the Stars, The Silver Tassie and Within the Gates.

Dramatized concert readings from his volume autobiography have been a feature of off-Broadway entertainment in New York for several years. O'Casey has written a volume of poems and many essays and stories in addition to plays.

Dr. Flory, specializing in the Celtic renaissance in literature, wrote his doctoral dissertation at the University of Pennsylvania on American literature. He has also devoted much study to the Elizabethan period

Before coming to FSU, Dr. Flory taught at Juniata College, McPherson College and Washington and Jefferson. He often lectures to educational, religious and civic organizations.

Adlai GOP's Insulin

The recent appointment of twice defeated Presidential candidate Adlai Stevenson as an advisor to the State Department seems reminiscent of the old Truman-Acheson days. No one can deny that Mr. Stevenson's appointment has been controversial—everyone from Sherman Adams down to the lowliest professional politician has had some comment to make.

TWO QUESTIONS need to be asked: first, will Adlai, like Dulles, succeed the administration he is advising? Secondly, why has most of the comment from both political parties been unfavorable?

The answer to the first of these is obviously dependent upon the outcome of the 1960 presidential campaign—Stevenson could never be Secretary of State in a Republican administration. However, the Democrats' chances in 1960 look increasingly good—and thus so do Adlai's.

THERE CAN be no doubt that Stevenson is one of the very few truly statesman-like figures the U. S. has produced in recent years. Unlike so many attempting to practice the delicate art of diplomacy in the U. S. today, he is a man of world wide stature and respect. If the Democrats elect the next President, Stevenson would be a logical choice for Secretary of State.

The second question is more difficult to answer. Supposedly responsible public figures in both parties have made unfavorable remarks about the appointment. Assistant President Adams publicly questioned Mr. Stevenson's capabilities; many lesser Republicans have decried this deviation from exclusive GOP control of foreign policy. Most surprisingly, many Democrats have also condemned the move toward bi-partisanship.

SOME HAVE said Stevenson should have gotten a more important post. Others have complained that Eisenhower and Dulles were just seeking some favorable press reports. Strangest of all are those members of Adlai's party who say that their man is attaching himself to the floundering Eisenhower administration at the worst possible time.

These critics say Stevenson's reputation will be hurt by association with a foreign policy which is rapidly losing favor both at home and abroad.

SUCH AN attitude is indicative of a strange sense of values indeed. Although it is true that Dulles & Co. are having an increasingly difficult time, because of the ICBM, Sputnik, Tunisia, etc., this is precisely the reason why some new advice and a fresh approach is necessary. It should be remembered that these are America's problems—not the exclusive property of the Republican administration.

If the appointment of Adlai Stevenson or anyone else can have a significant effect on U. S. foreign policy, and the change is for the better, then we suggest that momentary political considerations ought to assume a very definitely secondary role.

Change Direction

As the nation continued to look for a scapegoat on which to blame our scientifically retarded educational system, educators from leading colleges and universities discussed the problem of the "imbalance" between science and the humanities in the New York Times.

THESE educators, while recognizing that science and technology must receive more attention in this atomic age, contended that science is to no avail without humanities. They do not want to see the liberal arts put in a minor role in our educational system and believe that the fields are so intermingled, one is no good with out the other.

To quote some of the opinions put forth by these noted educators: "the fear of conflict. . . is due to the failure to recognize that science is one of the liberal arts. . . . the sciences and the humanities have always been complementary and mutually beneficial. . . it is in concert that humanities and the sciences make for meaningful liberal arts education. . . a scientist without broad humanistic training may be irresponsible and short-sighted. . . ."

THE BASIC assumption made by all of these persons seems to us an invalid conclusion however; that the fundamental philosophy of education today is the execution of a strong liberal arts curriculum in which the emphasis of science has been lacking.

It seems that our educational systems today, though fairly heterogeneous from state to state, are not really lacking in scientific emphasis, but in a concentration of liberal arts education as well.

THE EDUCATED man is not looked upon by our society with the respect he should enjoy. The goal of our lives is to receive an education which will be financially profitable and the emphasis in education is toward this achievement.

If we examine our own milieu we can see signs of this en.gma. Who is the most lauded student on the typical U. S. campus? It is not the scholar, who is often looked upon as being a little "odd," but the strapping, brawny athlete, or the "well adjusted" fraternity man with his books in the back trousers and three button coat.

OUR CULTURE is geared to the spirit of competition, not only in sports but in business as well, therefore the summum bonum of so many college students is to "get ahead" which means getting a good paying job and buying as many houses, cars, and washing machines as possible.

Our society needs many things which are not going to be acquired if our values continue to become entrenched in this huckstierism. The time has come when intellectual achievement—both in science and liberal arts, as we have asserted one is no good with out the other—must again become respectable in our schools, and brains must be omnipotent in our value of life instead of excessive extracurricular activities.

PRESIDENT Eisenhower said recently the first step for better educational standards in this country would be for the nation's citizens to take a greater interest in their schools. But this interest should be geared towards raising academic qualifications.

This means from the ground up. It is too late for the student entering college to regain the knowledge which should have been required of him in high school.

NOT ALL high school students are able to attend college, but the capable students should be better encouraged to lay a solid foundation for college study. Given a choice, high school students tend to pick courses subjects to take, and then find their background inadequate for advanced study.

There is also still a need to discover individual talents and guide students into the field for which they are best suited. Not only more scientists and engineers are needed, but better trained teachers and more capable politicians and statesmen.

Greater financial support of education is needed for higher salaries and scholarships to worthy students, but still, the primary need is for intellectual achievement to obtain a place of prominence in the minds of students.

BACK IN the Dark Ages, when there were no colleges or universities and formal higher education did not exist, a university was founded by the coming together of scholars in a certain quarter of the city of Bologna, Italy. This was founded the University of Bologna—the oldest university in the Western world and the ancestor of modern Florida State University.

Bologna was founded about 1100, back when the Dark Ages were really dark. At first they taught only law, but the university expanded to medicine, philosophy, medicine, and liberal arts within a century after its founding. At the peak of its fame as a center of culture and learning in Europe—about 1300—the university contained more than 10,000 students.

OF COURSE life at the ancient university differed much from life at present day American institutions. Only males attended Bologna. Classes began at 6 a. m. with the ringing of the bells of St. Peter. They did not end until about 6 p. m. Students usually attended a lecture during every lecture period.

The university did not provide student services such as cafeterias, libraries, infirmaries, or bookstores. In fact, Bologna, like most medieval universities, had no physical facilities. Lectures were held in the homes of the masters or in hired halls. Students lodged in rented rooms in the town.

AT NIGHT students studied by dim candlelight in drafty rooms. Their books were hand written on thin paper. Usually they had been laboriously copied by the student himself from a copy owned by the master.

Diversions of the student consisted of drinking bouts in nearby taverns, brawling with the townspeople, police, or among themselves, or just chasing after girls.

WHILE LIFE at ancient Bologna was vastly different from what we know it, student problems of seven centuries ago were similar to those faced by today's student. There were no formal admissions to Bologna. To be considered a student, one merely brought his belongings to the city and attended the lectures.

Student fees were not set. Students in a lecture bargained with the master over the price of the lecture in a very undignified manner. After the price was settled, it was split up among the students according to what each could afford.

DISPUTES between town and gown were always common place. Bad feelings raged because of unfair lodging prices, poor quality of beverages, disputes over girls, and police interference with the university activities.

At the peak of Bologna's fame, three disputes were generally won by the students. They forced the city to concede them jurisdiction over court cases involving students and even cases in which only one party was a student.

THEY WERE also exempt from taxation and police duty. The concessions they won by the sumpls threat of moving the university to a neighboring town. This was very easy to do as there were no buildings in fact, the lecture was carried out on several occasions for temporary periods.

STUDENTS FROM all over Europe attended Bologna. They divided themselves into guilds or colleges according to whatever nation they came from. Each guild ran itself, making statutes for their own members and trying their own disputes. Each guild elected a rector to head it. Sort of analogous to our modern fraternity presidents.

Bologna was a student run university. A council of students and certain other students ran it, passing laws that even the masters had to obey.

MASTERS could not be late for their hour nor could they miss a scheduled class without being fined. To leave town they had to put up a deposit with the council to insure their return. And (Get this!) if their lectures were not up to par, students began to attract at least five students, they were fined for having a poor lecture.

BOLOGNA was the Harvard of medieval Europe — the university par excellence. To have graduated from Bologna was considered the ultimate in scholarship. Two famous Bologna alumnae are Dante and Petrarch.

Medieval Europe did have other universities and as the years went on, some of them became to rival Bologna in fame and power. But Bologna is first university in our Western society and the ancestor of all modern higher learning.

UC Prototype—Aristotle Schwartz

(Editor's note—Printed recently in the Chicago Maroon, this article received much controversial comment from UC students. Believing it to be an interesting article, we reprint it here but ask readers not to blame all UC students by the sketch.)

To the new student:

MEET THE OLD STUDENT. Meet Aristotle Schwartz. UC phenomenon—the man who came here in nineteen forty something after four years in high school and is now only a dissertation's distance away from the Ph.D.

WHEN YOU do meet Aristotle you must be struck at once with the fact that he is an intellectual. This is obvious from his manner of speaking and the topics about which he discourses. So not let his bad grades deceive you. He gets C's only because he does not study until the night before the comp or final. If he did study however . . .

NOT ONLY is Aristotle an intellectual, but he is a pure intellectual. This means he hates football. Not so much for himself but because others who are not may become corrupted by its pernicious influence.

Beyond football he despises the vulgar attributes of a healthy body. Gymnastic activity detracts from pure mental activity and must be cast aside.

TRUE disciples of RMH? never go to the Varsity Grill. (Nor, by the way, will they ever go to Chi. This will cause others to think that they are "Joe Colleges"—instead of a serious scholars—and this arm you will find a sultan—and a bona fide of esoteric folk scorns in his head.

A WING-DING in fact is where Aristotle will most likely be found. He often sees to parties where he either becomes intensely involved in a discussion of the "good life" or else sits stagnerly aloof from all festivities—a detached observer rising above all others.

Parties, by the way, never mean fraternity parties. It should be evident that, since Aristotle Schwartz is a liberal, he is decidedly anti-fraternity.

NEXT TO intellectualism, Liberalism is Aristotle's strong point. A liberal on campus is one who has R-ferri Rorty, Gerard Rutehin's philosophy of education was divinely inspired, this perhaps, gives God too much credit- and must therefore not be uttered. Whenever the University Faculty meet to discuss changes in curricula, Aristotle picks their nemeline and carries banners denoting their action. Aristotle's view is that any such change must necessarily be reactionary.

IF YOU manage to become reasonably friendly with Aristotle he may invite you up to his apartment. Actually, it is

FSU Goes 'Big-Time' With Play 'No Exit'

By RICHARD PITTMAN

There were two performances given on campus last week both of which should give the FSU student cause to think. One event was a production of Die Fledermaus by the National Guard Roots Opera Company. I suppose that this word "National" is fixed to apologize for the essentially Southern character of the group.

The South has never been noted for its art, and none of this was changed one bit by the performance Monday night. Of course, the Grass Roots Opera Company is good for developing young talents who can't afford to attend a good school of music, like that at FSU. This production made one almost want to leave FSU for a real university.

The other production of the week was on Friday night, and was the performance under the direction of Isa Chatfield of Jean-Paul Sartre's play "No Exit." This was a real event for students, and many people went away deeply gripped, even shattered.

OF THE two events, it was the latter which made me feel myself at a university "big-time" in more ways than football. This was being treated with toys which could hurt you even, one was getting advantages that are not at small sectarian colleges. After the performance, in the Art of the Philosophy Department, went over some of the new vocabulary and ideas of the audience.

SARTRE COMES saying. "There is no God, and I am his prophet." According to the Existentialists, man first exists, then creates his own essence. He is not defined by any previously existing patterns: there is no "human nature."

The consciousness by its acts sets "appropriates" from its surroundings the consciousness flies from past to future it has no backgrounds or other hand, that is, man is freedom.

SARTRE DEVELOPS his picture of man as a consciousness surrounded by and grasping with real objects. But what happens to the Being of man when he confronts and is confronted by another— another consciousness?

His inner unity is "disintegrated," his flesh is "defined," he is appropriated and made Object rather than Subject. Man is fallen into a world which is a world of things. he must become an Other to hundreds of pairs of eyes every day.

BUT FROM the ideas of other pair of eyes I can deduce that it is indeed a Subject, who appraises me. Thus I can "use" me my own objectivity. Other can perform for me the function of which I am incapable. "to see me as I am . . . which I can deduce, "I am seen as what I am."

Coming to the relationship called "Love" we see its essential paradox. I am motivated to appropriate not an object but a subject, a freedom. But the freedom of the Other is not founded on my Being and I cannot do what I want to possess a freedom as freedom.

IN REALITY love is impossible, it will be a game of checkmate But the playing of the game itself must be pleasable. Two at least can get to know each other, but there Eselle. Cradeau, Irene in hell is an impossible nonsense. For there must be two groupings and regroupings. Thus while there are no torments in hell, it is nothing more than a gallery of mirrors. No the action must work itself through all eternity and comes the famous maxim "Hell is others."

Time Will Tell What Central Students Do

By ART ALBRECHT

Just about two months ago you could hardly pick up a newspaper or magazine or listen to radio broadcast without reading or hearing about the racial crisis concern Little Rock, Arkansas. Now, it's hardly mentioned at all.

THERE ARE now 250 highschool soldiers patrolling strategic Central High School and expectations are that this number will be cut in half. Increase until the presence of armed forces is no longer necessary. It is interesting to speculate, however, just what will happen when the troopers leave.

A spot poll of twelve dyed-the-school drug addicted Southerners at this University revealed that nine doubted that violence would begin. Two suspected that there might be a small amount of trouble which could be easily handled by the City Police or State Troopers, and the remaining student preferred all-out violence.

SIGNIFICANT, however, is the reasoning behind the nine who believed integration would stay intact in Little Rock. To quote one: it is not necessary to read the thoughts of the rest of the group.

"Man, them folks in Little Rock have had it. But actually it's a good for them because it will make the rest of us fight even harder to keep the Negroes from getting their foot in schools. Actually I'm for the plan. Once they get a foothold, I don't believe we can stop them."

WHAT DO the Central High kids think? Apparently that there are mixed feelings but at this stage of the integration game it is difficult to ascertain which faction is the strongest. Copies of a poem called "The Night Before Segregation," which was circulated around the school, certainly supports one new member. It said:

"'Twas the first of September
"And all through the South
"Not a word could be heard
"From mothers in their mouth
"The kiddies were ready
"For school the next day
"When all hell broke loose
"Down Arkansas way.
"Oh! Ike and Governor
"To mix up the schools
"But ol' Faubus said 'Hold It,
"I'll see what I can do
"If you know what's good
"You will stand back and listen
"'Cause we ain't going to stand
"For no nigger mixin
"He hollered an order
"Heard round the nation
"He called out the National Guards
"To halt integration.
"The guard came a running
"And took up their stand
"An' upsetd the right
"Of our good old Southland.
"He didn't like this
"So he ran to the phone
"And called up ol' Faubus
"At his Arkansas home.
"He said Meet me in Newport
"Tomorrow night

"Cause the niggers and white folks
"Are fixing to fight.'
"Faubus agreed
"And hopped on his plane
"And left in a hurry
"In a drinking rain
"Faubus returned
"But stuck to his rule:
"Ain't no bigger coming
"To these white schools
"So on came the troops
"In numbers two bigger
"To make sure the kids
"Go to school with the nigger.
"Ol' Faubus was brave
"And made a gallant stand
"But he had to abide
"By the law of the land.
"Ol' Ike won the battle
"For the time being
"And God help the niggers
"When the troops start leaving."

THE CURRENT lack of violence seems to indicate that the group which spoke of violence above is in the minority. However, Central High is a top-notch school. Only this week Central was listed as one of the six first-rate high schools of America.

It just doesn't go with the art that a person who has had a basic percentage of violence-minded attitude.

To stop integration by violence seems to irrational! But then, as our president, Dr. Strozier said a few months ago "The fact that there is not enough room for football in the minds of the American people is irrational—but true." We do a lot of things that are irrational. Only time will tell whether the students of Little Rock will do so.

Larry Block

Man From Tennessee

Even though I've only been in Florida for two years, I have well informed about the legend regarding Miami Senior ch's football team.

The times this football team loses are few and far between. anyone who is actually present to see the Stingarees lose is ed fortunate.

I have never had the opportunity to see them in action, many people refer to one specific game where a little half- ack scored two of three touchdowns to beat Miami High in annual Kiwanis game.

Now this game, I am told, until about five years ago pitted Miami High against some outstanding high school football team or another state, and frequently from other section of the ntry.

Then the rule was changed and the city champion would act host team. Result—Miami High was city champion

This particular game that I was told about took place 1953, and the opposition this day was furnished by Chatta- oga Central from Tennessee.

Down on the end of the game, Miami High had scored a touchdown and tied up the game after trailing at the half, 14-0. ever, on the ensuing kickoff, this young gentleman, who had ady scored once, proceeded to return the kick for a game ning score and victory for Chattanooga.

The reason for all the previous buildup is that this same ttack will be on the field tomorrow afternoon for all to see, d I'm sure some will wish he wasn't there.

His name: Bobby Hoppe.

But Hoppe is only a cog in this well-oiled gridiron steam- ine which has pushed Tennessee, Georgia Tech, et al, out contention to claim the top spot of the Southeastern Conference.

But in looking over the past scores of Auburn's eight vic- ories, they are not a stampeder in the usual sense of the ord.

This is a team that is content to prevent the opposition scoring. With that philosophy a team just cannot lose.

All they have to do then is push one score across and they've ked up a victory. It's as simple as that.

Many are those who feel that Auburn should have been ked the top team in the nation instead of heaving to settle second place.

According to the Associated Press poll they finished nine ints behind Michigan State in one of the closest battles for wning in the poll's history.

Perhaps, though, it was the Tigers' own fault as they ceded to make Georgia look good by defeating them by a score of, 8-0.

And with only two more weeks of football left, "Shug" ddan's boys will probably have blood in their eyes tomorrow.

Some of the sportswriters around the state have used such a whipping boys. Aimed at FSU, and Coach Bryant under" in reference to the game

There doesn't seem to be much hope for the Tribe in this e, but nothing is certain, Auburn won't have any soft spot ir heart for Florida State.

They want to be at the head of the class in 1957.

Tigers Tops Defensively; Nugent Shuffles Lineup

By BEN BALSER
Assistant Sports Editor

Ever try to run through a brick wall?

Well, in a sense that is what Florida State's Seminoles will attempt tomorrow when they meet the onrushing Auburn Tigers at 2 p.m. in Campbell Stadium.

Auburn, one of the two major undefeated teams in the country has an 8-0 record and is ranked 2nd in the national ratings. The Tigers, which will be the highest ranked team FSU has ever played, lead the country in total and rushing defense.

In eight games the men from Auburn Plains have allowed an average of 131.6 yards per game. They are also tops in rushing defense permitting an average game pickup of 76.4 yards.

Although the defensive action of Auburn has been in the spotlight all season, its offense is second best in the SEC with an average gain of 274.8 per game.

The Auburn line boasts 1,485 lbs of football players averaging 212 lbs from end to end. The backfield is of the "pony" variety averaging 174 lbs.

A combination that should give the Seminole pass defense trouble all afternoon is quarterback Lloyd Nix and end Jim "Red" Phillips. Last week against Georgia, the only score came as a result of a Nix to Phillips pass.

In that game Nix, a 168 lb. junior, completed nine out of ten aerial attempts. Phillips, a 6-2, 205 lb. senior, is highly rated as an all-American candidate.

In the backfield with Nix is a 196 pound fullback, Billy Atkins. A senior, Atkins is second in individual scoring in the SEC with 52 tallies. The halfback posts are manned by two speedsters, Tommy Lorino and Bob Hoppe.

Lorino, the left half, weighing 165 is a hard rusher with a background of collecting long runs. Last season he put the nation's ball carriers with a 8.56 per carry average.

His running mate at the other half, Hoppe, is quick and has good driving power. Hoppe, 175 pounder and sophomore, was rated the top defensive back in the SEC last season.

The Plainsmen defense which has been their claim to fame so far this year has only allowed the eight opponents 21 points and no team has scored more than seven in one game.

In the middle of Auburn's forward wall is center Jackie Burkett. Weighing 215 and standing 6-4, Burkett has been one of the men responsible for the Tigers defensive record.

TOP ENDS

Ben Preston (6-3 215 lb.) and Clive Wester hold down the tackle spots.

A three year veteran, Tim Baker will open at right guard and Zeke Smith, a 210 lb. sophomore will be at left guard. The Tribe figures to have trouble moving the likes of Burkett, Wisler, Preston, Baker and Smith to make room for the FSU backfield.

With these almost unbelievable odds confronting him, Coach Tom Nugent thinks his Seminoles chances for upset rest entirely with the desire the team also.

Nugent shuffles his lineup for the game and has moved Jerry Hollon from the left halfback slot to the left end position. Hollon has been making steady progress this year and came through with six tackles against Southern last week.

BISBEE TO START

Bisbee is a senior with plenty of game experience. In the backfield senior quarterback Jerry Henderson may start at that post. Bob Renn who has been starting at that spot will then be available for halfback and quarterback duties.

Stan Dobous will open at right half for the Tribe. Dobous is second in the nation in kickoff returns. He has returned 12 kicks for 303 yards.

Bob Nellums, the teams' leading scorer, will open at fullback and Fred Pickard, a 205 speedster, gets the nod at left half.

Two sophomores, Al Ulmer and Abner Bigsbee will start at guard. Ulmer has more than 50 tackles for the season and has been the individual team leader in tackles for four games this season.

Ron Schoenberger will open at left end for the last time in Campbell Stadium. Schoenberger, a senior, has started every game since his freshman year.

George Boyer will handle the snapback duties and Jerry Graham will be in the right tackle slot.

The Plainsmen have depth that most coaches shudder to think about. "Shug" Jordon, Auburn coach, has his team arranged in three different units—X, Y, and Z teams. According to the Tigers opponents one unit is as good as the other.

Last season Auburn just did best the Tribe 13-7 and they were big favorites at that time also.

HOW TO STUDY

The makers of Marlboro Cigarettes have bought this space so I can bring a message of importance to American undergraduates each week. There is no more important message I can bring you than this: College can be beautiful. Don't louse it up with studying.

That was my mistake. At first, cowed by college, I studied so much that I turned into a dreary, blinking creature, subject to dry mouth and night sweats. This dismal condition prevailed until I learned the real meaning of college. And what is that? I'll tell you what: to prepare you to face the realities of the world. And what are the realities of the world? I'll tell you what: poise. And how do you get poise? I'll tell you how: not by sticking your nose in a book, you may be sure!

Relax! Live! Enjoy! . . . That's how you get poise. Of course you have to study, but be poised about it. Don't be like some drones who spend every single night buried in a book. They are not learning poise; what's more, they are playing hob with their complexions.

The truly poised student knows better than to make the whole semester hideous with studying. He knows that the night before an exam is plenty of time to study.

Yes, I've heard people condemn cramming. But who are these people? They are the electric light and power interests, that's who! They want you to sit up late and study every night so you will use more electricity and enrich their bulging coffers.

Don't be taken in by their insidious propaganda! Cramming is clearly the only sensible way to study. But beware! Even cramming can be overdone. When you cram, be sure you are good and relaxed. Before you start, eat a hearty dinner. Then get a date and go out and eat another hearty dinner. Then go park some place and light up a Marlboro. Enjoy the peaceful pleasure it affords. Don't go home till you're properly relaxed.

Once at home, stay relaxed. Do not, however, fall asleep. This is too relaxed. To insure wakefulness, choose a chair that is not too comfortable. For example, take a chair with nails pointing up through the seat.

Place several packs of Marlboros within easy reach. Good, mild tobacco helps you relax, and that's what Marlboro is—good, mild tobacco. But Marlboro is more than just good, mild tobacco; it is also cigarette paper to keep the good, mild tobacco from spilling all over the place. And a filter. And a flip-top box. And a red tape to lift the cigarettes easily . . . It is, in short, a lot to like.

Now you've got the uncomfortable chair and the Marlboros. Now you need light. Use the lit end of your Marlboro. Do not enrich the light and power interests. Read your textbook in a slow, relaxed manner. Do not underline; it reduces the resale value of the book. Always keep your books in prime resale condition. You never know when you'll need getaway money.

As you read you will no doubt come across many things you don't understand. But don't panic. Relax. Play some Fats Domino. Remove a callus. Go out and catch some night crawlers.

Relax! Live! Enjoy! Remember—any number of people have bachelor's degrees, but precious few have poise!

It doesn't take any cramming to learn that the finest filter cigarette on the market today is Marlboro, whose makers take pleasure in bringing you this column regularly.

Five Starters

14 Seniors To Play In Final Home Game

Fourteen seniors will be playing their last home game Saturday afternoon when Florida State battles second-ranked Auburn.

Five of the seniors have been consistent starters for the Seminoles, who take a 3-5 mark into the game. They are Capt. Ron Schoenburger, end, tackle Bill Musselman, center George Boyer, right halfback Stan Dobous and fullback Bob Nsllums.

One other who has not been a consistent starter is expected to open saturday afternoon.

Hans Bisbee will open at right end.

Other seniors making their final home appearance are quarterbacks Jerry Henderson and Ted Rodrigue, halfbacks Bill Weaver and Gerald Philp, fullbacks Eddie Johnson and Carmen Battaglia, center—tackle Troy Barnes and end Jim Arnold.

Several of these men have played two or more positions during their college career playing where they're needed.

Nellums, who came here last year from Pensacola Junior College, opened the season at end, but was switched to fullback and has started there in the last four games.

Dobous has played both left and right half. Boyer and Barnes have played both center and tackle and Henderson has played both quarterback and left halfback

The Seminoles wind up their season Nov. 30 against the University of Tampa on the road.

Cage Season Opens Dec. 2

The curtain raising on Florida State's basketball season goes up in nine short days as the cagers prepare for their last full week of practice.

"Bud" Kennedy's hoopsters open their slate on December 2 with Tennessee Tech, rated as a top contender for the Ohio Valley Conference title.

"Tennessee Tech will probably start the tallest men we'll have to face all season," said Kennedy. "Four of them are over 6-6 and the small men was the team's leading scorer last year."

Kennedy is satisfied with the progress the squad has made so far, but the results of the first seven games will give a good indication as to the final record of the Seminoles.

The "big" game in December as far as the Tribe is concerned is their battle with Florida at Gainesville. Last year the Gators won 67-65 on a last second desperation shot by Joe Hobbs.

Spartans Face Delta State

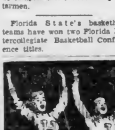
The crippled Tampa Spartans lay their 3-2 record on the line tomorrow when they play host to the Delta State Statesmen.

Tampa has three backfield men on the injury list, all left halfback, and are left with only a freshman, Billy Smith to start at that post.

Little all-American prospect Don Herndon, the regular lefthalf, may be ready to start, but then again he may be held out for the Manitoba clash was FSU next Saturday

Delta State owns a 5-3 mark, including wins over Mississippi College, Troy State, Arkansas A&M, Louisiana State and Loyola College. Last year the Statesmen lost to the Spartans, 21-12.

Volleyball Match Slated Tomorrow



A team of Florida State volleyball players will meet a Jacksonville Navy team tomorrow night at 7:30 in the Demonstration School Gym.

This game is in preparation for the annual St. Petersburg Tournament on December 7, which FSU has won the last two years. The navy team is now on varsity status after 10 years of effort.

Appearing on the FSU squad will be two all-Americans, Fehmi Zeko and Jim McFatter of the Seminoles' national champion team.

The team of FSU students will be comprised of six returning lettermen.

Florida State's basketball teams have won two Florida Intercollegiate Basketball Conference titles.

The group is then scheduled to attend Gymkana.

Registration will be continuina through tomorrow in the University Library, and another general session will be held in the library auditorium at 8:30 a.m. Sophomore Stan DeHart will preside at this meeting.

From 9 to 10.30 a workshop session will be held, during which the following stories are suggested for discussion: how can a Phi Eta Sigma encourage high scholarship, the limitations of Phi Eta Sigma, and services, awards, freshmen orientation, and study clinics.

LUNCHEON REPORTS

Following a faculty advisers' meeting, a luncheon will be held in the Student Center Trophy Room, during which workshop reports will be given and Dean Frederick R. R. Oelesby will speak. The conference will be adjourned at this time.

All delegations are invited to attend the Auburn-Florida State game tomorrow afternoon.

The group attending this conference will represent four Southern states and 23 Southern schools, about a fourth of the major institutions that have membership in the national organization.

It's projects include the distribution of the nationally published Phi Eta Sigma pamphlet, "How To Study," talks during freshman orientation, and the awarding of a trophy to the fraternity house or residence hall that houses the largest percentage of Phi Eta Sigma members.

'Bishop's Candlesticks' Sets First Performance Sunday

The story of a poor bishop who finds that good and evil often profit mutually will unfold before Wesley Foundation audiences Sunday evening when the curtain rises on the first performance of "The Bishop's Candlesticks."

A dramatic version of an incident from Victor Hugo's Miserables, "The Bishop's Candlesticks" will be presented by the Wesley Players, a religious drama honorary.

The play will be presented in the Wesley Foundation at 6:30 and the following Tuesday at 8:15 p.m. No admission will be charged for either performance, open to the public.

18TH CENTURY PARIS

Set in Paris "sometime near the end of the 18th century," the Bishop's Candlesticks" stars Virgil Austin as a povertystricken bishop who learns that true goodness comes from giving. Taking the role of Persome, his sister, is Brenda Jaeger, one of 16 new Wesley Players pledges.

Other cast members include John Walker as a convict; Jackie Colley as Marie, the maid; Ken Bryant as a Paris police inspector; and Jerry Conley as a corporal. Walter Sanz directs the production; Byron Nichols is in charge of the technical side.

"We made the costumes and scenery from practically nothing so all actors interested in acting, regardless of denomination, are welcome to come that the Players are open to everyone and not just Methodists," said Walter Sanz during a recent interview.

Ninth Job Seminar Ends With Interviews

Interviews in the Suwannee Room today will conclude the ninth annual Florida State University Job-Getting Seminar.

Since its beginning Wednesday night with a panel discussion, the conference has continued with personal interviews to be held during which students with representatives from various companies and organizations.

"The panel at the opening session was one of the sharpest I've ever seen," said James C. Hardy, Florida State University placement officer. He said further that the opening program was successful and attendance was good, especially when one considers competition by other campus activities.

RUNS SMOOTHLY

"This year's conference is running smoothly and all the appointments are filled. Students have been streamins in all morning. many with appointments and many without," reported Hardy yesterday.

"One difficulty this year is the limitation of space and the fact that only hours are already filled able, causing the number of in-

Speech Group Critiques 'No Exit'

Though an unquestionable audience success, last week's presentation of Sartre's No Exit nevertheless didn't escape the critical scrutiny of the group that sponsored and produced it.

Over thirty-five members of the Speech Department bordered an aisle of the Augusta Conover Theater Wednesday afternoon to literally examine and analyse this play, the Speech Department's second experimental drama production.

No Exit's assistant director, Walter Saric, led the discussion, known in the theater world as "critique."

It was brought up that the philosophy of the play didn't come through in any of the plazes, something which Dr. James Rose, FSU Director of Theater, said was good in a way because it made people think.

Bob Murray, who played Credeau in No Exit, agreed and added that the play wasn't supposed to be "existentialism in one easy lesson."

Taken in order of appearance, each characterization was discussed.

It was agreed that Phil Johnson, a junior speech major who appeared in every dramatic production last year and said he looked forward to the continued success of both groups.

FLOCK OF FOLKS

In looking to the future Greenfield reported that student government is making plans for an elaborate "Parents' Weekend" to bring students' whole families to the campus at least once a year. Next month the Student Artist Series will present Fred Waring and the Pennsylvanians. Soon as improved student directory with home and campus addresses will be published through the cooperation of the Secretary of Organizations and the advisor in student publications.

In the conclusion of his address to the Senate, Greenfield said, "Many problems still remain; there will always be plenty of work to be done. Part of our job is to seek out and be receptive to these problems."

"There are perennial problems and complex problems that won't disappear with the wave of a magic wand," he said. "However, I suggest to you that we keep two factors in mind. First that our actions should be guided by a unifying philosophy of 'Concerned conversation with' and second is that the university is a perennial institution whose demands go beyond our desires of the moment. It is my belief that this may be our contribution to student and university welfare."

MIKE'S MIKE

By MIKE CUREAU

To interminable Jazz, Rock & Roll, Pop-tunes, Mood music, etc., is next to impossible as far as trying to say they all have the same idea to get across to the public. But, I am here to see if I can get a mutual idea across to the public. They say music is music and people like all kinds. This I can't agree with. For each person there is a certain type that secures their favor and that is the way I would like to conduct this column. If Elvis Presley would like to blow Dave Brubeck sounds that is his perogative, but I wouldn't care to stop, look, or listen to the final product. Mr. Robin's Nest now is in a different position that I in this respect. They can give you any form, manner, or style of music that you like to listen to. It isn't hard to figure that the fad today is towards the stunning effects of Rock & Roll. Elvis makes money and I don't, so maybe I should conform to the reasoning of the public and listen or I should say, write some nice things about the Rock & Roll sport.

It has a point to a certain degree, it makes swigging squirming animals out of us when we normally would be sitting around doins nothing but vegetating. I guess Elvis Presley is a dad to Rock & Roll like Stan Kenton is to modern jazz. You can't knock a guy for trying to make a living. When the girl and you are sitting around looking for some action it isn't Stan Kenton or Shorty Rogers that you get to dance to. Is Elvis and his string quartet. I even'dance to his stuff myself when I am not in one of my normal moods. Now if you like the sounds that the Rock & Rollers produce and don't like to blow a dime or quarter everytime you want to dance or listen, break down and buy the disc at your campus record shop. The Robin's Nest. Even if I am prejudced I can say for sure that the "Nest" has them all and then some. For you boys who like the real sounds I have a couple of suggestions for you. You can either read my column, go to the local campus music shop, listen on WTAL every Sunday night between 8:30 and 12 to a show called the "Nightwatch", or hit the fabulous sessions today, Sat night and Sun. afternoon and night at the Interlude. These sessions are a must for real talent-minded worshippers of modern jazz.

Next week I hope I can get off the hook and do something about the need for more jazz. If there is somethine you people who live in the nightworld would prefer to read in this column, drop in to the Robin's Nest and see one of the people who work there to tell me about it.

Coffey, Parsons Of FSU Among Orange Bowl Elite

For the first time in its history FSU can boast having two coeds appearing in the Orange Bowl Festivities in Miami. Francine Coffey and Paula Parsons were selected as princesses out of a group of twenty-seven semi-finalists last Saturday.

Miss Coffey transferred here from William Jewell College in Liberty, Missouri where she excelled in both academic and social endeavors for three years. In her freshman year she was initiated into Alpha Lambda Delta, freshmen academic honorary for women. She was both Homecoming Queen and Yearbook Queen at the Missouri school.

ALPHA GAM

She is a member of Alpha Gamma Delta sorority which sponsored her for this contest.

Her achievements were not all campus-wide, for she was in the finals of the National Maid of Cotton Contest.

She is a member of Sigma Tau Delta, a creative writing honorary and Phi Sigma Iota, a romance language honorary.

When asked for her reaction to the recent honor she replied that it really "surprised her" because she was an out-of-state girl, but that she was "very pleased."

Well known to most FSU students is brunette Paula Parsons. Paula is a senior who has added much to the beauty and activities of the campus.

She has been a marching chief majorette for four years, and as a member of the circus was "flying high" for two years. Tau Beta Sigma, band honorary, is another of her activities. She was also a member of Cotillion for two years and the citizens of the capital city selected her to be their "Miss Tallahassee."

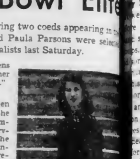
BUSY YEAR

Last year seems to have been one of Paula's most active. She was a member of the Homecoming court, IFC Queen, and served as a junior counselor. She said that being a Junior Counselor was one of the most "rewarding experiences" in her college career.

However her senior year should be an even greater success than that with this recent achievement. To Paula, who is a Miami girl, this promises to be one of the most exciting experiences she has ever had as well as a wonderful honor.

The 27 semi-finalists in the contest were flown to Miami and Saturday five girls were chosen to be the Orange Bowl Queen and princesses. The other three were Rosemary Morris and Marcia Valibus, who is the queen of the University of Miami, and Sue Manzan of Rollins College.

POSE FOR PICTURES



Sunday the girls posed for pictures which will have worldwide newspaper distribution, be on newsreels and television.

The queen and princesses will reign from December 26 to January 1. They will be presented during the half-time extravaganza of the Orange Bowl game on New Years day.

Besides this appearance the queen and her court will be personally introduced at the Surf Club Ball and will also be seen in the Orange Bowl parade and other activities during the week.

Among the things planned for the girls will be attending the football teams that will be playing and being escorted to the many events by outstanding Annapolis cadets.

The regal five will also receive a wardrobe valued at over $500 which includes a ball gown, cocktail dresses, sports clothes and accessories to go with them.

his home because "as Aristotle will quickly inform you" he cannot go back to his parents. He is properly proud of the fact that he has firmly broken away from the narrow-minded tradition-oriented community from whence he came. He has made his home here with his fellow expatriates.

THE APARTMENT he shares with one or two roommates is rather sparse and dimly lit. There are probably no rugs, but there will certainly be butterfly chairs, brick and board bookcases (glass bricks, of course), and some French Impressionist prints decorating the place. He and his roommates lead a happy-go-lucky, free-wheeling, free-drinking, and free-loving life which may impress you as coming straight out of The Sun Also Rises, if you happen to be an outsider.

I must warn you that it would be futile for you to dispute Aristotle's way of life with him for his masterful control of dialectic will quickly overpower you. Better to leave him to his ivoried life and go back quietly to your own mundane existence.

FSU Fashions

"My Fair Lady" Influence Felt; Accent Now On Femininity

MARGARET McLEAN

Something almost like magic has happened to fashion quite recently. For the past few years high fashion has been severe and has tended to disguise rather than accentuate the figure into a shape much like a soda straw.

The fashion world has suddenly developed a tinge of exuberance and apparently has decided to reverse all tradition.

The feminine look has arrived at the portal and chances are the welcome will be a warm one. "Where have you been for so long. You look simply wonderful."

THE NTH DEGREE

The new flair in fashion promises to let all womankind indulge her femininity to the Nth degree. By now her hair is long enough to swirl as whimsically as a "Gibson girl" or a character in "My Fair Lady". Incidentally, "My Fair Lady" can probably take all the bows for this latest regime fashionwise

New York was enchanted with the costumes in the play and decided that wouldn't it be lovely if its gals could look like that. The word was out and the ever attuned ear of fashion heard it. Here's the result:

Clothes are full of girlish fun, and look it. The skirts are full, full, full, and trimmed in laces, ribbons, and big fake jewels. The bodices of these dre-ses are soft, and young, and calculated to flatter a pretty shoulder and a pretty neck.

The dress might be a "hot-house pruit" with flowers as big and bright as a red poppy. This dress may be either silk or chiffon and it promises to float like a cloud. Even velveteen comes in these beautiful prints.

JEWELRY FEATURED

Lots of jewelry is here to stay. The stones are big and fake to add all the extra sparkle you need. These jewels will be found on the shoes, the purse, the hat, the dress, the hair, and the wrist and throat.

Shoes are going to be gorgeous and pastel even in winter. Maybe the suit will match them or maybe they will be just the one spot of color with a white formal.

At any rate, it's open season and the skies the limit. Please enjoy it; it was created for you alone.

Busy 'Do-Nothing'

This is the story of a cock-eyed optimist.

In fact, it looks rather doubtful that anything could cause her to be anything but optimistic about her favorite institute—Honor Court. Who is Miss Sunshine? Chief Justice Barbara Burkhardt, of course.

Unfortunately, optimism doesn't mean being care-free, however.

Ever see a Chief Justice knit? Well Barbara does. More or less. She can't knit into her brow, though other than stitches on the needles.

Barbara, a 21 year old BURKHARDT senior from Fort Lauderdale, and serving her second year on the Court. After being elected her junior year, she was reappointed clerk at mid-term, and elected Chief Justice last spring.

When asked her activities and hobbies, Barbara replied, "I'm a Do-Nothing." We'd like to elaborate on that a little bit, and add do-nothing but Honor Court. It seems to be a 24-hour career with her.

Her Honor is engrossed at present with a new method of explaining the Court system. Following the theory that experience is the best teacher, but wasting as many inexperienced people as possible when it comes to an actual trial, Barbara is filming a mock trial.

Right now Court members are recording a tape that will be used on WFSU-FM and to be heard in new Court members. Later, plans are forming to film a trial to be used on television and during Freshman Orientation. Actual cases from the files are being used, for, as Barbara put it, "The more students and you ought to know about it."

The Chief was finally pinned down as to interest outside of Honor Court. First comes PSU graduate Lennon Knox, to whom she's pinned.

Next, her favorite hobby of collecting champagne corks — strange? It all started when her brother was baptised and her father told the little angel that he'd give her a bottle of champagne for each cork that she collected.

This far, Barbara's looking forward to 14 cases of champagne on her wedding day! Need we add that this hobby isn't actively followed while she's attending FSU?

FSU's Potentiality Great, Says Dean Of Students

By PAT SENN
Flambeau Staff Writer

Tomorrow's challenge faces Florida State University, and helping her prepare to meet the future is Dr. R. R. Oglesby, Dean of Students

Seated in his comfortable, book-lined office Oglesby told of his belief, "With the outstanding quality of our president, the fine staff we have and the limitations on students, which we are beginning to set, the great potentiality of FSU is tremendous".

LIKES SOUTH

This belief and his partitality to the South influenced him to leave his position as Dean of Students at Oklahoma A&M in 1954, to assume his present position here.

His office on the second floor of Westcott is the scene of constant activity as he directs and coordinates all the student auxiliary services.

Having received his PhD in political science at Duke in 1949, Oglesby did further graduate work at Harvard and Heidelberg, Germany.

After several years of political science teaching, he sensed the need not only to teach the functions of government to students, but to show them the importance of living democracy in their every day lives.

OKLAHOMA A&M

His new found interests led him to student government and organizational work. And soon his ability with student affairs was acknowledged by his being asked to the position of Dean of Students at Oklahoma A&M

Oglesby still keeps abreast, however in the field of political science and teaches a course in international law each spring. Most of his other reading is done in the realm of religion

With his wife, Doris Brooks Oglesby, he spends most of his free time with his children: Roslyn 14, David 10, Danny 5, and Sheryl Ann 1

GREEN THUMB

Dean Oglesby is a member of ODK, Pi Kappa Alpha and Rotary

He received his BA in English at Georgetown, his MA in political science at the University of Virginia and his PhD in political science at Duke

Oglesby taught political science at Berea, Duke, Sweet Briar, George Washington University, and Oklahoma A&M. His service time was spent teaching under the Navy V12 program

Junior Chorus Shows Value

BY ANN BARRINEAU
Flambeau Staff Writer

A concert here Tuesday night by a group of young singers has proven the good vocal potential of grade school children.

In the fall of 1951, a group of interested fourth, fifth, and sixth grade students met and formulated a vocal chorus which was to give music and music education majors here at the University an insight into their musical talents.

FALL TRYOUTS

Miss Lois Schnoor, Associate Professor of Music Education, and leader of the Tallahassee Junior Chorus, stated that tryouts are held every fall. Any fourth, fifth, or sixth grade child from any school who has an interest in music is accepted. This year about 88 children participated.

Rehearsal is held twice weekly in room 222 Music Building for an hour.

ORIGINAL WORKS

Last year the chorus began setting aside a few minutes in each program for the presentation of original composition. Entries were from the fifth and sixth grade classes.

This year not only collective but individual compositions were sung. The chorus sang Bees by Cynthia Chapman of the third grade at Kate Sullivan School, Black and Gold by Celeste Scales, a fifth grader at the same school, and a collective composition by Mrs Nela Alderman's second grade class at the University School

There were fifteen entries and the number had to be limited to three. Dr. Bowden and Dr. Wilson of the Florida Composers League were the judges

Plans for the future include a March concert and carolling at Tallahassee Memorial Hospital.

The possibility of making a film about the chorus is being discussed, according to Miss Schnoor.

Former FSU Dean

Neel Defends Secret Sessions For His JC Advisory Council

Dr. Samuel R. Neel is in the news again, but this time not in connection with Florida State University.

The former FSU dean of men, who is now president of the newly formed Manatee County Junior College was the center of attention in an article in Wednesday's Tampa Tribune on secret sessions of the college's Advisory Council

SUNSHINE POLICY

The Tribune, referring to the "government in the sunshine" policy of Governor LeRoy Collins, was openly irritated over the non-admittance policy of the council, which prevented any newsmen from covering some of their meetings.

Neel and School Board Chairman Robert Willis indicated that the secret sessions were called for the five-man council in order to dispense with executive recommendations to the School Board on such matters as the hiring of faculty

Neel was quoted as saying, "I can see the importance of open meetings, but the advisory committee only makes recommendations and these recommendations are brought to the school board for action in meetings which are open to the press"

"I do not feel," he went on, "that the advisory committee should or could have open meetings because many of the matters which we would handle, such as the hiring of faculty would necessitate so many executive sessions that we might be open to the charge of suppressing news."

School Superintendent J. Hartley Blackburn got into the act by saying that the press would be invited to 'certain' meetings"

Neel went on to say that the whole thing is "standard procedure" with other groups, but, the Tribune pointed out, no precedent or example of a meeting was cited by him that at other institutions is not covered by that paper.

Neel, who left FSU on November 1 to assume the presidency of the new community college, said he has "the greatest desire to get on well with news media" and sympathizes with the point of view that seeks to inform the public.

U OF M Professor On Campus Monday

Dr George T. Lewis, chairman of Admission Committee of the School of Medicine at University of Miami, will be on campus next Monday to interview pre-med students who have applied for admission or who expect to apply in the next future.

Any student desiring a conference with Dr. Lewis and who has previously made an appointment should immediately contact Dr. Ralph W. Yerger, pre-medical advisor in 162A Conradi. Phone 2601.

Work To Speak On 'Greek Coins'

Dr Eunice Work, who is a visiting professor of Classics, will be featured speaker at the season's second program of the Tallahassee Society of the Archaeological Institute of America here Monday evening

"Greek Coins" will be the subject of Dr Work's illustrated lecture. It will be held at 8 p.m. in the Library lecture hall. The public is invited.

Miss Work, an authority on Greek coinage, expects next spring to return to Greece to participate in the excavations at the Isthmus of Corinth being conducted by the University of Chicago. She participated in a similar excavation in Greece in 1956

Dr Work taught for many years at Wheaton College and since her retirement has made Tallahassee her home. She has published a number of studies on ancient coinage and is a member of the American Numismatic Society and the Royal Numismatic Society.

'Operation Bootstrap'

Military Students Have 3.5 Average

By GEORGIANA FRY
Flambeau Staff Writer

Military students participating in Florida State University's "Operation Bootstrap" have maintained a average during their temporary assignment on campus according to Dr. Robert Lawton, assistant director

The purposes of the Bootstrap Program is to educate military men and women on the college level to the point where they can come to FSU campus for six months.

Under this program, which is conducted on ten military bases, a military student can earn as many as 94 semester hours. If the student maintains a C average, he may then apply for admission to FSU, providing it can be determined that the student can complete 30 hours work and the requirements for a degree in six months.

Admission to the Bootstrap Program, which is a self supporting operation, does not necessarily entitle one to study on FSU campus however. Recommendation for the six months temporary duty is entirely at the discretion of the university.

Tyndall Air Force Base, Panama City, in 1949, was established as the first base to have a Bootstrap Program. Now the program has extended to include Eglin Air Force Base, Fort Walton Beach; Moody Air Force Base, Valdosta, Georgia; Turner Air Force Base and Marine Corps Supply Center, Albany, Georgia; Ramey Air Force Base and U. S Army Antilles Command, Puerto Rico; Homestead Air Force Base, Homestead; Army, Navy, and Air Force Bases, Panama Canal Zone, and Charleston Air Force Base, Charleston, S. C.

Charleston Air Force Base is the newest installation beginning September, 1957, with an enrollment of 600.

During 1956-57, there were 4999 enrollments in 224 courses at armed forces installations. Courses which were offered include history, mathematics, English, and psychology.

Dean Charles Davis of the College of Arts and Sciences administers the Bootstrap Program. There is a director at each base, some of whom are FSU professors on leave. These directors are responsible to the Dean for administration and instruction.

According to Dean Davis, instruction is provided by staff assigned to the installation... nearby bases of the institution is provided by teachers who commute from the campus.

"The full-time and part-time instructors meet all the requirements for the faculty at FSU and are approved by the Dean and the heads of the departments offering the courses

High Salaries For Journalists Coming, Speaker Tells Club

Journalists can expect to be earning higher salaries before too long, predicted Don Meiklejohn, Capital correspondent for the Perry Newspaper Chain, in a talk before the university Editorial Club November 20

The most common complaint of college students planning to enter the journalism field is the low general pay scale for press jobs. It is the responsibility of the young journalists, Meiklejohn continued, to prove to the public he is worth more money

Interest, enthusiasm, and dedication to his job are the qualities a reporter should possess, he continued. No matter how smart the reporter thinks he is, he should go about getting his story like he is the dumbest man in town, asking questions and assuming nothing.

When breaking into the newspaper business, Meiklejohn stated, the reporter must put all his interest and effort into covering a routine and sometimes arduous beat, forgetting he was ever editor of his high school paper. A press big-shot without experience is, he said, "as worthless as a can of beer without an opener."

The young reporter should seek a job where he will have good supervision. A helpful and interested editor can make or break a reporter's first press experience and can have great influence on his later career.

Collegians, Choral Union

Combined Concert Slated Tonight

The 160 voices of the Collegians and Choral Union will join together in concert tonight at 8:15 in Westcott Auditorium.

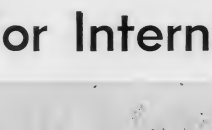
A full concert has been an annual presentation of the Choral Union. This, however, marks the first time that they will combine forces with the Collegians, male chorus. Music appropriate for the Thanksgiving season will be sung.

"HYMN OF PRAISE"

The Choral Union, directed by Dr. Thomas Gunter, Jr., will open the program with the first chorus from "Hymn of Praise," an opus by Felix Mendelssohn. Charles Farley, a graduate student in the School of Music, will accompany the group at the organ.

The group will then sing "Jubilate Deo," by the early church musician Giovanni Gabrieli. "O worship in the Lord, all ye lands" is the theme which runs through the next piece. A brass choir, directed by William Cramer, will provide musical background.

Following this number, the Collegians will present the stirring "Testament of Freedom," written by Randall Thompson, contemporary American composer. This choral composition is based on the famous address delivered by Abraham Lincoln. George Booker directs the Collegians and Lowell Roddenberry is piano accompanist.



CONTEMPORARY PSALM

To climax the program both groups join in "Psalm 50" by the contemporary composer Melissa Christiansen. The words of this piece are divided in three stanzas. The first two are taken from the fiftieth Psalm, and the last is the Doxology. Mary Rose will provide piano accompaniment.

According to Jeri Bradfield, publicity chairman of the Choral Union, both organizations have been practicing separately, for the concert since September. They have practiced together three times during the past week for tonight's performance.

There is no admission fee to the concert and everyone is invited to attend.

Plans Progressing Rapidly Here For International Student House

ARTIST'S CONCEPTION of the new international student house, which is scheduled for occupation sometime during the 1958-59 school year. Construction will begin on the South Macomb site soon.

Wings For Men And Women Included In Proposed Building

By JIM McINTYRE
Flambeau News Editor

Coed housing is about to become a reality on the Florida State University campus with the building of an International House, Miss Joan Guthridge, foreign student advisor, announced this week.

The proposed house, which will be financed by a private corporation, will have space for 32 men and 32 women in its two wings.

Built primarily for the housing of foreign students, the proposed International House will also be available to students from the USA, Miss Guthridge said.

The building, which will be built in the shape of an H, will be under university supervision, and will have eight apartments in each wing.

NO MAN'S LAND

One wing will be exclusively for female students, while the other wing will house the male occupants. There will be a large lounging area separating the two wings.

"The idea of international houses is still relatively new," Miss Guthridge said. "Very few college campuses are fortunate enough to have such an attractive and useful building as the proposed FSU International House."

The proposed edifice is being built by Mrs. Lowell Crowder, who owns the property used at present by several foreign students.

The new building will be erected on the 300 South Macomb Street site of the present foreign student house. Mrs. Crowder, whose drawing of the proposed house appears at left, is Ernest Parfitt, Howard Williams serving as attorney and legal consultant for the group.

NATIONAL GROUP

"There is a national group concerned with this type building." Miss Buthridge said. "It is the International House Association, which had Dr. Stronier as its president during the past year."

Dr. Robert-M. Stronier, newly appointed FSU president, recently relinquished his position as president of the International House Association when he took over the administrative duties here.

"We are most fortunate to have Dr. Stronier here to help us in the crucial planning stages," Miss Guthridge said. "He served as director of the International House at the University of Chicago, and his advice has been extremely helpful."

The purpose of the proposed International House, according to Miss Guthridge's original statement, is: "To provide desirable and comfortable housing for such persons as may be attending Americans, to provide housing for graduate students and to encourage participation by all activities of the international student-citizens and social."

The apartments, eight in each wing, will each house four students. They will include areas for study and sleeping, a bathroom, and a cooking and kitchen area.

START LAST YEAR

Plans for the building were started last year and final arrangements are now in the process of being completed. Tentative completion date is not definite, but the building group hopes to have it ready for occupancy some time during the fall semester of 1958. There is a possibility of the house being ready for the beginning of this semester.

"The cooperation in the project has been wonderful," Miss Guthridge concluded. "The enthusiasm has been strong, and we hope that this dream of ours will be realized in the not too distant future."

Dutch Masters' Paintings Fill Gallery Exhibit

Paintings by "Dutch Little Masters" are presently being shown by the Art Department in the Florida State University Art Gallery, located on the second floor of the Seminole Club.

The exhibit, which was opened to the public on November 15, will close on December 15, according to Miss Mary Jane Jones, curator of the gallery.

SPECIAL SHOW

A special showing of the exhibit was held on Monday night, November 18, with nearly two hundred persons present at this showing, including students, faculty members, and Tallahassee residents.

Paintings in the exhibit were loaned by the Metropolitan Museum of New York, with the exception of four paintings which belong to Professor and Mrs. James V. McDonough of the FSU Art Department.

These paintings are being circulated throughout the country by the American Federation of Arts, an organization which packages pictures to be exhibited in art galleries all over the United States.

There are eighteen paintings in the exhibit by minor Dutch artists of the 16th, 17th, and 18th centuries. All of the paintings are in oil, with most of them representing daily life during the period they were painted. There are several landscapes, still lifes, and portraits portraying Dutch scenes, history, and figures.

ATTENDANCE GOOD

"Attendance at the exhibit has been very good thus far," said Miss Jones. "We hope FSU students will take advantage of the opportunity to see this exhibit," she said.

For Artist Series

TV Group Will Present 'Amahl And Night Visitors'

"Amahl and the Night Visitors," the second program of the Artist Series, will be presented on the Westcott stage next week by the same group which televises it annually over a national hook-up.

Scheduled for December 4 at 8:15 p.m., this program will feature Anna Kasiana, who this year joined the FSU Department of Music as a voice professor. She appeared in the 1953 broadcast of "Amahl."

On the same program will be the Choral Union, under the direction of Mr. Herman Gunter.

Christmas time some sees so many Santa Clauses scattered all over town."

Menotti himself was crippled in childhood, like Amahl, and it was perhaps from this experience he derived his idea for what the New York Times termed "... a work that few could have seen and heard save through blurred eyes and with emotions that were not easy to conceal."

TEXAS BOY

Jordan made his debut in this role before millions of people last Christmas Eve when he sang it on television on the NBC program Robert Montgomery Presents.

He was chosen by the composer of the opera, Menotti, in November of 1956, after Billy McIver, who had sung the role on television for three years previously, turned from a soprano into a baritone.

The Three Wise Men will be played by Andrew McKinley, Leon Lishner, and David Aiken, who also acts as general manager and producer for the company.

Of the cast the New York Herald Tribune said, "The singers sang and acted with a gusto that only faith could have inspired."

Travel Service Provides 25 Rides

Twenty-five students have been accommodated with rides or riders for Thanksgiving as the result of the Flambeau article on the Student Travel Service, according to Mrs. Ruth Johnson, Dean's secretary of the Travel Service.

Students were able to get transportation as far north as New York City and Indianapolis, Indiana, and as far south as Miami.

About twenty-five more students still need rides or riders but "students will have to take the responsibility themselves for calling the Travel Service," Mrs Fountain said.

Students can contact the Travel Service by visiting 208 Longmire, or calling extension 72191.

Library Hours For Holidays

Registrar Charles Walker has announced the Thanksgiving holiday hours as follows:

Wednesday, November 27: 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Thursday, November 28: Closed, Thanksgiving day.

Friday, November 29: 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Saturday, November 30: 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.

Sunday, December 1: Closed.

Tickets Going On Sale For 'Oklahoma'

Tickets for the Light Opera Guild's presentation of Oklahoma will go on sale at Westcott Auditorium December 2. The musical will be performed December 19 and 14 in Westcott.

Oklahoma, by Richard Rodgers and Oscar Hammerstein, enjoyed a long run on Broadway and was subsequently made into a movie.

In the Florida State University presentation, the principal roles of "Laurey" and "Curly" will be played by Frances Ellenwood and Norman Turner.

The humorous pair, "Ado Annie" and "Will Parker" will be portrayed by Beverly Brown and Fred Scott.

Nettie Black and Claire Arment will share the role of "Aunt Eller," each taking it one night.

The infamous "Jud," villain of the piece, is Steve Kledi. Eli Ash plays the part of Ali Hakim, the peddler.

Principal choreography, including the dream ballet sequence, will be under the supervision of Professor Nellie-Bond Dickinson.

Others assisting in production are Clen Pennington, scenic designer; Max Estes, technical director; and Sidney Kennedy, stage manager and carpenter.

ODK Chapter Here Adds 7 Members

Seven seniors were tapped yesterday for membership in Omicron Delta Kappa, national leadership honorary for men.

They are Bob Johnson, Jim McIntyre, John Morris, Bob Murray, Jim Webb, Joe Westhafer, and Pat Wolfe.

The candidates were chosen for active participation in at least three of the following activities: scholarship, athletics, student government, social and religious affairs, publications, and speech, music, drama or other arts.

Five necessary qualifications for membership are character, leadership and service in campus life, scholarship, fellowship, and consecration to democratic ideals.

The national honorary was founded at Washington and Lee University in 1914. The FSU circle was installed in 1950. Bill Cullen is currently serving as president of the FSU chapter.

Rain Halts Derby; Scheduled Today

When Jupiter Pluvius started celebrating last Friday afternoon, his antics played havoc with sorority pledges including Americans, to provide housing for graduate students and to encourage participation by all activities of the international student-citizens and social."

The apartments, eight in each wing, will each house four students. They will include areas for study and sleeping, a bathroom, and a cooking and kitchen area.

Toys For Tots Compaign Going

Students at FSU have been invited to participate in the Toys for Tots campaign conducted in Tallahassee by the Marine Corps Reserve unit located on West Champ.

Last Christmas the Marines collected 5,000 toys for distribution to underprivileged children in Leon County. Students here have been asked to bring back toys from home during the Thanksgiving vacation.

Toys do not need to be new but should be in reasonably good condition, Lt. Lee S. Burns said. The contributions will be picked up if a call is made to 3-1388 or 3-4115.

Delinquency Institute Slated Next Summer

A Delinquency Control Institute, which will be one of the few of its kind in the nation and the only one in the Southeast, will be inaugurated here next summer.

Dr. Vernon B. Fox of the School of Social Welfare, who announced plans for the institute, said it would be held for three consecutive summers, in cooperation with the General Extension Division of FSU.

The idea for the institute were received in response to requests from workers in the field of delinquency and crime in Florida.

Fox said authorities said they hope the institute will aid in laying the framework for a coordinated system of delinquency prevention and control.

The institute will be held for four weeks for three consecutive summers and will offer a total of 12 hours training leading to a certificate. It will cover special techniques for dealing with juveniles, the treatment of the delinquent, delinquency prevention techniques and other problems confronting workers in the field of delinquency and crime.

Dr. Fox said the institute will be needed after those at the University of Southern California, Arizona State College and the University of Minnesota.

30 LIMIT

It is planned to limit the course to about 30 persons. Fox said, Enrollment will be divided on a quota basis between the State Department of Public Welfare Children's Commission, County Judges' Association, Peace Officers' Association, Probation and Parole Association, Sheriff's Association, Correctional Research Association, Northwest Florida Chapter of the National Association of Social Workers, and Council of Juvenile Court Judges.

"The reason that children and teen-agers constitute such a 'headache' to law enforcement officers is not in their numbers, but the fact that they do not fit into the pattern in which the police department is geared to operate.

"Actually, relatively few children between the ages 7 to 17 are arrested. However, figures show the greatest arrests in the early twenties and the curve soling up sharply between fifteen and 20 years of age," Fox stated.

He said there is no adequate satisfactory coverage of the problem by either the university alone or law enforcement alone, and that the best approach apparently is for a university to set up a short course or institute at the request of and with the assistance of organizations made up of persons doing the job and desiring the training.

Annual Penny-A-Minute Night Slated Dec. 6 By Mortarboard

By MARTHA VEVERKA
Flambeau Staff Writer

The annual penny-a-minute night, sponsored by Mortarboard, is scheduled for December 6, according to Jan Kaminis, chairman.

Penny-a-minute night allows an hour extension for Florida State University coeds with a penny charged for each minute after the regular 12:30 time limit.

MUST SIGN OUT

Each girl must sign out for special extension," Miss Kaminis stressed, "or she will be considered late and will have to go through the regular judicial procedures of house council or judiciary."

A Mortar Board member will be stationed at each dormitory to collect the pennies. Sororities may have a representative at each house. According to the chairman the sorority money will be collected by the Mortar Board group.

The purpose of penny-a-minute night is to raise money for the Mortar Board scholarship fund. The fund raising activity has been considered successful in past years.

Miss Katherine Warren, dean of women, approved the extra hour extension recently. Rules will be posted in each dormitory.

ONE OF FEW TIMES

"I hope everyone takes advantage of penny-a-minute night," she said, "not only because it will help the Mortar Board scholarship fund, but also because it is one of the few times that a late hour permission is granted."

Mortar Board members stationed in dormitories will be as follows: Sylvia Krarson, Jennie Andrews; Martha McGinnis Audrey Reynolds; Tocrey Grace Broward; Martha Griffin Bryan; Jan Kaminis, Gilchrist; Barbara McCartney Florida; Charlotte Abney, Florida and Jackie Bowden, Cawthon.

AMAHL PLAYS his flute during a pensive moment from "Amahl and the Night Visitors," the next Student Artist Series presentation, coming here December 4.

WARMUP FOR CONCERT. Director George Booker conducts the Collegians through a practice session in preparation for tonight's combined concert with Choral Union, in Westcott Auditorium.

Abolish 'Horsecollar Rule'

Florida State University's policy or requiring class attendance the day preceding and following a holiday is a rule that could stand revising. In fact, it could stand being abolished.

A FEW WEEKS ago, Flambeau columnist Bucky Canon dubbed this FSU's "horsecollar regulation." As all of us are well aware, professors are strictly required by university policy to call roll on these special days and students who fail to attend are punished for their misdeed by being docked one sixth credit hour for the course.

The regulation obviously assumes no one would attend classes before and after a holiday if the iron hand of the law weren't held down. This notion is one of those intangible things that implies students are not old enough to decide such matters.

THIS ALONE makes the rule objectionable. Students are a heterogeneous group, some over 21 and some not. But students are called upon to conduct themselves as adults at all times whether they are freshmen entering college for the first time or veterans or graduate students. And yet, the rule leaves no room for students to make their own decisions.

Students are competent enough to decide if cutting a class before or after a holiday would be injurious to their scholastic standing.

TRUE, there might be an increase of cuts on these days, but are these classes so much more educational that the student is not capable of deciding for himself the disadvantages of cutting?

Sometimes cutting class on the days before and after a holiday is imperative to students wanting to catch inconveniently scheduled trains and planes. This reduces the already short vacation time to spend at home. Also, money can sometimes be saved by catching rides which might be leaving at the same time a class meets.

WE ARE not advocating cutting classes before and after holidays. We are merely trying to say there should not be any "horsecollar" rules which allow no room for exceptions and which does not have faith in the students to make their own decisions.

Hold Horses To Eat Turkey

Visions of home and Thanksgiving turkey dinners will fill the collective mind of the FSU student body as we hit the highways tomorrow.

THIS presents a problem. Everyone is for safety, so what else is there to say about it except the old cliche, "Drive Safely."

However, we'd like to throw in a few reminders on the subject.

1. YOU'LL be wise to take time out to stop at a service station tomorrow morning. Have your vehicle checked thoroughly—brakes, tires, battery, headlights, and you'll find it runs a lot better on gas.

2. Don't start celebrating until you get there, or you might not.

3.FLORIDA has a multiplicity of speed traps, radar-checked and otherwise. It will save you time and money—maybe a few lives, too—if you'll remember that Florida speeds are 65 day, 55 at night.

4. Realize that you're not fatigued, to put it mildly, following mid-semester exams. So don't try to break all records with a non-stop trip—stop occasionally for coffee or orange juice, to keep you awake.

Smathers' Proposal Popular

Senator George Smathers' plan to introduce in Congress a change in tax laws to enable college students' parents to deduct tuition and expenses from their federal income tax should be popular with those it affects.

Senator Smathers put his reasons for this legislation in a rather political vein. He said the tax exemption would eventually allow the United States to beat the Soviet Union in the education race.

Whether or not we are trying to surpass the Russians in giving more young people college educations, the tax deduction would enable and encourage many more parents to send their children to colleges and universities.

We hope Senator Smathers is successful in his endeavor to make a college education important enough to rate being a deductable income tax item.

Guest Column

Veni, Vidi, Vodka!

With the present concern over world affairs at its peak, your reporter was extremely fortunate to be granted an exclusive interview with one of the world's prominent statesmen.

Premier Varuno J. P. L. Spurkonovichye most graciously consented to telling us about himself and his country.

Q: For the information of our readers, Premier Spurkonovichye, would you tell me a few pertinent facts about your country?

A: Ah, dis-gusted, old chap. My domain, the Soverign Union of Socialist Myopia, is a splendid example of what consolidated effort can do for any country. The area of this enterprising land is presently 320 square miles. We plan to share our democratic spirit with some of the underdeveloped imperialistic countries around us. Our population varies between 2 and 3 million people.

Q: Pardon me, Premier, but you said that the population varies.

A: Oh, quite! Occasionally we have a difference of opinion with the population and I would not do for the government to lose its composure in such a case. Therefore, some of the citizenry must lose its composition.

Q: Liquidation, I suppose?

A: Please let us not be . . . vulgar. Let us merely say that while nothing is certain but death and taxes, we help the prophecy along a bit.

Q: You mentioned taxes. What sort of taxes do you levy?

A: By and large, there are no taxes in this paradise. The spirit of the people is such that they feel compelled to donate to their benefactors. And, may I add, the generosity of the people is ever increasing as they see the many benefits which they are receiving.

Q: But suppose that a citizen does not feel generous, what happens to him?

A: Why, nothing happens. Ours is a pure democratic system. The people who do not feel quite as generous as the others are merely not as happy as the others since they don't reap all the benefits of the country. Of course, some philosophers say that death brings happiness, so perhaps they are happy.

Q: I see. I'm just a little amazed at the remarkable command you have with English. I haven't yet detected any accent.

A: By love, you're a nice fellow. But to answer the question, I was privileged to a capitalistic system and acquired my education under some of your "truth-seeking" professors. When I saw that system was doomed to fail, I decided to form a society that would make everyone happy.

Q: Do you have any problems in your country such as we have here, Premier?

A: No, we have no problems in Myopia. Oh, granted, something distasteful may arise, but the best way to deal with a problem is to dispose of its cause.

Q: And if the cause is human?

A: What does it matter. The fact remains that we have no problems.

Q: Don't you think that this is rather a ruthless viewpoint?

A: You may think it is, due to your pampered manner of thinking at the U. think of it as a way of bringing home the Vodka. I must run now as I must clear up a misunderstanding with some of my diplomatic members. I must make arrangements at my brother's mortuary to settle the matter. Cheerio!

"They Keep Disintegrating"

Calling The Card

Extend Thanksgiving Hospitality

By JIM McINTYRE

The Flambeau tried to do a feature this week, but ran into quite a few stone walls.

The feature article was to be a splendid survey of the Thanksgiving holidays as they were to be spent by foreign students on the FSU campus.

We wanted to find out where they were going to spend the turkey festival days, with whom, and why.

We were, in short, going to run a tremendous story on the American hospitality to those from other lands who are in our midst.

BUT WE failed. The reason? Every foreign student contacted had the same answer. "Oh, I'm spending the holidays here on campus."

The reason for spending the holidays here? "No one has asked me to spend the holidays with them."

ONE STUDENT, a doctoral candidate from Greece, said he was to eat thanksgiving dinner with a professor, and then would do a little traveling in the area. That was all.

Ever spend a holiday season on the FSU campus? If you haven't you've missed a real treat. You are living in a virtual ghost town during the entire vacation, seeing only the other one or two souls who are unfortunate enough to have to stay here.

IT'S LONELY. It's discouraging. It's downright disgusting. No place to go, no-one to talk to, no-one to go to the movies with.

So you go alone. Or you sit and study. When you can take no more of that particular activity, you wander out on the campus. But there's no-one out there.

YOU BEGIN to think about home and homes and people sitting around a table chatting amiably over a turkey. It isn't the food you miss so much, although that's important. It's the companionship of being with people who care a little about one another.

This sounds awfully mushy, to be sure, seeming like the idle frothings of a romanticist or something of the sort. It may be. But it is nevertheless true.

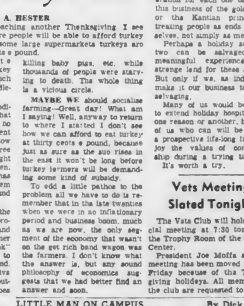
THE FOREIGN students on the FSU campus will, for the most part, experience some of the same loneliness that those who have spent holidays here have always felt. Only a little deeper.

When we spend the holidays here, it is usually because we have a job here, or need to study, or something of the sort. It is seldom because we have no place to go.

SO, ADD to the loneliness of the campus the frustration of being far from home and the homesick-cares feeling of having no place to go and you have a pretty disgusting all-around feeling. It's become just a howl of maggova.

And what can we, as fellow students, do about this rather deplorable situation? We doubt very seriously if any group considering running against Holland in the Democratic primary, but Pepper has made no public announcement on the subject yet. Pepper was unbeatable when Senator George Smathers in 1950.

HOLLAND has been a conscientious executive in the Governor's office since his entry. He has voted with the Democrats on almost all issues, especially civil and states' rights. His opponents accuse him of being a Republican and a Democratic cloak. Pepper, on the other hand, was a New Deal liberal during the years in the Senate—something of a paradox in today's political picture.



If Pepper should decide to run, it ought to be a hectic race.

OF COURSE, the Democrats will not be inactive while all this is going on. Politically, it's sure that Holland will back Congressmen Rep William Cramer of the First District will oppose Holland or whoever is the Democratic nominee.

If Cramer runs he will offer stiff opposition to the Democrats. However, unless a really bitter primary fight ensues in Democratia, Cramer will go an uphill battle for no Republican has ever won a statewide election in Florida.

Could It Be?

Weekend Excitement Nil Here? Absurd!

By NANCY GENE BROWN

Excitement on weekends is as scarce as hens' teeth around Tallyville.

OR SO runs the concensus of opinion of a majority of FSU students.

Could that be a common complaint on college campuses across the nation?

Well, it could be, they'll admit. But the situation is acute here.

THIS INSPIRES us to come up with a round-up of possibilities for weekend entertainment in the booming metropolis of Tallahassee, Florida, USA.

The best idea is to join a fraternity or sorority. Such membership makes you eligible to participate in a wealth of stimulating activities—fun, found-ers' days, open houses, coffees honoring Mother So-and-So, field days, weekends, and pep rallies. In short, there's something going on every minute in a Greek house. If nothing better, an active can have a ball fantasizing plaques in study hall. Or have a trophy raid.

POOL PARTIES are another Greek moment of jubilation and are as fitting on weekends as any other time. This is the occasion when planned events and other assorted couples are pitched into Westcott Fountain for a tete-a-tete with campus-renowned Goldie th Goldfish.

A most fascinating evening can be found at Blue Bird Canter on weekends. Now that the football season is nearing its close, this promises to become an even more popular pastime. A prolific juke-box is just loaded with all the moving tunes of the day — "Daddy Cool" end all his hep cat leagues. The atmosphere is most hollow-wee, with canopies and adorned with candles, and a campus combo sometimes makes cool sounds back-dance floor. You may sing with a wild evening at center.

BETTER YET, the local cinema palaces and passion pits are just a barrel of enjoyment, entertainment, and that. All the top-notch films, and "recent Academy Award winners—make a story if you're lucky—are screens, weekends.

Regular visits from the face of surrounding communities provide something stations provide something en engine. What to do vem? These guys are equipped for a big weekend, so journeyed from nearby title, Bainbridge, and Pensacola. They, too, are the bright lights and metic.

THIS MIGHT be a good You just can't miss the the Interlinds. Webster dis-"interflue" thusly. An evening space or event may ask, "Interlude between what and what?"

But don't get techinical, a place, local on the Quincy highway. It is reprovocative, what else is atmosphere. It has clan-like a patio. It has lights that won't quit. But it's nice

AND BY ALL means don't forget the drive-in movies on North Monroe.

Let's see—what else is vide fun in Tally?

Oh, what about Blue Bird Desperation Point?

ANYWAY you look at it, kicks are few and far between in little Tallahassee.

So you might pick up suggestion submitted by Columnist Don Hacker of the F Gator:

Leave. University of Florida will welcome you with open arms and. With open arms yes.

Senatorial Race May Become Battle Royal

By BUCKY CANON

Next year will be an interesting year politically for Florida voters. It is, of course, an election year. Primaries will be held September and the general election in November.

MOST important office at stake will be the Senate seat held now by Spessard Holland of Sebring. Holland has held the seat since 1946 and is almost certainly going to seek re-election.

Former Senator Claude Pepper of Tallahassee is said to be considering running against Holland in the Democratic primary, but Pepper has made no public announcement on the subject yet. Pepper was unbeatable when Senator George Smathers in 1950.

Florida Mascot 'Albert' Has Found Happy Home

GAINESVILLE — "Albert," the official mascot of the University of Florida has found a permanent home.

Albert is a 10 foot bull alligator. He was presented to the student body at a pep rally before the Vanderbilt game by the Ross Allen Institute of Silver Springs.

His new home is a specially constructed pen beside the entury Tower, a well known Gainesville landmark. It is a combination pool and sunning area fenced in by a brick and chain-link fence. The pool features e fountain of cascading

Down, But Not Out!

As one sportswriter put it, "Except for that last minute safety Florida State played Auburn even today for the last 40 minutes."

And the facts certainly substantiate the above statement. That was a fine tribute when one considers the Auburn Tigers seem to be the nation's number two team. And although many of the quotes from the Auburn players themselves saying that the score was "just about right." I'm willing to bet that most of them were disappointed that they couldn't roll it up some more.

They wasted a big score Saturday in order to move up and face Michigan State as the top football team in collegiate circles.

Well know today if they did.

Florida State threw everything they could to halt "Shug" Jordan's Auburn express even reverting back to an almost forgotten double wing or short punt formation, plus the split-T of course.

Tribe Up In The Air

The usual rushing game was for all purposes shelved in favor of an all out air attack which turned out to rest on the shoulders of sophomore Joe Majors.

And you couldn't ask much more from a guy who has seen very limited action this season.

If there was any doubt concerning Majors' ability as a passer, there's none now. His Saturday performance of 12 completions out of 22 attempts speaks for itself.

His record could have easily been about 17 completions with a little help from his receivers.

And he was throwing with a wet football.

Majors showed that he had guts as he constantly had to get up and there and take it from Auburn's two big ends who were in him constantly. And he got back as a matter of principle.

But that wasn't his fault. Most of the time there was only one player back to block for him, and sometimes that man didn't do his job.

Even Coach Jordan admitted that it was the best passing he has seen all season. That's quite a compliment for the young quarterback in general.

He's not in his brother's shadow any longer.

Fred Pickard, another Tennessean, and Gerald Philip, a guard playing his last home game both came up with superlative efforts.

Pickard Bows His Neck

Pickard, who came from virtually nowhere to starting left halfback when Bobby Renn was moved to quarterback, showed all the press clippings about Auburn's big tough line meant little to him.

Carrying eight times from scrimmage, the slight halfback picked up 27 net yards, and he had to fight for everyone of them.

Philip, a converted end, snared three of Majors' passes, for 39 yards, and was a demon on defense, batting two Auburn passes as he intercepted two losses by the Tigers' quarterbacks.

His best effort, though, had to be erased from the official ledgers as he made an amazing diving catch of a Majors' pass for Auburn four.

However, it was nullified by an illegal procedure penalty against the Tribe.

The officiating was quite a topic of discussion in the press box not only during the game, but continued to be talked about on the evening.

Florida State certainly got the short-end of that deal. Auburn may have brought a horseshoe with them onto the field as the officiators favored the Plainsmen.

And this is far from "sour grapes."

The penalty on Philip's catch came not as the play began, but on about the same time he caught the ball. Practically everyone in the Stadium saw Auburn end Jerry Wilson offside, everyone, that is except the officials.

Auburn is a good football team, especially on defense, but their offense leaves much to be desired.

Here's someone who says they're overrated.

Tramps Finale

The final game of the season for FSU comes up this Saturday night at Tampa, and no matter what the outcome Tom Nugent will have a first losing season at Tallahassee.

A win Saturday is a must, not so much so as to improve the Seminoles' season record, but as a matter of prestige.

There's no disgrace losing to Auburn, Miami and North Carolina State, but a loss to Tampa could put a mark on FSU that would be very hard to remove.

The Spartans will definitely be up for this one, but appear to be somewhat out of their class.

Tribe In Finale Against Tampa

Tigers Win, 29-7; Joe Majors Stars

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Powerful Auburn crushed Florida State's hope of an upset victory Saturday by defeating the Seminoles 29-7 before some 16,000 onlookers.

The Tigers pushed across 20 points the first three times they were in possession of the ball, and then turned to defensive play to hold the Seminoles to only one touchdown for the afternoon.

Saturday's clash increased the prestige of Auburn's number one ranking as the nation's best defensive team. It held the Seminoles to a minus 29 yards rushing, but yielded 106 by way of air.

Florida State's Joe Majors pitched 22 times during the fray and hit a little better than .500 as he completed 12.

34 YD. PASS

One of the 12 went for a touchdown in the fourth quarter as he flipped to end Bill Kimbler on a play that covered 34 yards.

Although the scoreboard didn't show it, the Seminoles suffred a couple of touchdowns that would have counted as legal.

The first stuff came after the Seminole- had drives for three straight first downs to the Auburn 35. On third down, Majors attempted to halfback Jerry Philp who made a spectacular catch on the three.

An illegal procedure penalty killed the play and moments later Auburn took possession for the third time in the game and scored a couple of minutes later.

Then, just before the half ended came the second muff. Majors, who passed brilliantly all afternoon wound up and unleashed a 62 yard pass in the air.

Halfback Bobby Rena, who had gotten behind all Auburn defenders appeared is bail it in as the three, but the ball got away and so did the touchdown.

Auburn's last tally came late in the third period on an interception following a Seminole 38. Five plays later the Tigers had another touchdown.

SAFETY

The last Auburn score came in the closing seconds of the game. Majors faded back to pass deep in his own territory, but was badly rushed and was hauled down by his own end zone for a safety t make the final score read 29-7.

Auburn didn't spare the rod in winning the game. Most of the first unit was in the game at the close of the contest with the Tigers in possession of the ball.

The Seminoles used a variety of formations during the game ranging from the double wing to 'I.'

Saturday's Road Game At 8 P.M.

Florida State's Seminoles hope to rebound after three successive losses when they close out their 1957 gridiron season against Tampa's Spartans at Tampa, Saturday night.

This game will mark the final football contest for 14 FSU seniors. Coach Tom Nugent plans to show a slight preference towards the graduating seniors and play as many of them as he can.

Directing the Tribe's offensive attack will be sophomore quarterback, Joe Majors. Majors was credited with FSU's showing against Auburn when he completed 12 out of 22 passes.

Starting at left half will be either Bobby Renn or Fred Pickard, depending on the game films according to Nugent.

Stan Dobosz will open at right half and Bob Nilliams will start at fullback.

SENIORS AT END

Two seniors, Ham Bubee and Ron Schomburger, will conclude their college football careers when they start at end against the Spartans. Schomburger hasn't missed starting a game since his freshman year of football.

The scouting reports that have reached head coach Nugent state that the Spartans are a better offensive team than in previous meetings with the Seminoles. "They also have a big team which should make them a better defensive team than before, too."

HERNDON AT HALFBACK

Expected to lead Tampa is their little all-Americn candidate Don Herndon Herndon will have as his running mate Billy Shields.

Fred Cason, a 245-pound fullback who cooped the "Back of the Week" award once this year, will supply the power for the Spartans

Tampa has made this game their big one and sports a 5-2 record, losing only to highly touted VMI and Wofford.

Nugent expects the Spartans to be up for this game and with end at the tackle slots the last game the seniors FSU will be ready for a good game.

Kennedy Picks Starting Five For Tennessee Tech Opener

By MIKE PLATTIS

Coach "Bud" Kennedy announced a starting lineup of four juniors and a senior for next Monday's opener with powerful Tennessee Tech.

The top five is heavily weighted with junior college transfers and it is obvious that much of this year's scoring punch lies with them.

Kennedy will go with guards Hugh Durham 5-11 and Jim Lisky 6-1, center Danny Boltz 6-6, and forwards Ben Deckel 6-4 and Larry Strom 6-6.

Durham, a unseolmous all-State choice from Louisville will be out to improve on the 19.1 mark he averaged as the sophomore sparkplug of the Seminole last year.

Running with Durham in th outside will be junior college transfers Deckel of Chipola and Litzky of Jacksonville U.

Deckel paced high ranked Chipola to a 104.6 point game average. to enable the tiny college to become the first college in the nation to average 100 a game.

SCORED 766

The lanky sharpshooter tossed in 766 markers to rank 11th among junior college scorers and gain a berth on a junior All-American team.

Litzky according to Kennedy, is an excellent rebounder and can dunk the ball consistently with his 6-1 frame. He teamed with Deckel on the 1957 all-regional team.

At center Danny Boltz will lend his giant proportions to give the Seminoles a rebounding punch that has been conspicuously missing in the past.

Tennessee Tech will start a team which scored 82.5 points per game, "its tremendous in size, averaging just a shade under 6-6, almost three inches bigger man than we do".

Back on the court after a year of academic probation is Tech's scoring ace of two years ago, 6-6 Bertie Bird.

Little Kenny Sidwell, 5-10, Tech's all-conference guard, was the visitors' top point producer last year with a 14.6 average. He and shooting mate Bird are to be the proverbial thorn in the Seminoles' side Monday night.

Coach John Oldham lists his other starters as forward Don Club 6-6, sophomore center Jim Hazen, 6-9, and rangy asard Larry McDonald, 6-1.

Florida State's second unit has at guard, Tommy Garcia and Joe Williams; center Bob Casteel, and forwards Joe Westhafer and Jim Savage, who is up from last year's frosh team where he averaged 22.0 per outing.

Boltz and third team playmaker Woodward are the only sitting Seminoles to date. Boltz will see quarter for a few days with an infected toe, but is expected to start in the opener.

Woodward suffered a mild shoulder separation in a collision with Casteel during last Wednesday's scrimmage game, and will have a three or four days rest.

Game time for all home games will be 6:15 p.m. at the Men's gym.

Spartans Cop 6th Victory

Florida State's next opponent, the Tampa Spartans, won their sixth game of the season last Saturday as they edged underdog Delta State 27-26.

The win, which was the fourth straight for the Spartans, was not an easy one. Tampa scored its winning points in the last three minutes of the game.

Halfback Bob Gambrell alanted off tackle for seven yards to tie the score and Tampa fullback Fred Cason kicked the extra point that gained the victory.

Delta State, a three touchdown underdog, was losing 20-6 at the half but came back to score 20 points in the third quarter. Led by quarterback Joe Adams, who passed for one touchdown and ran for one, the Statesmen scoring Tampa's line all during the last half.

Gambrell was the big gun for the Spartans as he scored twice and gained 64 yards in 10 plays.

Remove Barriers To College, Speaker Tells JC Conference

Removing the barriers which eliminate talented students from college is the major problem in higher education today, according to a specialist in junior college education.

Dr. James W. Thornton, director of Florida State's graduate training program for junior college teachers and administrators, who was a speaker at the two-day conference of junior colleges here last week, said junior colleges can help remove these barriers.

RANKS ABOVE

"Even in those state universities which accept any high school graduate, the typical entering freshman ranks above at least two-thirds of the general population in the ability to do college work," he said. "Of those who do enter, students of low ability tend to be eliminated early in their college careers."

"Our most pressing problem is not that of preventing individuals who lack the required ability or preparation from going to college. It is rather that of attracting the many able students who do not now receive education beyond the high school," Dr. Thornton added.

ONLY HALF

"Statistics show," he said, "That our college entrants include only half of the ablest persons; our college graduates amount to about one-fourth of the ablest persons. Increases in the proportion of college attendance will be derived largely from attracting more of the able group to enter college and not from providing appropriate diversity of educational offerings so that they will be encouraged to continue in college."

Dr. Thornton listed these basic reasons why qualified students fail to pursue higher education: "lack of motivation, lack of finances, distance from college, ineligibility for matriculation and the nature of the college educational program."

NOTHING OF VALUE

He said that on the last reason, many able students drop out of college because nothing in the college educational program has demonstrated value to their young people.

"Although they are above the average in total abilities, many of these able young people are not highly verbal, they do not think abstractly, are quantitative-ly. Instead, their superiority lies in their command of practical situations, of social skills or clerical, mechanical, musical and artistic abilities.

"We must beware of the temptation, so common to verbal and abstract oriented professors, to think of these abilities as inferior, non-collegiate, or unworthy."

"They demonstrate the ability to learn a surprising variety of knowledges — muscular skills, money-making, the making of friends, and courses and techniques of objects, how to achieve and to wield political power," he concluded.

PES Initiates Seven During Regional Meet

Seven Florida State University men were initiated into the local chapter of Pi Eta Sigma Fraternity, a national freshman honorary for men, Friday night in the Lemaire Clubroom.

The initiation took place as a part of the Southeastern regional convention of Phi Eta Sigma, held on the FSU campus this weekend.

3.5 AVERAGE

The new initiates, all of whom had a 3.5 average or better in their freshman year, were: Gerald E. Arnold, Pranas Dras, Sidney Calkins, Raymond J. Lewis, Joseph Travis, William Westerdick and Kinard Dunlap White.

The convention, held under the direction of Dr. James Carr, FSU faculty advisor, was presided over by sophomores Don Clark and Stand DeBolt. Melvin Peters, the president of the local chapter, was unable to attend, having returned to campus after the Thanksgiving holidays.

FSU Dean of Students R. R. Ogilsby gave the main speech at Saturday's general meeting on the topic: "The Five Spectacles of Responsibility."

GOLDEN RULE

Oglesby encouraged Phi Eta Sigma members to "practice the golden rule politically, live with an international view of the world, achieve a balance between material and spiritual values, develop better distribution of the world's wealth and approach the eternal problems of peace, security and tolerance with fresh views and vigorous solutions."

In the business session of the convention, it was decided to hold the 1959 regional meeting at Alabama Polytechnic Institute at Auburn, Ala. This will be the 1958 regional meeting, as the national convention of the group will be held at the University of Minnesota next year.

TIME-OUTS

Banquets, workshops and speeches occupied most of the weekend for the conventioners, but time-out was taken from the busy schedule to take in the Gymkana show Friday night and the Auburn-FSU football game Saturday afternoon.

Chapters of the fraternity represented were from Auburn, University of Alabama, University of Florida, University of Georgia, Georgia Tech, Clemson and Duke.

Occupational Library Added In Westcott

By NANCY FRASER

"Doctor, Lawyer, Indian Chief . . . . The old jingle strikes close to home for the FSU student undecided about "which" occupation to pursue upon graduation.

An answer to his dilemma, however, will be there finally up in Westcott on a new addition to the Vocational Guidance Office is the occupational reading room, located next door and open from 8-5 daily.

"The world of work is so broad, that we want the students to explore it fully," said Miss Viola Mock, vocational counselor, during a recent interview. With that purpose in mind, they have created the occupational library and filled it with pamphlets on job opportunities in almost every imaginable field.

"A student may know his abilities but want to explore the fields open to him," continued Miss Mock. "That's what our library is for."

The reading room contains no hard covered books, but a large collection of pamphlets, so that information can be kept up to date and explained.

In addition to pamphlets, the library has also made available a Dictionary of Occupational Titles, defining 22,000 occupations and listing them under 4,000 different titles. The curious student may first leaf through this dictionary and then refer, so, the library's files for further information.

What sort of information is available? According to Miss Mock, data on the nature of the work, requirements, preparation, economic returns, outlook, and distribution throughout the country may be found.

"Many students come to college with a very limited idea of the opportunities open to them upon graduation," said Miss Mock. "A few minutes spent in the occupational reading room will show them the many different—and often unique—jobs available in their fields," she concluded.

Schwartz Tabs 'Sputnik' Strife

"The Implications of Sputnik" was discussed by Dr. Clarence Schwarz of the Florida State University physics department at a meeting of the Episcopal Faculty Fellowship last night.

Dr. Schwarz who has spoken to several local groups on the technical and education implications of Russia's satellite, stressed Sputnik's aspect at Monday's discussion, participated in by Fellowship members.

UP WITH JONESES

"We need to carefully reevaluate our highly materialistic outlook," said Schwarz, "the outlook which says that if the Joneses have a new car, we need two new cars. This outlook, Schwarz said, has much to do with Russia's scientific superiority over America, as demonstrated by her two satellites.

According to Schwarz, our placing of high value on material things and correspondingly lower value on education will naturally hinder scientific progress.

"When we give our teachers a high community standing is whether they have two cars or not, we will be making educational progress," he continued, adding that it is this shifting of values that will help us to improve our educational system.

The need for a united social structure in America was also brought out by Dr. Schwarz during the discussion. "In wartime we say, 'united we stand, divided we fall,' but there is an even greater need for unity during this precarious peacetime," he said.

As long as America is composed of fractionated groups who fight during peacetime, progress will be hindered, according to Schwarz. "You know, we can lose a war without even going to battle," he added.

Home Ec Majors Practice At Home Management House

Most college students find themselves, at one time or another, missing the cozy atmosphere, home-cooked meals, and relative privacy that are all part of true home life.

Home economics students are given a chance to create a little bit of home on campus for one month during their junior year.

FRESH AIR

This is a key to the house and is on her honor to come in at the specified time.

FRESH AIR

The group now occupying the house is composed of Laura Murphy, Pat Armanis, Cherry Corbin, Sara Jane Griffin, Ardyce Napier, and Liz Gardner, all home economics majors. Barbara and June Hamilton, an interior design student.

Mrs. Aanes Brown, faculty member in the School of Home Economics, acts as instructor for the group.

The girls recently entertained guests at a buffet dinner. During the month, they will invite guests to two other meals.

This activity is in the form of a course in the Department of Home and Family Life, headed by Dr. Ruth Connor.

ENGLISH STYLE

Their residence for this four-week undertaking is an English-style building on Copeland St., known as the Home Management House.

The house has accommodations for seven girls and a resident supervisor. The girls are completely in charge of running the house and house-hold tasks are divided among them. Each girl acts as manager, assistant manager, housekeeper, waitress, assistant waitress, or laundress, changing duties every four days.

These girls are under the same regulations as other coeds and enjoy the same freedom for social and class activities. Each

Phi Delts Hold 'Limbo' Party

The Phi Delta had something different to combo parties last night when they held a "Limbo" party.

"Limbo," a game new to the Campus, was introduced to the background of a Florida A&M combo with bongo drums.

In the form of a contest, "Limbo" may be played by any number of people—the idea being to go underneath a stick held at progressively lower distances from the floor.

This has to be accomplished in rhythm to the music, without touching the four with the hands. Calypso music, which sets progressively faster, provides a fascinating tempo to the excitement. The idea, imported from Nassau, was accepted with enthusiasm by the Phi Delta and their guests.

Packed House Requests Five Curtain Calls Of 'Amahl' Cast

BY NANCY HANNAFORD
Flambeau Staff Writer

"Gee, is it real? Amahl talks" day night's performance of Amahl and the Night Visitors.

Of course the beautiful cost was real, and probably quite warm, but it couldn't compare in warmth and beauty with the performance of the evening.

FIVE CURTAIN CALLS

A packed house was held captivated by Gian-Carlo Menotti's Amahl. And it wasn't until the cast had taken five curtain calls that the appreciating audience allowed the curtain to fall.

It much have after the fourth call, but someone started tossing down the lights instead of the curtain "rod." Not That! sounded a frantic stage manager.

At the fourth curtain call, Miss Kaskas was presented with a large bouquet of roses, from David Aiken, in behalf of the group she was a professional member of the years ago.

David Aiken was the tall, white haired Wise Man in Amahl, the dark-complexioned baritone soloist in The Messiah, and the almost bald manager of the television group in real life.

The small compact cast of the NBC musical broadcast of Amahl arrived on campus Tuesday morning in its tour car, pulling a small trailer in its wake.

SCENE WAS GAY

With organized efficiency that greatly impressed Dr. Baker of the university students who appeared in the production, one of the Wise Men unloaded and began to set up scenery, another began to give the costumes another press (the difficult job of coordinating the four touring singers' performances with those of Miss Kaskas, who played the mother, Norman Turner, the page, and the University Singers' guest, Nan Merriman, the tiny Dance Group.

The FSU sophomore in the chorus of shepherds said of the professional group, "They were very, very terrific. They were nice to us."

Another commented, "Did they ever sing! Organized! I guess."

By eight Wednesday evening the entire production was organized. Backstage there was none of the marvelling sound one associates with the theater.

The stage was almost deserted.

Junior Certificate Recitals Monday

The first Junior Certificate recitals of this season will be held in Opperman Music Hall, Monday, Dec. 9 at 8:15 p.m. Raymond Lobau, pianist, and Dixon Rodgers, clarinetist, accompanied by Lowell Roddenberry, will be featured in this first recital.

Lobau, a student of Dr. Ernest Von Dohnanyi, will open his program with a Beethoven Sonata, Op. 31, No. 3. The movements of this sonata are marked Allegro, Scherzo, Menuetto, and Presto Con Fuoco. His second group will consist of Opus 119 of Johannes Brahms. Opus 119 includes three intermezzi and a rhapsody in B Minor.

Dixon Reddit, from the studio of Harry Schmidt, will play a rhapsody in E flat major by Carl Maria Von Weber.

"Premiere Rhapsodie" of Claude Debussy will open his program. This will be followed by "Three Songs for the Clarinet" (1957) by David Ward-Steinman.

A note of special interest is that these three pieces were written for Reddit. Ward-Steinman, an FSU graduate, is now doing advanced work in composition at the University of Illinois. The program will close with the Rhapsodie "Sonate", (1959) for clarinet and piano.

A Penny Gets You An Extra Minute Girls!

Penny-a-minute night, sponsored by Mortar Board, is scheduled for tonight with an hour's extension allowed for those who sign out for it.

Jan Kaminia, chairman of the annual project, stressed that each girl wishing to participate in the Lime extension must sign out in her dormitory. She will be considered late and must go through the regular social procedures if ace fails to do so.

SCHOLARSHIP FUND

A penny will be charged for each minute after the regular limit. The money raised will be included in the Mortar Board scholarship fund.

The Student Center will remain open for the extra extension according to Mrs. D. W. Bateman, Student Center social counselor.

"For the past two years the Student Center sun room has been packed during Penny Night," Mrs. Bateman said. Music will be free during the extension hour.

She said that attendance last year was greater than the year before and added, "I think we have even more this year."

A Mortar Board member will be at each dormitory to collect for the time extension. Sororities will have a representative in each house.

MAY REPEAT

"If enough people take advantage of penny-a-minute night," Miss Kaminia said, "Mortar Board is planning to sponsor it again next semester. This is one good money-making project," she added, "and we certainly hope that everyone will take advantage of it."

Rules have been posted in each dormitory and anyone whose name appeared has been given by Miss Katherine Warren, dean of women. Mortar Board members stationed in dormitories will be as follows: Sylvia Kearson, Jessie Murphree; Martha McGinnis Andrews, Reynolds; Dorothy Bracken, Broward; Merle Cramer, Bryan; Jan Kaminia, Gilchrist; Barbara McCartney, Landis; Charlotte Abney, Florida and Jackie Bender, Cawthon.

Senators Ask No Car Ban For Sophs Next Semester

BY KAY WRIGHT
Flambeau Staff Writer

Senate Wednesday unanimously passed a motion that they go on record as favoring the removal of the sophomore car ban again next semester.

Morrison's Food Service, the sponsor of Christmas spirit on the FSU campus were other matters of business discussed by the senators.

The Sophomore car ban, a ruling passed by the Board of Control last May, was lifted first semester by President Robert M Strozier after talks with student government representatives this May.

Reasoning: This was to be a temporary arrangement in effect first semester only.

CLARK MOVES

Junior Senator Ronnie Clark introduced a resolution requesting the majority of student opinion" make public its desire to see the present policy continue next semester.

"There seems to be no street traffic problem in summer now, and there is no obvious reason why the sophomores should not be allowed to have their cars again next semester," said Senator Clark. "The university enrollment will decrease, not increase next semester," he pointed out.

A report on the investigation of Morrison's food service was given by Sophomore Senator Ada Leigh Wall, committee chairman. Senator Wall reported that the committee had met with Dr. R. R. Oelesby, dean of students, Gerald Gaines, assistant business manager, and Milton Dennis, manager of Morrison's. Suggestions and criticisms were made and discussed at this meeting.

WILL CONTINUE

"The investigation of Morrison's will continue throughout the present school year," said Senator Wall. "At present we are comparing the prices, and the quantity and quality of food served by Morrison's with the food services of other universities and restaurants in Tallahassee. We will report on our findings after further investigations have been made," she said.

WARING SINGERS BRING 'HI-FI-HOLIDAY' HERE

"Hi-Fi-Holiday" brings Fred Waring and the Pennsylvanians here to Florida State University Wednesday at 8:15 p.m. in the Men's Gymnasium.

Tickets are now on sale for the Westcott ticket office at $1.25 for students and $2 for non-students.

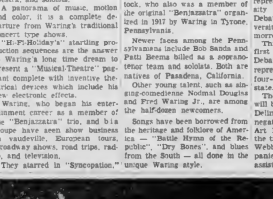
ALL NEW

An all new Fred Waring show, "Hi-Fi-Holiday," features the Pennsylvanians—the glee club, orchestra, and soloists.

A panorama of music, modern and color, it is a complete departure from Waring's traditional concert type shows.

"Hi-Fi-Holiday's" starting production sequences are the answer to Waring's long time request to present a "Musical-Theatre" pageant complete with inventive theatrical devices which include his new electronic effects.

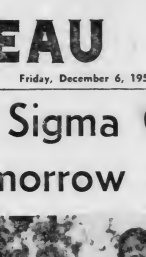
Waring, who began his entertainment career as a member of the "Benjamaxta" trio, and his troupe have seen show business in vaudeville, European tours, Broadway shows, road trips, radio, and television.



They started in "Syncopation," the first big musical of the "talkie" era in motion pictures. Recent Waring shows and specials have reached into the multi-million dollar class.

"Hi-Fi-Holiday" features frog-voiced drummer, Poley McClintock, who has billed as a soprano tittor team and soloists. Both are natives of Pasadena, California.

Other vocal talent, such as sliding-comedienne Nodmal Douglas and Fred Waring Jr., are among the half-dozen newcomers.



Songs have been borrowed from the heritage and folklore of America — "Battle Hymn of the Republic", "Dry Bones", and blues from the South — all done in the unique Waring style.

At Coffee Hour
New Language Idea Set For Discussion

BY VIRGINIA DELAVAN
Flambeau Staff Writer

A new concept which is revolutionizing the teaching of language will be discussed by Dr. Paul Stoakes of the Florida State University English Department, at the English Coffee Hour this afternoon at 4.

Students and faculty are invited to this presentation, entitled "What is Language," to be held at the Westminster House.

GOUP OF WORDS

According to Dr. Stoakes, old methods of instruction place emphasis on learning through written language. To a grammarian, a sentence is "a group of words with a subject and predicate expressing an idea."

However, the scientific linguist regards language as "a group of sounds, preceded by silence and ending in silence." This idea, pioneered in the United States by Leonard Bloomfield, is now in terms of sounds rather than written words.

The English language, for example, can be divided into 40 different isolated sounds, or phonemes, arranged in melodies. A melody represents meaning through voice inflection, tone and pitch. This, of course, cannot be conveyed in written language.

This system makes understanding and learning language easier by relating it to everyday spoken use.

In his talk, Dr. Stoakes will be concerned with the new teaching of English to foreigners, a field in which he has worked widely during recent years.

He served as director of the English teaching program at the Centro Cultural Norteamericano in Bogota, Columbia from 1942-44. During the years from 1954-56 he was professor of English at Universidad de Oriente in Santiago, Cuba.

He has also done work in this area in other Latin American countries and in the United States. Ingles Practico, a text written by Dr. Stoakes and widely used in South America, is currently in its 15th edition.

The affirmative debate team will be composed of Charles Van Dellinder and Pat Batal. On the negative will be Judie Webb and Art Dezart. The alternates for the trip are Ben Bryan and John Webb. The team will be accompanied by Tom King, graduate assistant in forensics.

PBK Notes Founder's Day

One hundred and eighty years ago, a group of young men students sat in the Apollo Room of the Raleigh Tavern at Williamsburg, Va., and formed the Phi Beta Kappa Society.

These students from William and Mary College dedicated the society to high purpose with its motto: eloquence, and since that time, Phi Beta Kappa has become the best known and most honored of the Greek letter honoraries, besides being the oldest.

CHAPTERS

Little did the young men realize the significance into which their group would grow. In the years following 1776, 25 chapters were founded, and in 1883 the national organization formed the United Chapters of Phi Beta Kappa.

Today Phi Beta Kappa is open to both men and women to encourage scholarship in the liberal arts, teaching and inquiry regardless of profession.

Annually on December 5, Founders Day is celebrated throughout the country. This year the program at Florida State will be held tonight in the Westminster House at 8:15.

Highlighting the program will be a speech by Dr. Marjorie H. Campbell, associate professor of modern languages. Dr. Campbell has traveled extensively in South America, and received her PhD at the University of Chile.

Dr. Campbell will speak on "The Red National Library of Peru." Dr. Campbell attended the University of San Marcos in Lima, Peru.

There will be remarks by Dr. Russell Reaver, associate professor of English.

Coffee and cookies will be served as refreshments.

Zetas Defend Title; Frolics Start At 2

By NANCY GENE BROWN

A parade beginning in Campbell Stadium tomorrow at 12:30 p.m. will cruise through the city and campus with the sixth annual Sigma Chi Derby its destination.

Two hundred decorated sorority cars are expected to be in the parade, which will break up at 2 p.m. at the hockey field, where the heralded Derby event will take place.

The Derby Dance, tonight from 9 to 12:30 at the Women's Club, will be a prelude to the weekend's festivities.

The Derby, a comedy field day with all sororities competing, is a universal event among all Sigma Chi chapters. The frolic is judged on a 4-3-2-1 point basis. The championship prize is now enjoyed by Zeta Tau Alpha last year.

WHIP-CRACKER

"Ringmaster," or general chairman for the event, is Sam Stoutead. In charge of the dance is Bob Bruce, publicity; Bob Moren; and events, Larry Beasley.

The events, cleverly devised to create melee on the hockey field, will run like this:

1. "The Sack Race," starting with the 16 contestants, each representing her sorority, scrambling in a bag-of-flour in search of a submerged key bearing the sorority's name. The first to return to the finish line with the correct key is the winner.

2. "HEAD TO HEAD"

2. "The Hangover Special" operates on the theory that rear ends are good medicine following a bad night. Blind-folded contestants, armed with rolled newspapers, will have eggs tied to their heads. The object is to break an egg in an attempt to break each others' eggs.

3. "The Polar Race" will be a freezing event. Running a 25-yard run followed by five headon-the-pole spins around a pole, then back to the starting position, if contestants are able.

4. "The Hippo Championship," a hip-swinging special, is difficult to describe. It will consist of two rivals followed by a championship, in which the object is to push one off a log by swinging the hips, without upsetting a restricting lane of hotties. The best hip-swinger wins.

CLEAN SWEEP

5. "The Sweepstakes" involves a broom-and-mop race to the contestant's backs.

6. The grand finale, traditionally a Derby Day first, is a secret until the end of the derby.

Reigning over the Derby will be the Derby Queen, who will be chosen tonight at the dance. The queen candidate from the honor will be judged in cocktail dresses on the basis of beauty.

The winner and her court will be crowned by last year's queen, Ruth Bowden, a member of Zeta Tau Alpha. All the candidates will be introduced at the Derby Dance tonight at 9.

The candidates are: Zeta Tau Alpha, Frances Spell; Kappa Alpha Theta, Ann Hollingsworth; Delta Delta Delta, Sandra Calhoun; Delta Gamma, Jo Ann McCormick; Delta Zeta, Sandra Lee Harris; Phi Mu, Nona Carolyn Cronin; Chi Omega, Cynthia Tebenor, Alpha Omicron Pi, Rita Rose.

Casching the sorority teams in the Derby will be members of Sigma Chi, as follows: ZTA, Bob Green and Bob Hamilton; KAT, Bob Meier and Dave Byars; DDD, Bob Bryson and Britt Landrum; DZ, Bart Knight and Harry Reynolds; DZ, Dean Denles and Jack Brown; PM, Stan Alford and Billy Bennett; PBP, Phil Knight and Toby Terrell; AOP, Gerry Gordon and Don La Cava.

SK, Lard Anderson and Tom Hale; KD, Alec Woodrich and Tom Pendray; ADP, Bill Smith and John Calhoun; AGD, Bill Phillips and Tom Willis; AXO, Maury McKinney and Jack Terwilliver; XO, Chris Vogt and Rod Lenox; GPB, Art Merrell and Paul Stoffregen; and AZD, Cecil Cheek and Bob Poryes.

The Florida Flambeau

The House That Grew

A good landlady who baked them cookies, listened to their problems and helped them adjust to life in a new and strange country l e d Florida State's foreign students to gather at 380 Macomb Street.

FOUR YEARS ago the foreign students started arriving at the house—the first from England and the second from India —and they liked it so well the entire building soon housed nothing but foreign students.

Mr. and Mrs. Lowell Crowder enjoyed having their apartment house internationalized as much as the foreign students liked living there and experiencing the fellowship of students also far from home. Soon there were nine languages being spoken in the one small building.

BUT THE house, growing old in years, quickly became crowded and its owners could not accomodate all those seeking housing there. Sometimes students who had no where to stay would ask if they could bring a cot in and sleep in the hall or where ever they could find to put it.

From this situation grew the idea of an international house large enough to hold all those students wishing to live together. The plans for the International House soon hit the architect's drawing board and at present the construction is expected to be completed for occupancy next fall.

WHEN FINISHED, it will be an ideal student living experiment—one that few universities can boast. It will have space for 32 men and 32 women in its two wings. Housing there will be available to graduate students only, although it will not be restricted to foreign students. It will become the headquarters for all cultural and social activities of the international students, and will give foreign students the opportunity to live with students of his country.

The project has brought much enthusiasm from students and faculty members and will, when finished, bring FSU a note of distinction. It is truly something of which FSU can be proud.

THAT IS why we are bringing Flambeau readers this story. It is the interest and cooperation of the Crowders which has made the International House a reality. They have willingly agreed to finance the project and once built, allow the university to supervise it. It is an expensive project to undertake. Yet students will be able to live there at reasonable rates befitting their pocketbooks.

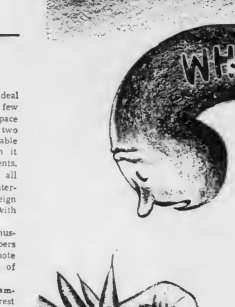
It was through the generosity and interest extended by "a good landlady who understands our problems" that the foreign students' dream of an International House will soon come true.

Florida Eggheads Needed

If the plans of Florida Democrats to send their local leaders to special training institutes throughout the state prove successful in precinct results, one can expect a revitalization of the role of the intellectual (or egghead) in current political affairs.

THE DEMOCRATIC Party in Florida, though still strongly in control of the state's political network, has been suffering losses in several districts, most noticeably the Republican-leaden First District which includes Pinellas, Hillsborough, Pasco and Hernando counties.

They have sustained other losses in the lower east coast area, most specifically in and around Broward County. Sarasota has weakened, and the landslide which vote for Eisenhower in 1956 is a further cause for concern among Demo bigwigs.



THE BRASS of the party, concerned over the losses to Republicans in critical areas, decided to turn for the solution of the problem to a professional political scientist, Dr. Morris Collins, Jr., professor of political science at the University of Georgia. Political scientists are generally held in low esteem by professional politicians, so this does come as somewhat of a surprise.

The truth is, however, that sober thought and clear analysis of the problem facing Florida Democrats is the only solution to their supposed problem. There is little sober thought among state political figures, and even less clear analysis.

THE NEW-FOUND respect for the political intellectual is fine and dandy. It could bring scholarship back into favor with many of the people who distrust it.

The sobering part of the entire movement, however, is not that they have called on a political scientist, but that they were unable to use any of the Democratically-inclined political science professors in the State of Florida. Florida law prohibits state employees from participating in partisan politics. There are few better intellects in the field than are found in Florida's state universities.

The Big Question

'Horsecollar' Illogical

TO THE EDITOR:

We have been studying logical fallacies in our English 102 class and wish to point out that in the editorial "Abolish Horsecollar Rule," for November 26, 1957, we found such fallacies as time-calling, non sequitur, generalization, misuse of words, ad hominem, and false analogy. In addition, there were two completely false statements.

In the first place, the editorial stated, "the rule leaves no room for students to make their own decisions." There is a very definite decision to be: 1 6th credit or not to lose 1/6th credit.

Furthermore, the editorial stated, "the rule leaves no room for exceptions." We know students who have received permission to be absent from classes the day before and after a holiday for such reasons as family emergencies, job interviews, and special religious observances.

If there is a "real," logical reason that this rule should be revised or abolished, we would like to know it.

Sincerely yours,
EH 107-3

(Editor's note—The issue is whether or not University thinks students adult enough to attend class on these days without having them to do so by use of the "horsecollar" rule. The question is whether or not the rule is necessary, and there can be exceptions or that the students can be a "horsecollar" is less credit or not to lose credit.)

The Iconoclast

First Team Scholars Needed In Education

BY L. A. HESTER

Three cheers for Sputnik. Hah! Rah! Rah! We owe the Soviet Union a debt of gratitude for the launching of Sputnik. The Soviet Union's startling scientific achievements and innovations in the ballistic missiles field (the U.S. is going a much needed appraisal of our Education) system that there is little time made for the above assertion. Generally speaking, our educational system is presently accommodating the lower intelligence.

I do not mean to imply that education should not be made available to everyone. I do think that it is time that we begin to recognize and abusing the term democracy. When we rationalize the failure of our educational system by labeling our graduates as "products" of democracy.

THE FACT is that democracy is not a measure of physical strength or any other same criteria that will carry many people toward the top of our first string football team. We should accordingly, not measure our academic qualifications.

There should be a number of scholars just as there is football and they should accordingly supplied with the equipment and be required to play with the best material they can find.

IN OTHER words we should have different educational programs for different groups. I firmly believe that everyone has a place and that some form of education can help him to fulfill that place but to alter a blanket program such as our present one such as our present program does is to assure failure because aspiring to headaches they will cause nothing.

CLUE ON the heels of Sputnik's beep, there was a very sharp criticism of U.S. education. One of the statements critics was Rear Admiral H. G. Rickover who says we have allowed the American high school, He says, "It comes out that we have many more children in high school and college than Europeans have in their schools, because the European secondary school graduate has had far more than most of our college graduates."

I FOR one hope that Rear Admiral Rickover is exaggerating the inadequacy of U. S. education, but even if he is it still appears obvious that there is certainly much room for adjustment and improvement in Mendes, presumably only a few days before the birth of the Christ, out concerns itself with a very human story that occurs as a result of the messianic birth. It is tender and poignant as only humans can be, and funny and serious as only humans can be.

ONE CANNOT see or hear the performance without identifying with the people involved. The little crippled boy is your son, or brother, or the boy down the street, and the mother is her is your mother or any mother would be. Even the normally aloof figures of the three kings are shown to be warmly human, under their impressively wealthy and noble exteriors.

THIS, coupled with a tender, moving story, makes the opera an unforgettable experience. Menotti's score is beautifully constructed. He has a gift of melody and feeling for line that is as much genius as Handel's boldness and power.

The afternoon performance, while professional in quality, was marred by a few slips in all parts and a rather noisy audience composed mostly of grade-school children. But in the evening performance, there were no noticeable goofs. The orchestra outdid itself.

THE CHORUS, which for the Amahl, was made up from the University Singers, had nightperfect pitch production on the long, difficult a capella sections, and had perfectly clear diction even on the rapid lyrics sung as the gifts were presented to the kings.

FSU's own Anna Kaskas did a splendid job as Amahl's mother. Her voice and acting ability were more than equal to the demanding role. Incidentally, a great deal of the with the other soloists, to perform at Miami in a program similar to ours here. Andrew McKinley, David Olsen, and Leon Lishner, as the kings, Kasper, Melchoir, and Balthazar, demonstrated why they are in the production is such a success.

WE HAVE seen Amahl presented before by students, and even though the performances were good, the little extra finesse, the added gesture or perfectly timed phrase make the past performances pale in comparison.

Kirk Jordan, is in his second year as Amahl, and will probably get in another year before he becomes a man. He has a fantastic ear. He pulled out pitches out of the air with the ease of a Dimaggio in center field, and sang with a pure sound, clean diction . . . You name it, the lad could do it!

NORMAN TURNER, as Pare, and choreographer Katherine Hartley with members of the Theatre Dance Group added, in small but important ways, to the overall effect.

The attention to detail was one of the major factors that brought Menotti's work so wonderfully to life FSU is fortunate to have performers in all phases of the performance that are advanced enough to concern themselves with such details.

The Critic's Corner

'Amahl' Is Tender, Human Story

By DALE JENSEN

A REMARKABLY successful experiment took place in Westcott auditorium Wednesday night. The occasion was the annual presentation of the Christmas portion of Handel's Messiah, and the experiment consisted of the addition, through the Artist Series Committee of Chas-Da'Ce Menotti's short opera, Amahl and the Night Visitors, with the soloist from the original NBC TV cast. The result was an emotionally powerful program that, we are certain, touched something inside of every member of the audience.

THE MESSIAH was first on the program Herman Gunter's Choral Union and the University Symphony, conducted by Robert Sedore were the main performing groups, with the visiting Amahl cast and FSU music school faculty members Anna Kaskas and Edith Kaup taking the solo recitatives and arias.

The Messiah, we feel, is one of the few things that could make us happy that Christmas comes only once a year. There is no doubt that much of the music is really great, the work of a true musical genius. Our main complaint is that there is so much of the music!

Half-way through the performance, we are invariably already wanting to stand, mentally sing the bass part to the final, Hallelujah chorus and leave. That is strictly a personal reflection, and really is not concerned with a critical review. From the reviewer's angle, it was a fine performance.

THE CHORUS sang well in tune and with clear diction, no mean feat for a chorus that size. The orchestra played cleanly and showed even more improvement in their old bug-a-boo, intonation. The strings sound better than ever since we hear them; they have a greater depth of experience which gives both a better sound from a given number of players and a more cohesive expressive effort from all the sections.

The soloists were more than adequate, with a high point being the recitative and aria sung by Kirk Jordan, the amazing 11-year-old boy soprano who sang the part of Amahl later in the evening.

AS MUCH as we are dismayed at the heavenly length of the Messiah, we must admit that the combination with Amahl is a most fortunate one. The Messiah tells a story and tells it boldly and powerfully.

The story of Amahl complements beautifully. It is set in the same time as the Christmas Messiah, presumably only a few days before the birth of the Christ, out concerns itself with a very human story that occurs as a result of the messianic birth. It is tender and poignant as only humans can be, and funny and serious as only humans can be.

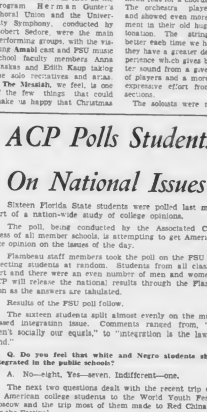
Denison Says:

Eliminate All Required Majors



(ACP)—"looking for an "intellectual revolt" on its campus, the DENISONIAN at Denison university, Granville, Ohio, suggests that required majors be eliminated.

Reasons the editors gave for dropping the traditional idea of students majoring in something at college were:

"We are limited to one specialized field. Instead, students, by the definition of "liberal arts" should be allowed to delve in all interests.

"More than 50 percent of liberal arts college graduates do not practice their specialization after graduation. Many go into large corporations which have their own training programs. Many of these companies, the editors say, are not essentially interested in the graduate's major field. "It is the . . . ways of thought, under-standing of a situation and ability to cope with problems that seem to be important rather than specific knowledge of a particular subject," says the DENISONIAN.

"The student is mature enough to determine his own values and should be encouraged to choose courses wisely to fit individual needs and interests.

ACP Polls Students On National Issues

Sixteen Florida State students were polled last month as part of a nation-wide study of college opinions.

The poll, being conducted by the Associated Collegiate Press of 43 universities and colleges is attempting to get American college opinion on the issues of the day.

Flambeau staff members took the poll on the FSU campus, selecting students at random. Students from all classes took part and there were an even number of men and women. The ACP will release the national results through the Flambeau as soon as the students are tabulated.

Results of the FSU poll follow.

The sixteen students split almost evenly on the much discussed integratin issue. Comments ranged from, "Negroes aren't socially our equals," to "integration is the law of the land."

Q. Do you feel that white and Negro students should be integrated in the public schools?

A. No—eight, Yes—seven, Indifferent—one.

The next two questions dealt with the recent trip of about 40 American college students to the World Youth Festival in Moscow and the trip most of them made to Red China following the Festival.

Q. What value do you think American attendance at the Festival had on promoting understanding between the free world and communism?

A. Some value or much value—eight, Little or none—seven, Undecided—one.

Q. Do you think the students who made the side trip to Red China were right or wrong in doing so?

A. Right—five. Wrong—sixth. Undecided—3.

Comments on this question ranged from, "The individualism shown by the students is good," to "They shouldn't disobey the State Department's wishes."

Another question asked whether the testing of nuclear weapons should be stopped.

Most FSU students thought that due to the world situation testing would have to continue.

A. Continue—fifteen. Stop—1.

Q. Do you think the Public Health Department was wise in publishing the possibility of an Asian Flu epidemic?

A. Yes—sixteen. No—two. Undecided—one.

One student said that so much publicity was given to it that everyone "felt that they had to get it."

Q. Do you think that NOT enough emphasis is being placed on liberal arts on colleges today?

A. Yes—six. No—eight. Undecided—two. One student said, "Judging by this university, I agree." (Yes)

Q. Do you plan to go on to graduate school after college?

A. Yes—four. No—eleven. Undecided—one.

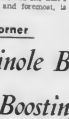
Q. Do you subscribe to or read a daily newspaper?

A. Yes—ten. No—six.

Q. It has been suggested that schools forbid students living on campus from having cars at school. Agree or disagree?

A. Agree—two. Disagree—thirteen. Undecided—one.

Q. After college do you want to work in a small town or a large city?



A. Small town—four, large city—10, Undecided—two.

Seminole Bowl Idea For Boosting Tally

BY ART ALBRECHT

Two weeks from today and holidays start. Combined with the time of the year means good cheer. Christmas presents, Christmas trees, Christmas unbalanced budgets. New Year's Day hangovers and bowl games.

BETWEEN NOW and January 1, sports pages will be filled with tales of the latter-bowl games to come and reports on the rapid hopes that have passed. This is a normal year.

Everyone loves the excitement of a bowl game.

Well, why can't the Capital City have one? It seems to me that both the Tallahassee and Tallahassee are missing a bet—and a profitable one at that!

DON CAMPBELL, Florida is no Rose Bowl but it's certainly as big or bigger than the stadiums which host such annual events as the Tangerine, Refrigerator, Sand, Shell, Cigar and Prairie View Bowls. These post-season contests are big business. They sell products, increase the host town and university and help to fill the merchant's till.

If the staging of a bowl game in Tallahassee was handled efficiently and a good game was lined up, there would be enough serve to enhance Tallahassee's stature. Surely there must be a number of civic and civic-minded local citizens who are in a position to form a committee and financially back a football bowl in this community.

I DOUBT that we could ever hope to attract big name spectators even if we could start that many, but, the Big Bend, Southern Conf. and Alabama ought to be able to muster up a full house for Dosk Campbell Stadium.

We couldn't compete with the other games on New Year's Day. If, however, we held a game in December after the close of the regular football season but preferably before the start of Christmas vacations, it could become a winner even in its infancy.

TALLAHASSEE has a chance to put on a parade. The stage and banks available on the day or sixty miles plus some imagination and gusto and some pre-game entertainment, the game could likely attract national media coverage.

All sorts of people would find themselves to a Tallahassee Bowl game. How about a Seminole Bowl or, with the products, the Tobacco Bowl? Promotion ers could even go a step further and have a Dixie Bowl. Do you know, a small crane?

PROBABLY the biggest obstacle to a Tallahassee bowl game would be the problem of obtaining top flight participate. After NCAA probation the debt toll and the Tallahassee gather up a team there isn't much from to choose. The Citrus Bowl is to cancel plans for a game year because they were unable to attract the top flight elevens. Certainly this couldn't happen to us.

However, there are possibilities. Using top notch officials would help the solution. Another might be to have the game on a night when the top fifty hut still have considerable appeal. For example, the Slingerland Bowl ers would probably be an excellent attraction. Or even be a novelty to match two teams claiming the national championship in the records in the nation.

MANY PEOPLE wonder what would happen if Florida played a team like the University of Florida. This would make for a colorful game something tells me that the likelihood of it ever materializing is extremely doubtful.

The answer might lie in getting the top collegiate team in the nation

Off To A Good Start

Tomorrow night another tough basketball team takes the court against the Seminoles in the person of Murray State of Kentucky, another member of the Ohio Valley Conference.

Tennessee Tech is already a victim of Florida State, but are these statistics mentioning the stats of Kentucky in reference to basketball you know they're going to have a good team.

Monday night's opener of the 1957-58 season got off on the right foot and showed to basketball followers of Florida State a marked improvement over last year's squad.

The main point is that they didn't sink.

Things were moving smoothly for the cagers until midway in the second half when Tennessee Tech put together a scoring spree and took the lead.

But the Seminoles refused to lie down and play dead. Instead they rallied and were never headed the rest of the game.

GARCIA KEY MAN

According to some observers guard Tom Garcia, who failed to score, was the key man. The little senior from Ft. Myers seemed to have a stimulating effect on the team, and turned what could have easily been a defeat into a well deserved victory.

He provided that extra something that a team must have. Let's hope he's got lots more of that stuff.

Last Saturday Florida State's football team closed their season with a convincing win over the Spartans of Tampa.

The Spartans played six league games against the Tribe, especially noteworthy was the running of Tampa's "big" fullback Fred Cason, who is a mere 165 pounds.

Cason put on quite a show before the homefolks amassing approximately 130 yards through and around the Seminole forward wall and secondary.

To show what a battering ram Carson was; some of the comments from the FSU secondary that this reporter learned about were, "Don't let that guy get through," and "Stop him at the line," or how about "how don't make him mad."

But Tampa is unique in one respect anyway.

In this reporter's opinion they have the world's worst press box.

Undoubtedly when the weather is warm the press box is adequate but when that temperature drops and the wind starts whipping across it's an ice box.

WHAT A NIGHT

I was indeed much more fortunate than the person sitting next to me. I had spied an unused top coat and with some very good luck from the FSU sports publicity director I was suddenly wearing that top coat.

How he talked the owner out of wearing it I'll never know, but I didn't ask any questions.

The coat was a little help, but I was still cold as I was attempting to compile statistics. That guy sitting next to me was just a play-by-play with the aid of only a sport coat.

Toward the end of the game he had abandoned a partial coat system in favor of trying with one finger.

A fan sitting in front of us asked if we were rooting for Florida State.

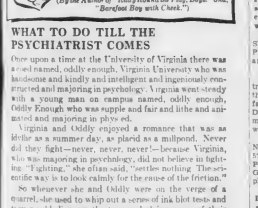
The reply was "Buddy, I'm rooting for the clock."

On Campus with Max Shulman

(By the Author of "I Was a Teen-age Dwarf," "Barefoot Boy with Cheek.")

WHAT TO DO TILL THE PSYCHIATRIST COMES

Once upon a time at the University of Virginia there was a coed named, oddly enough, Virginia University who was handsome and kindly and intelligent and ingeniously energetic and majoring in psychology. Virginia was not unsteady with a young man on campus named, oddly enough, Oddly Enough who was supple and fair and lithe and animated and majoring in phys ed.



Virginia and Oddly enjoyed a romance that was as idyllic as a summer day, as placid as a millpond. Never did they fight—never, never!—because Virginia, who was majoring in psychology, did not believe in fighting. "Fighting," she often said, "settles nothing. The scientific way is to look calmly for the cause of the friction."

So whenever she and Oddly were on the verge of a quarrel, she used to whip out a sense of inkblot tests and they would discover the true underlying cause of their dispute and deal with it in an enlightened, dispassionate manner. Then, the irritant removed, their romance would resume its tranquil, serene, unruffled course.

After six months of this sedate liaison, Oddly was so bored he could spit. He loved Virginia well enough, but he also believed that people in love ought to fight now and then. "It opens the pores," he said. "And besides, it's no much fun making up afterwards."

But Virginia would not be provoked into a quarrel. One night Oddly tried very hard. "Hey," he said to her, "your hair looks like a bat's nest and your ears look like hot yam's turnips and your face looks like a pan of worms and as for your head, I've seen better heads on newel posts."

"My goodness, we're hostile tonight!" said Virginia cheerfully and whipped 120 Rorschach cards out of her reticule. "Come," she said, "let us examine your psyche apparatus."

Oddly tried again. "Who makes your clothes?" he moved. "Bethlehem Steel!"

Hmm," said Virginia thoughtfully and lit a cigarette. "This sounds like an anxiety neurosis with totemism, antagonize trauma, and a belt in the back."

"I hate you," said Oddly. "I hate your looks and your clothes and your toenails and your relatives and the cigarettes you smoke."

"Now, hold on, buster!" cried Virginia, her eyes crackling, her color mounting, her nostrils aflame. "Just keep a civil tongue in your stupid head when you talk about Marlboro! Nobody's knocking that filter, that flavor, that flip-top box while there's breath in my body! It's a great cigarette, it's a doozy, it's a dilly, it's a bear—and anybody who says a word against it gets this."

By "this" Virginia meant a series of combinations to the head and liver, which she now delivered to Oddly and turned on her heel and stormed away.

Oddly brought her down with a flying tackle. "I love you," he said.

"And Marlboro?" said she.

"And Marlboro," said he.

Gymnasts Vie At Windy City

Florida State's gymnasts open their 1957-1958 intercollegiate season tomorrow, competing in the Midwest Open Gymnastic's Championships held at the University of Chicago.

A Seminole team of Larry Malmiln, Fernando Lecouna, and Chick Cirio, three of Florida State's best all-around men, will represent FSU at this annual meet.

The meet will feature NCAA and NAAU champions in addition to American and Canadian Olympians.

FSU will itself add color to the meet with the entries of Malmiln and Lecouna, both former Olympians from their own countries; Malmiln from Sweden and the 1952 games, and Lecouna from Cuba and the 1948 Olympics.

Cirio, the current Midwest Open free exercise titlist, will seek to defend his crown against a powerful array of the best gymnasts in the Big-Ten area.

Coach Hartley Price states that this meet is the best opportunity for our all-around men to get invaluable experience at the beginning of the season, competing against the best from the Big-Ten conference."

Gridder Bob Nellums Voted Most Valuable

Senior Bob Nellums, who led Florida State's footballers in scoring for the second straight year was named the Seminoles' most valuable player by his teammates Tuesday night.

The 200 pound native of Pensacola started the season at end, but was switched to the fullback post midway during the year to add strength to the Tribe's ground attack.

Nellums, who underwent a knee operation during the summer was praised by Coach Tom Nugent professional as a head said "certainly, the basic reason the squad has selected him is that they realize he sacrificed his personal reputation as an outstanding end when we needed a fullback."

TOP'S RECEIVING

The big fullback scored 32 points this year on five touchdowns, and two extra points. He still managed to lead the Tribe in pass receiving, snaring 21 passes good for 217 yards.

Other Seminole statistics leaders were sophomore Fred Pelland in rushing with 463 yards for a 3.4 average. Second in the rushing department was Bobby Renn with 417 yards and a 4.4 average.

Ted Rodrigne was the percentage leader in passing completing 18 of 37 attempts good for 227 yards, and three touchdown passes. Renn bit on 23 of 34 for 363 yards and two scoring passes.

Sophomore Joe Majors came on with a rush late in the year to pile up 206 yards on 20 completed passes and two touchdowns. Both were caught by end Bill Kimber.

SCHOMBURGER GRABS 11

Captain Ron Schomburger was second to Nellums in pass receiving gathering in 11 passes and led the team with three end zone catches, and third in scoring.

Renn was second in the individual scoring race with 25 points on four tallies and one extra point.

7 Tigers On All Foe Team

Seven players from Auburn's national football champions made Florida State's 1957 All-Opponent team, but it was a 146-pound quarterback who made the biggest impression.

Fran Curci, the fabulous little sophomore signal caller who guided Miami to a 40-21 triumph over the Seminoles, was voted the player most valuable to his team against Florida State.

Curci smashed the Hurricanes to a 34 point second half performance after they trailed Florida State, 7-6, at halftime.

LUZZI AT TACKLE

With one exception, Auburn's title line, the best defensive unit in the country, was named to the Seminoles' all-opponent team. Villanova tackle Don Luzzi was the only other lineman to make it.

The Tiger linemen cited were ends Jim Phillips and Jerry Wilson, guards Zeke Smith and Tim Baker, tackle Ben Preston, and center Jackie Burkett.

The all-opponent fallback was Auburn's Billy Atkins, a powerful runner who ground out two touchdowns in his team's 29-7 win over FSU. The victory boosted Auburn to the top of the national rankings.

The halfbacks who most impressed the Seminoles were North Carolina State's fabulous performer Dick Hunter and Dick Christy.

Florida State finished the season with a 4-6 record.

Hoopsters To Host Murray Tomorrow

By BEN BALSER
Asst. Sports Editor

With one victory to their credit already, the Florida State basketball team plays host to Murry State tomorrow night and then travels to Knoxville to face Tennessee Monday night. The game will start at 8:15 in the men's gym.

Students should have their activity book with them as coupon No. 20 will be required for admission.

Murray, a member of the Ohio Valley Conference from Kentucky, opened its season with a 80-60 win over Kentucky Wesleyan. Last season the Thoroughbreds posted a 10-13 record.

6-9 CENTER

The Murray attack is lead by 6r 6-9 senior Quitman Sullins.

CAGE CAPSULE

Game: Florida State vs. Murray, (Ky.)
Place: Men's Gymnasium
Date: Dec. 7
Time: 8:15 p.m.
FSU Record: 1 win, 0 losses
Murray Record: 1 win, 0 loses
Next Home Game: Jan. 6, Loyola, La.
Next Game: Dec. 9, Tennessee at Knoxville

Sullins is rated a very strong man on the backboards, and is being touted for all-conference honors.

Along with Sullins are two other returning lettermen, Terry Darnell and Sherll Margiet. Margiet is the shortest man in the starting lineup at 6-0, while Darnell stands 6-3.

At the guard posts for the Thoroughbreds will be Gerald Tabor 6-3 and Thomas Darnell 6-4. On the bench will be Jerry Grogan, Larry Renner and Gene Herndon, all 6-6.

Tennessee' Volunteers have a junior-laden team and had a 13-9 mark last year. They started off this season with a 84-61 win over Furman.

The only senior in the Tennessee lineup will be Leo Ammerman, Ammerman, 5-11, is rated as the sparkping of the team and will probably start at one of the guard posts.

Don Bingham 6-1 will be his running mate at that position. Holding down the pivot man post will be a junior Gene Formalien 6-7.

Ken Coulter or Charles Scott both 6-4, will open at one of the forward positions and Dalen Shoemaker will be the other guard. Shoemaker is a promising sophomore who led the Vols frosh team last season.

Another man who will see plenty of action for the Emmett Lowery coached squad from Tennessee will be Henry Garrison, 6-4 junior college transfer.

The Tribe lifted the lid of their 1957-58 cage schedule last Monday night when they defeated a much taller team from Tennessee Tech, 74-71.

FSU was led by the three junior college transfers Jim Litsky, Bert Deckel and Danny Boltz. Litsky was the leading scorer as he hit for 28 points. Deckel totaled 21 tallies.

BOLTZ BIG REBOUNDER

Boltz scored only nine points but got 14 rebounds. Hugh Durham, the soph flash from last season, hit for ten markers. The Seminoles took an early lead and held it until Tech took it with 12 minutes remaining.

The lead see-sawed back and fourth until Litsky hit a streak to pull FSU to the front. The difference in the game proved to be in free throws. The Tribe weak 28 out of 34 charity tosses while the losers made only nine out of 18.

Coach Bud Kennedy will probably use the same starting lineup as he did in the Tech game with Tom Garcia slated for plenty of action.

Freshmen Meet Norman Park JC

The game will be the forerunner of the varsity tilt between FSU and Murray State, and will begin at 6 p.m.

The Baby Seminole cagers concluded again this year by Jim Oler with 11 apiece and Bill Archer and Herb Schmuck at the forwards, Charlie Tinsley, an all-city choice in Miami last year at center.

Mehlar Hobbs, of South Bend, Ind. will be at one of the guard positions while either Phil Walker or Phil Sheffer'd will open at the other guard spot.

Bob Conrad, Bud Whitehead and Bob Kavanaugh have recently joined the frosh cagers and are expected to get limited action according to Oler.

On Wednesday the frosh travel to Gainesville to face the University of Florida frosh.

On Morrison's Senate, Dennis Meet To Probe Complaints

Concrete plans for a thorough Senate study of the "why's and wherefore's" of the operations of Morrison's Food Service on campus were made at a meeting last week.

A discussion of food service operations — quantity, quality, and prices — led to the adoption of an intensive background investigation into commercial versus school operations of food services. This is believed to be the first time such an endeavor has been undertaken in Senate history.

The meeting was participated in by Milton H. Dennis, Morrison's manager; Gerald Jones, assistant university business manager; Ada Leigh Wall, chairman of the Senate investigating committee; Senators Sally Hightman and Karl Butler; and Jim Kamins, chairman of Senate.

The ever-planning problem of student complaints concerning food services on campus, an annual ritual, instigated the calling of the meeting.

PETITIONS DEMAND

Petitions received recently by several student senators from residents of their living units demanded an investigation of Morrison's. A subsequent conference involving Student Body President Arnold Greenfield, Dennis, and Jones resulted in initial changes to improve food-service efficiency.

The ensuing investigating committee gathering brought to light the problems Morrison's deals with in providing efficient, satisfactory service.

"Food service is a problem on every campus," Jones declared. "And it's nothing unusual here. These 'investigations' occur every year.

"Morrison's isn't making money now. In fact, they lost money last year. The rent they pay the university for use of our facilities is put back into operations in the form of improvements—better equipment and interior redecoration, for example," he explained.

HIGH OVERHEAD

Among the factors preventing lower meal prices, as pointed out by Dennis and Jones, were the high overhead involved in keeping food services open during the low-sales summer months; hiather input costs of high-quality food products; and hiather cost of hiring student help.

Relatively low meal prices, however, were pointed out. "Our check average for October was $2 cents," Dennis said. Averages elsewhere would run closer to 85 cents, it was noted. This figure is reached by dividine total sales by the total number of customers, including all three meals each day.

According to the committee, these study plans are under way:

A comparison of prices, quantity served, and to an extent, the quality of food, between Morrison's and the Smorgs, the Corner, Holland's, Seven Seas, Stege's, and school cafeterias from the universities of Florida, Georgia, Miami, and Alabama.

INFO TO COMPARE

The letters being written to these schools will request information, especially the number of students served, labor costs, upkeep costs, and food costs, compared on a percentage basis with total receipts. This will provide basis for comparison of profits here and at other schools.

The letters will also inquire about their monthly check averages, variety of menus, and amounts served, according to the committee's report.

When we receive this information, we'll know where to go next," said Miss Wall.

"The only way to solve the problem is to eliminate from the bottom on up," Dennis declared.

"We feel that the successful completion of this survey will be a worthwhile accomplishment, and will prove of benefit to the student body," Miss Wall concluded.

Cosio Recital Tomorrow Night

Miss Delores Cosio of Tampa, Florida will give her graduate piano recital tomorrow night at 8:15 p.m. in Opperman Music Hall.

The public is invited to the concert which will open with Mozart's Sonata in A Minor, K 310, followed by Schumann's Kreisleriana Op 16. Stravinsky's Sonata 1924 and Dohnanyi's Three concert Etudes, Op. 28.

Miss Cosio is a music graduate of last February at FSU where she received a fellowship for the following year which she failed. Semesters She played earlier this season with the University Symphony in its first concert of the year. At present she is a graduate student in the studio of Edward Kilenyi.

Survey Shows FSU Students Come From East Of Tally

Dr. Robert M. Strozier, Florida State University president, referring to an article in the Tampa Tribune last week, said yesterday that the majority of state residents at FSU are not from west of Tallahassee.

The Tribune quoted him as saying that the majority of the state residents at FSU were from west of Tallahassee. Dr. Strozier said that he stated that the majority of students in the western counties came to Florida State rather than to other universities because of the geographical location.

In a recent survey compiled by Dr. Hugh Stickler, Director of Educational Research and Service, it was shown that 2,037 students from the western counties attend FSU. Leon County accounts for 1,154 of the total 5,872 students who are Florida residents and Dade County is second largest with a total of 717.

The survey, which numbered each county with the amount of students from the county enrolled at FSU, was also extended to ascertain the number of students from the various states.

Only two states are not represented in the Florida State student body—Nevada and Wyoming. There is at least one student from every other state in the union.

The counties and the number of student residing from the state's fourteen (14) are

Homes For Foreigners

'Friendly Host' Program Going

A "Friendly Host Program", sponsored by the Tallahassee District Women's Society of Christian Service of the Methodist Church, was announced to the Flambeau this week by Mrs. John Crotty, director, who said the program was designed to provide hospitality for FSU foreign students.

Mrs. Crotty, an FSU alumna, said that the program had been in effect for some time, and that 20 foreign students had been provided thanksgiving hospitality in Tallahassee homes through the WSCS effort.

ALL CONTACTED

She said those all the international students at FSU had been contacted by the group prior to the holiday season, being sent double postcards so as to indicate in return mail whether or not the student was interested in spending some of the holiday time in a family home.

Twenty replies were received and each replying student was shown a weekend of thanksgiving hospitality.

"We do not place any particular religious emphasis on these visits," Mrs. Crotty said, "we simply want to be friendly to these students who find themselves alone in a strange land."

The host program is not limited to holidays alone, Mrs. Crotty said. The group attempts to provide a home atmosphere for foreign students on regular weekends as well.

The same arrangements were made for thanksgiving and will be attempted for Christmas, but with the cooperation of the International Students Club.

MURTY BACKS IT

R. K. Murty, president of the club, has been informed of the program and will promote it through the meetings of the organization itself.

The newly elected officers include Bob Dumke, President; Jack Champion, first vice pres.; Don Zuehelt, second vice pres.; Gerald Cox, recording secretary; Ed Burlack corresponding secretary; Russell Rodeffs, treasurer; Vic Kleiza, social chairman; Bob Johnson, set-at-arms; Bob Thurmond, historian; George Bush, alumni secretary; Charlie K Schwenk, extension, chairman; and Ken Bryan, chaplain.

The FSU chapter of Alpha Phi Omega is host this coming weekend to sixteen brother chapters from the southeastern United States. The national Vice President, William S Roth, will be guest speaker at a banquet to be held in the Tallahassee Dining Room.

Following this banquet, formal initiation of new members and installation of new officers will take place. The main objective of this convention is, however, to discuss various projects and exchange ideas in the hope that APO can be of greater service in the future.

Alpha Phi Omega is a national service fraternity with approximately 290 chapters throughout the United States and Hawaii. This group of young men sponsor such things as the APO Bookstore, The Ugly Man-Ugly Woman contest, and many other worthy projects which aid the University, Community, and the Nation.

BOWL . . .

Freshman football isn't so well publicized; however, if, for example, we could have matched the Auburn and Ohio State Freshman Comma this year, it would probably attract a good crowd.

THESE ARE just suggestions. There are many other alternatives. Certainly a good bowl committee could even attract relatively major teams if it were willing to risk a little money.

I think the idea of an annual bowl event in Tallahassee is sound. And I feel that the people of Tallahassee would back it if somebody would get the ball, or should I say bowl, rolling.

MAYBE FSU could make enough money out of it to attract more football players to the Seminole squad. We might even sport a record impressive enough to get a bid ourselves someday.

It takes money to make money and it takes a considerable amount of that green stuff to put across a bowl game. I still say that the Chamber of Commerce, the Jaycees or somebody ought to get to work and consolidations of a post-season game. After all, next December is almost here!

Ever Caught An Octopus? It's Worth $2 If You Can

By JOHN RAY
Flambeau Associate Editor

Do you have a live octopus?

This seems like an unusual question but to those who answer yes, it could be worth $2.

The Department of Biological Sciences need the many-armed sea animals for research and is willing to pay $2 for every one which you bring to the zoology laboratories.

Dr. Robert B. Short, professor of zoology, said, however, there's a limit to the number which can be used. "Over a period of several months perhaps we can use about 50," he said.

NSF GRANT

The research on octopi is now proceeding under a new grant of $7,300 from the National Science Foundation. Since receiving the grant, however, the department has been unable to get the octopi. Dr. Short said this is possibly because heavy rains of late have driven them deeper and safer waters.

College students, who always seems to be in need of money, generally will try almost any type of employment to gain funds.

Catching octopi, though, requires some skill and Dr. Short said his graduate assistant in the research, Ray Dumais of Akron, Ohio, are willing to pass on some of the know-how.

"Octopi like to crawl into dark chambers and we have heard a very successful method of catching them is to lower several conch shells on a line.

This line is put down on the bottom around the entrance of a hole and when it is raised later there are likely to be an octopus or two in one or more of the conch shells," Dr. Short commented.

SQUEEZE THROUGH

The professor offers one word of caution to prospective octopus hunters. "An octopus can get through a surprisingly small opening and so when you capture one there ought not to be any place it can crawl through.

A laboratory assistant some time ago put one in an aquarium with a lid raised just high enough for an air tube. The next morning it had escaped, gone out under the door and strolled down the hall," he pointed out.

In case you are thinking that octopi are all the huge ogres of the deep which in the story books sweep down upon underwater swimmers to seize them with their tentacles and drag them to the bottom, relax because those found in the Gulf of Mexico are not.

If you prefer to be cautious, however, you might take a partner, preferably a large one who can wrestle well, into this enterprise with you.

MARBLE BODIES

The octopi which have been collected so far by the department range in size from tiny ones with a body no bigger than a marble. Dr. Short said the most dangerous they are likely to do to you is to give you a rather unpleasant nip with their horny beaks but gloves would probably take care of this, however.

The NSF research does not concern the octopi themselves but rather how-like creatures, about one-sixth of an inch long, which are parasites within the kidneys of octopi. The research is a study of the taxonomy of these parasites whose life cycle never has been traced although the animals have long been known to science.

Dr. Short said the ones desired are those living along the coast away from the Alligator Harbor region, located 40 miles south of here on the Gulf.

Besides being profitable for any daring hunters, it will also be a service to science. If by chance anyone undertaking this supplement should run into a story book octopus he probably could sell it for more than $2.

Thanksgiving Sing Reviewed

By DIXON REDDITT

Choral Union, Brass Choir, and The College Arts Quartet were featured on Tuesday, November 26, to present a Thanksgiving concert. Choral Union did the first number, "Chorus No. 17" from Mendelssohn's Hymn of Praise.

Charles Farley gave an adequate backing to the group on the Baroque and Western organ. The position on the program gave the performance a certain freshness but failed to aid the enunciation of the singers.

The saving grace of the Gabrieli," "Jubilate Deo" was the brass choir, which played with verve and character. More should be heard from them.

The "Testament of Freedom" contains some of the most stirring lines in all patriotic literature, moreover the music is superbly arranged by Randall Thompson. The Collegians were notable for clarity of diction and their presentation was obviously sincere. Unfortunately they at times seemed to be unsure of the support of the words they were singing, however. Guest accompanist Lowell Roddenberry added a necessarily driving spark to the ensemble.

It was in the final selection, "Psalm 30" of Christiansen that the peak of the program was reached.

The addition of the Collegians to the shorter male population of Choral Union greatly improved balance. This was the most satisfying performance of the evening and was a fitting "send off" for students about to go home for the holidays. I guess.

Red Cross Begins Life-Saving Classes

American Red Cross senior life saving classes began last night with an organizational session at the pool in the Women's Gym.

Those interested in further information concerning these classes are asked to contact Miss Smith of the Physical Education Department as soon as possible.

Official Notices

Students Must See Faculty Advisor

Contact Advisor

In order to prepare for the period of registration for Spring semester slated for January, all students will need to confer with their faculty advisors concerning the proposed program. Approval in writing for the Spring Schedule of Classes will be given by faculty advisors in conferences which begin Wednesday.

If students are uncertain as to the name and office location of their educational counselor, they should contact the Office of Coordinator of Counseling, 301 Westcott, by personal visit or telephone, according to Dr. Melvene D. Hardee, coordinator.

"This office will assist you in determining the faculty advisor to whom you have been assigned, the office location, and the office hours of the advisor," she said.

CULTURE TEST

The General Culture Test will be given last time this semester December 18 at 7 p.m. in Open-man Music Hall, the University Test Service has announced.

If the test is not taken at this time, a penalty fee of $5 will be automatically assessed Registration for any subsequent term and graduation will be withheld until this test is taken and the penalty fee paid.

The General Culture Test is required of each student during the first semester of his junior year. A transfer student with junior or senior standing must take this test at the first opportunity after his registration.

Excuses will be considered only if presented to the Test Service in room 215, Education Building before the test.

DELINQUENTS NAMED

A list of about 300 juniors and seniors who are delinquent from taking the Junior English exam has been posted by the English Department, according to Miss Martha G. Chapman, director of the Junior English program.

They include those who did not clear the requirements by filing for exemption, having made "B" or better in English 102, or by passing the examination given at the end of the sophomore year.

Each student will be assessed a $5 delinquent fee unless he presents an acceptable excuse for his failure to comply in room 435, History Building.

The list has been posted on the Junior English bulletin board, third floor History Building.

Chiefs Wind Up With Banquet

FSU's famous Marching Chiefs wound up a very successful season Tuesday night at 5:30 with their annual banquet held in the Seminole Room.

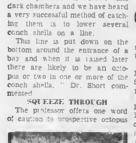
After a turkey dinner the program was presented over which Metia Wohl, member of Tau Beta Sigma, women's band fraternity, presided as toastmistress.

Invocation was given by Phil Posey, Kappa Kappa Psi Chaplain, after which guests were welcomed by the toastmistress and entertainment was provided by Alice Verran who sang and accompanied herself on the piano, and Jackie Howard playing the marimba.

Guest speaker for the evening was Dr. K. O. Kurteiner, who spoke to the group on "Music in the Space Age."

Awards were then presented by the band director Mr. Nathey B. Whitcomb, in which band members who had been Marching Chiefs for three years were given letters and sweaters, and four year members were presented with pins.

A recognition of seniors was given by David Tunnell and a challenge to the future Marching Chiefs by Charlotte Abney, a senior and also a member of Tau Beta Sigma.



The evening ended with the singing of the Alma Mater led by Terry Tomasco, drum major.

Learn Language Of Enemy, Friend

BY GEORGIANA FRY
Flambeau Staff Writer

Students should learn the language of their enemy, says Russian, as well as the language of their friend, according to Victor Oelschlager, professor of modern language.

Russian, along with French, German, Italian, Portuguese and Spanish, are the six languages offered by the Modern Language Department.

Majors are offered in French, German, Spanish, Modern Languages, and Inter-American Studies. This year, there are 24 French majors, 20 Spanish majors, seven Inter-American majors, and 10 Modern Language majors. There are no German majors.

TWO FIELDS

A Spanish major concentrates on the study of Spanish, while a modern language major studies two of the single languages —either Spanish and German, or Spanish and French.

An Inter-American major studies Latin America, the U. S. and Canada, in cooperation with the department of anthropology and archaeology, economics, geography, history, political science and sociology.

There are 17 collateral minors in this department, with 14 students studying Spanish; five, French and three, Modern Languages.

EIGHT SPECIALISTS

There are eight specialized teachers in the Modern Language Department. Dr. Oelschlager is professor of Spanish and Cervantes; Dr. Dorothy Hoffman, Spanish golden age literature; Dr. G. S. DeLand, modern Spanish novel and drama; Dr. Margaret B. Campbell, Latin American literature and comparative linguistics; Dr. Robert Lacaze, Latin American linguistics; Dr. Wilson Malmiddle ages and contemporary French; Dr. Albert Leduc, 17, and 19 Century French and Dr. Carl Krul, German.

Dr. Campbell conducted a 15 minute Spanish program on WCTV last year for 10 weeks.

This was the first educational TV broadcast in the Tallahassee area and was a huge success. Dr. Oelschlager said. "Germany and Mrs. Collins watched it religiously."

This program was so popular that Dr. Campbell was invited to Jacksonville to conduct a similar program.

Dr. Campbell is at present constructor of a two and one-half hour Spanish course in Bradenton. She commutes by plane every Tuesday.

TWO PAPERS

Two newsletters, The Polyglot and Florida Foreign Language Newsletter, are published by the department. The Polyglot is aimed to students and alumni as well as high school colleagues and FSU faculty members.

The Newsletter, a service bulletin, is received by all foreign language teachers in Florida who teach in the secondary system, public and private.

Yearbook Due 3rd Week In May

Barring drastic mishap, the annual at the engraver's now." for distribution by the third week in May, yearbook Editor Evie Morris announced this week.

"There are two sections of the annual at the engraver's now," Miss Morris said, "and three more sections will be on the way very soon."

ON THE PRESSES

Two-thirds of this year's book will be on the presses by the first of the year, with the engraving for those sections being done prior to the Christmas holidays.

The plans for the May distribution will be announced at a later date when they have become more concrete. The cover for the book has been designed and sent to several companies for samples and cost estimates before contracting.

Last year's edition of the Tally-ho was recently awarded a first division rating by the Associated Collegiate Press in the 4000-8000 student division.

The ACP judging board complimented the Tally-ho staff for their "effective use of interesting pictures," and judged the overall theme of the book to be "excellent."

This year's annual has had a large turnout of interested personnel, with over 70 students attending the first meeting.

"The cooperation from this year's staff has been excellent," Miss Morris said, "with several freshmen working on various sections and quite a few of last year's staff back with us."

1957-58 Tally-Ho will be ready

Directories To Go On Sale Here Monday

Student directories will go on sale Monday afternoon announced Redd Montgomery, advisor to student publications.

The directory, which will include more information about students than the 1956-57 edition, will be sold for 50 cents.

COMPLETE INFO

Included in the directory will be names of students, local and home town addresses, campus box number, school enrolled and class.

This year, for the first time, advertisements will be included in the directory, the format being comparable to the yellow pages in a telephone book. This book will be larger than the past ones and the print will be of a larger size.

Alpha Delta Sigma, men's advertising fraternity, was in charge of selling advertisements under the direction of Arnold Albrecht and Fehmi Z-ko.

FAITH COUNCIL

The sale of the directories is being handled by Inter-Faith Council which is headed up by Velma Ackerman. Committee chairmen include Jill Jordan, over-all chairman of selling; Nancy Brown, sororities and fraternities; Judy Taylor, dormitories; Ron Wood, bookstores and Rosemary Yarr, student houses.

Dr. Montgomery said "We hope that eventually the sale of advertisements and directories will be a money-making project which will give real substantial support to forthcoming Faith Week."

University Singers Set Xmas Theme

The University Singers annual Autumn Concert will be tonight in Opperman Music Hall at 8:15 Under the direction of Dr. Wiley L. Housewright, conductor, the Singers will open their program with "Who with Grieving Sowth."

Contrasting themes of both music and mood, introducing sadness, heroism, and joyfulness characterize the first section. "The Angel to the Shepherds," a Russian Christmas anthem by Johann Topfl is followed by the program proper. The two Negro spirituals "Go Tell It on the Mountain" and "Mary Had a Baby" will be followed by "Deo Salid" "Gesu Bambino" will follow "Ding, Dong, Merrily," "Carol of the Drum," and "A Merry Christmas" will conclude the program.

Artist Series Offering Set In Men's Gym

Internationally known Fred Waring will bring his Pennsylvanians to the Florida State University campus tomorrow night at 8:15 and present a "Hi-Fi Holiday".

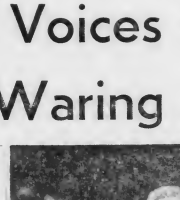
Sponsored by student government as the first in a Student Artist Series, the concert will be given in the Men's Gymnasium. Admission is $1.25 for students and $2 for non-students.

'GLORY VOICES'

An innovation on the concert will be "Tri-Glory Voices, a quartet of ordained ministers. These men are all alumni of Anderson College in Indiana. Other newcomers to the cast will include Angela Mario, Joe Marine, Nancy Reep, and Charles "Chuck" Wilson.

Early in the roaring twenties, Fred Waring enlarged his small troupe and the name "Waring's Pennsylvanians" was officially adopted. From that start, Waring has lead his group into popularity with millions of people.

The group has experienced the beginning of "talkies" in the movies, the success of radio, and introduction of television. When many groups were unable to produce what these new media needed, Waring and his group were always ready.



Like a famous painter, Waring has had his "periods". He started with his "Vaudeville Period," his "Glamour Period." Then came his "New York Theatre," "Concert," "Network Radio," and "Television." Some of the periods overlap each other, but they all contain the best music and arrangements that have been termed, "the music that America loves best."

TICKETS "SLOW"

Word from the Westcott Ticket Office Friday was that the performance are on sale, states that tickets have been going slow, but are expected to pick up today. There will be no "reserved seats" and all seats are available on a first come, first served basis.

This is the Pennsylvanians first trip to FSU. Everyone is urged to attend this "ultra modern musical mosaic."

The program will swing from the brightest, newest hits of Broadway Bolyhood and Tin Pan Alley to the moving splendor of spirituals. From swingy ragtime to bouncy rock 'n' roll to the soothing lullaby to a patriotic song."

HERE TOMORROW NIGHT. Fred Waring, who will bring his Pennsylvanians to the men's gym tomorrow night with a presentation of "Hi-Fi-Holiday."

'Caesar And Cleopatra Speech Department Satires Shaw's Play

Caesar and Cleopatra appear as an aging ruler of 53 with a widening bald spot and an adolescent savage in George Bernard Shaw's play, Caesar and Cleopatra, which opens for a four-night run at Florida State University Friday at 8 15 p.m.

The play, to be presented by the Speech Department will run Friday, Saturday, Monday and Tuesday in Augusta Conrad Theater. It satirizes the characters which history and Shakespeare have treated so seriously. Accordingly to its director, Dr. James W Brock, Shaw makes them both human and humorous.

"The play could have been titled Caesar and Cleopatra, or the Education of a Queen", says Dr. Brock.

Julius Caesar's invasion of Egypt in 48 B.C. provides the historical background for the production. Cleopatra at the time is a girl of 16, who is a "queen in name only." Caesar teaches her to assert herself and take over her duties as a ruler.

McCALL AS CAESAR

Ron McCall, a senior from St. Petersburg, in cast as Caesar, and Cky Cranford, a Valdosa, Ga. freshman, makes her stage theater debut playing Cleopatra. McCall is a veteran of numerous roles in FSU theater. Miss Cranford, who as a speech major "with emphasis on drama," says her "serious acting" commenced in junior high school and continued with Little Theater and high school productions.

Her biggest problem in playing Cleopatra was "getting rid of my Southern accent."

The cast numbers 36 actors, who play a total of 32 parts. There are six other leading characters.

Susan Caffrey plays Plataterita, Cleopatra's dominating nurse servant, and Tom Appleyard as Rufio, Caesar's good friend and top officer. Britannus, a stuffy Englishman and the brunt of Shaw's thrusts at the British military, is played by Oliver Dixon.

Bryant Sims portrays Apollodorus, who satirizes "art for art's sake," and Virgil Austin is Pothinus. Ptolemy's guardian. Seventeen-year-old Monk Guilford, of Tallahassee plays Ptolemy, the boy-kind of Egypt and younger brother of Cleopatra.

OBSTACLES

The biggest obstacles to production of the play, according to Dr. Brock were the size of the cast and amount of technical production involved.

The five acts, nine scenes, and seven complete set changes "tax the physical capacity of the theater to its utmost." Dr. Brock explained.

Charles Reimer, professor of speech, designed sets and props.

Charity Bowl Matches KA, Lambda Chi

An inter-fraternity football game, with all proceeds to go to charity, will be played December 21 at 2 p. m. on the Florida Blue field.

The "Charity Bowl" game, which will be the first of its kind, pits the KAs according to fraternity spokesmen, is "strictly for charity." All those concerned, including the football players, will pay the 50 cent admission fee.

NEW-TYPE QUEEN

A "Charity Bowl Queen" will be announced at half-time of the game, being selected from entrants of each sorority.

The method of selection is unique, in that she will be put up by the sorority, with the group selling the most tickets to the football game being the winner.

The game, which will be played according to high school rules, with high school officials, will include fraternity members who are not participants on the varsity football team.

VARSITY COACHES

They will be coached by members of the varsity football squad, with Len Swatzlc, George Boyer and Gerry Philp coaching the Lambda Chi team, and Bobby Renn and Jerry Graham assisting the KAs.

The Charity Bowl began in 1951 with the first game being played between Lambda Chi Alpha and Theta Chi. This competition was continued until last year, when Alpha Tau Omega replaced Theta Chi in the game. This will be Kappa Alpha's first appearance.

FSU Debate Squad Will Meet Tonight

Bill Allen of Miami, secretary-treasurer of the Florida Federation of Labor, will speak to the Varsity Debate Squad tonight at 7 in Room 222 History

Anyone else who is interested is welcome to attend, up to the capacity of the room," emphasized Dr. Gregg Phifer, debate squad advisor.

Nelms Named Queen

Sigs Lose Derbies, AOPis Cop Crown

BY NANCY GENE BROWN
Flambeau Asst. News Editor

"Get 'em!" a gang yelled. And they did.
Shrill had the audacity to swipe a Sigma Chi's revered derby.
Ensued an instantaneous riot.
The event was Saturday's sixth annual Sigma Chi Derby; the derby was a contestant; her punishment for the larceny was a swim in a vat of flour; the day's afternoon was a glorified free-for-all.
The derbies worn by the Sig Chis were fair game—for anyone who could escape, this it. The scene of action was, according to observers, vaguely reminiscent of "a pile-up on the goal line in Campbell Stadium," as scores took part in the traditional battle for possession of the derbies.

AOP WINS

In the midst of the melee, the Sigma Chis were able to conduct six events. Alpha Omicron Pi accumulated the most points to win the trophy.
Placing second was Zeta Tau Alpha, winners for the last two years. Had they been victorious again this year, they would have attained the right to retire the trophy. Third-place winner was Delta Zeta.
Rita Nelms, the AOPi candidate, brought her sorority double honors by her election as Queen at the Derby Dance held Friday night at the Women's Club.

PARADE TO DERBY

Preceding the Derby Saturday afternoon, nearly 200 cars participated in the Derby Parade leading to the hockey field, according to Sigma Chi spokesmen.
But all the competition—both in the contest and in the derby grabbing—was not sporting. The secret event, which traditionally gives the Derby a surprise ending, this year consisted of "Catch-The-Pig" contest.
Piggy didn't wanta play. He squealed. He ran. And he bit the Tri-Delta contestants. The contest was halted immediately.
The Tri-Delta's injury required a tetanus shot. She wasn't, however, admitted to the infirmary.

DERBY QUEEN was junior Rita Nelms of Montgomery, Ala., giving the AOPis a clean sweep, derby title, derby queen.

SIGMA CHI MELEE

AT THE BEGINNING—Sorority girls piled into the flour box in search of their sorority key

AT THE END—Everybody was in the flour bin as the derby finish turned into a free-for-all.

Smoke Signals Fiery Topic

The word "controversial" seems mild when one thinks of the discussion Florida State University's Smoke Signals has endured. The first issue of the year is out with three more promised by the editors, and its worth is still being debated by readers.

A CAMPUS magazine runs into trouble no matter what its ultimate goal. If its editors intend its format to be of a humorous nature they are confronted with the problems of censorship and charges of obscenity from those readers easily offended. If its format strives for literary excellence, its appeal is geared only to the satisfaction of a select group, but if its purpose is to present a publication of general interest the task becomes one of selecting strictly campus material opposed to that available at the nearest newsstand.

THIS YEAR'S magazine, although tagged "The Florida State University Magazine", was supposed to represent a sort of general feature type. But the results showed a slant toward the old humor style. We must give the editors credit for trying to give the contents a well rounded touch including cartoons, jokes, feature stories and fiction, however.

We must remind the readers that a publication can only be as good as its contributors, and Smoke Signals could benefit tremendously from added interest and contributions from talented students on campus who are capable of producing excellent material for the magazine, be it humor or of general interest.

SMOKE SIGNALS is the students' publication, mostly paid for by student activity fees. It is the responsibility of the staff to publish the magazine regularly; however, the staff need not attempt the impossible task of satisfying every student. Some will always like it; some will never.

It is not the purpose here to praise or condemn the publication. We want merely to point out that there is still room for discussion of the function it shall serve.

Smoke Signals' predecessor, the Talaria combined articles of a literary quality which were also of interest to the entire campus. Perhaps Smoke Signals should revert back to this format which not only serves as means of expression for promising campus writers, but contains articles the equal of which could not be read in regular magazines bought on the newsstands.

Criticism Offered On Smoke Signals

TO THE EDITOR:

I am the optimistic sort. But I am also critical. Having just read the fall issue of "Smoke Signals," I feel tempted to abandon optimism forever. I hate to say it, but it must be said. Too bad. This issue is up to the usual standard of "Smoke Signals" publications—poor!

THE FICTION work "And Back to Now," by Mark Austin is strange. The author seems to be talking about people who are different from other people. But nothing is said! First we have a college man reading, then some poor-lovemaking, next the hero decides to spend his evening reading, then he remembers his Navy days. Finally he finishes his book. The story has nothing to say, and says it badly.

As for the marriage feature—goody, goody. So people get married on campus, already. So what? And that I get from the article is a hazy picture of the editor-in-chief and the managing editor. What a cheap way to send wedding invitations! Also some interesting statistics: to what point, may I ask? Marriage anyone?

ANOTHER THING. Criticism of the Flambeau was not in order. At least the paper comes out on time! The cartoon on page 18 will better apply to "Smoke Signals." That joke, by the way, was definitely indecorous and out of taste. Possibly it reflects an adolescent anal fixation?!?

The one good thing in the magazine was the satire by Robert Cartwright. In the midst of death there is life. And the light shines in darkness. And so forth. Very nice, Mr. Cartwright. I am sorry that he did not choose a less overworked subject, however. As all events, very good.

SAVING THE worst for last in order to keep in character with the magazine as a whole, Pierce Lehmbeck's "Reflections" takes the cake. Ugh! Here we go round the platitude bush, and I'm tired of it by five o'clock in the morning. By the way, does the author really mean to say that God's greatness "is controlled entirely by your capacity to believe"? If so, what if you do not believe? Poor little God! Poor little author !!!

On the hopeful side, I believe that a university of 7000 students must have more talent than is exhibited in this issue. Perhaps the editors cannot find it. Maybe it's hiding! But I think it's out there. Look a little harder, ma'am.

Respectfully yours,
EMMETT D. JARRETT

Let Sophs Have Cars

The Class of 1960 will remember their college days as having its ups and downs —those owning cars anyhow. Since entering the university as freshmen, their position as far as bring cars on campus has been shaky, indeed.

UPON ENTERING Florida State, the freshmen were told they could not have cars that year, but would be allowed to have them the following school year when they accumulated enough hours to become sophomores.

However, during the summer months, the Board of Control, acting on recommendation, extended the freshmen ban to sophomores, the same students who thought they would be allowed to have cars after a year's restriction.

BECAUSE OF a lack of notification, the car ban was temporarily halted this semester, a move which seems to be satisfactory in terms of traffic congestion. As a means of eliminating traffic, the restriction of certain classes from having cars is not an entirely effective panacea anyhow because of the numerous exceptions made to the rule.

SENATE has gone on record as being opposed to continuing the ban next semester, and Student Body President Arnold Greenfield and the Student-Faculty Traffic committee have recommended the same.

In view of the Class concerned these recommendations are realistic and fair and it is our hope that they be accepted.

Peterson, Cosio Give Fine Performances

By LOWELL RODDENBERRY

In a week teeming with various concert activities, two important ones were presented last night. Doctoral candidate Jack Peterson and masters student Dolores Cosio both turned in fine performances.

IN THE first of his series of doctoral recitals, Jack Peterson acquitted himself admirably. His playing is distinguished by articulate finger work and a thoroughly musical approach to his instrument.

The Bach French Suite in B-flat minor which he opened is an oft programmed work. Here it was obvious that the pianist is a scholar to meet the rarefied qualifications for the doctoral degree.

While his tempo were well chosen, the parts lacked a certain verve. His pianism was at all times pleasant and controlled but too consistently the same to afford much contrast which is always necessary.

Mr. Peterson's choice of Beethoven sonatas was a most fortunate one. Within the limits of stylistic conventions, he gave a delightful, vivid rendition of this audience resounded with grateful applause.

His Playing recovered itself to best advantage in the first three movements. The clarity of the finals was somewhat obscured by an overly loud base. The fault can in part be attributed to a different main abscommoning. Its brilliant base overbalances its weaker, treble register.

A group of Rachmaninoff preludes showed off the technical ability of Mr. Peterson which is more than adequate. Again the base at times obscured some of the fillagree work. The prelude in g-sharp minor, Opus 32 number four was beautifully played and is a deservedly popular concert piece.

THE CLOSING Debussy pieces reached their climax in an exciting performance of "Fireworks." The Joyous Isle which closed the program is a hard piece to project. Its effect depends upon sustaining the biggest sound for the very end. Herein lies pianist's greatest difficulty. His playing tends to reach too great a dynamic intensity prematurely. However it takes talent to reach a level of intensity, and talent Mr. Peterson has aplenty.

It is mainly considered an insult to comment upon a performer's dress, but Miss Cosio's gown was one of Dolores Cosio, one can't help mentioning both. She was exceedingly lovely and had a warmth and poise that captivated her audience.

MISS COSIO'S program of "Forever" The Joyous Isle" which closed the program is a hard piece to project. Its effect depends upon sustaining the biggest sound for the very end. Herein lies pianist's greatest difficulty. His playing tends to reach too great a dynamic intensity prematurely. However it takes talent to reach a level of intensity, and talent Mr. Peterson has aplenty.

It is mainly considered an insult to comment upon a performer's dress, but Miss Cosio's gown was one of Dolores Cosio, one can't help mentioning both. She was exceedingly lovely and had a warmth and poise that captivated her audience.

MISS COSIO'S program of Stravinsky's Sonata (1924) was perhaps the most ambitious undertaking in most certainly is not one of the cornerstones of the piano literature, but fine playing can transform even a meretricious work.

No matter what Miss Cosio plays, her talent can only appreciate her concert which is always tasteful. The Dohnanyi encore with which she closed would actually have been more effective in the hands of a more obvious brilliant pianist, but nevertheless, were enjoyable.

This reviewer quite obviously likes what he heard despite the fact that the performance needs much polishing. Her growth as a musician is evident. Has been exciting to watch. Her career as a concert artist (there is a distinction between an artist and a mere pianist, will give him even more pleasure.

Questions Which Haunt One's Soul

BY L. A. HESTER

Does yesterday, today, tomorrow, oh how one does wonder what the answers are; answers, I mean, to all those questions that we keep asking ourselves, but never utter aloud. Indeed they are simple questions on the surface. What am I best suited to do in life? Am I interested in getting married? What is the place of religion in my life?

THE LIST of questions is infinite in scope and of course everyone's list varies with individual circumstances. From time to time a person begins to wonder if he is the only one who is concerned with such problems, but all one has to do is to look around himself and the answer will be self evident that few people know the answers to the questions of destiny.

Destiny is indeed a curious thing. The dictionary lists the word necessity as a synonym, but nowhere does it give a key to what the necessary elements are supposed to be or how one might go about fulfilling such a nebulous list of components if they did exist.

TO USE A play on words, if destiny is a necessity and a necessity is something which is necessary," and something which is necessary is in turn something which is "essential" or "compulsory." I find myself wondering how anything so clearly defined could be so continually in a state of chaos.

The number one question is whether we make our own destiny or is it preordained by some superior force. The general answer is that we shape our own destiny and yet the other alternative is indeed food for thought.

ONE MIGHT well ask himself what part did I have in making the world a powder keg with two overarmed fuses? What could I do about the circumstances that I was born into? What actually is my influence on the conditions of society?

I have but one life to live, how should I live it, is simply a paradoxical question. Who knows, perhaps we have more than one life and perhaps we have no choice of how we live it.

QUESTIONS, questions, oh how they haunt one's soul. The advancement of society seems to make the burden of living heavier, adding to its complexity and subsequently the variety of choice. It's small wonder that with the ever increasing tension placed on daily living that a favorite topic of idle conversation is talking of the good old days.

Indeed perhaps idle is the wrong word realistically speaking, we appear to be without off today than ever before, but then we must be following a course of just the opposite nature.

WHO CAN say whether the material advantages of life are the best; right on the heels of glorious Greece and the mighty Roman Empire, almost a thousand years of [illegible] was ordained to a completely different course. Maybe the true best was the so called "Dark Ages."

Perhaps I have completely failed to [illegible] I am trying to say, but written at this [illegible] my thoughts would still be a failure because I have no answers to the questions I pose nor problems without answers are perhaps better left unsaid.

Ike Delivers Gettysburg Address

Recently, The Colorado Daily, student newspaper at the University of Colorado, found Boulder institution drew much fire after it printed a parody on Lincoln's Gettysburg Address, written as A. Robert Smith believes President Eisenhower might have delivered it. We reprint it from the Daily Texan.

"I haven't checked these figures, but 87 years ago, I'm willing to wager, a number of individuals organized a governmental setup here in this country. I believe it covered certain areas, with this idea they were following up, based on a sort of national independence arrangement and the program that every individual is just as good as every other individual.

"Well, now of course we are dealing with this big difference of opinion, civil disturbances you might say, although I don't like to appear to take sides or name individuals, and the point is naturally to check up, by actual experience in the field—see whether any governmental setup with a basis like the one I was mentioning has any validity—whether that dedication, you might say, by those early individuals have any lasting values.

"Well, here we are, you might put it that way, all together at the scene of action of those disturbances between different sides got going. We want to pay our tribute to those loved ones, those departed individuals who made the sacrifice here on the basis of their opinions about how this setup ought to be handled.

"It is absolutely in order and 100 per cent okay to do this.

"But if you look at the overall picture in this, we can't pay any tribute—we can't sanctify this area—we can't hallow, according to whatever individual creeds or faiths or rites of religious outlooks are involved, like I say about this particular area.

"It was those individuals themselves, including the enlisted men—very brave individuals—who have given this religious character to the area. The way I see it, the rest of the world will not remember any statement issued here, but it will never forget how these men put their shoulders to the wheel and carried this thing down the fairway.

"Our job, the living individuals of this nation, is to pick up the burden and sink the putt that made these ba efforts here for.

"It is our job to get on with the assignment and from these deceased fine individuals to take extra inspiration, you could call it, of the same theories about which they did so a lot.

"We have to make up our minds right here and now. As I see it, they didn't put out that blood, perspiration, and—well, that time didn't just make a dry run here, that all in under God, that is, the God of our choice shall beef up this idea about freedom and liberty and those kind of arrangements and that government of all individuals, by all individuals, and for the individuals shall not pass out of the world picture."

Longmire Ideal For Chamber Music

BY DIXON REDDITT

If there has ever been an ideal place for a presentation of a concert of chamber music, it is the large lounge of Longmire. The room has just the right proportions, and just the right acoustical make-up to accommodate a good-sized crowd and still maintain a sense of intimacy and "identification" with the music performed.

SUCH WERE the happy conditions last Sunday when Phi Mu Alpha presented its first Coffee Concert of the season. For the opening selection, Phyllis Rappaport, piano; Nancy Fowler, oboe; and Dale Jensen, flute, gave an excellent reading of a Trumpet Tune "Prize Minuets" in E minor. This performance with its crisp attention to detail and precise ensemble set the mood for the entire program.

Next, Jensen and a string trio consisting of Ellen Taaffe, violin; Eda Estep, viola; and Julius Sturm, 'cello, played the Mozart Flute Quartet, Kochel 285. What a happy selection this was. The group, in addition, gave a remarkably exuberant and understanding performance Jensen, in particular, seemed to have complete control of the ensemble and exhibited a rare sense for proportion of line and refinement of tone. Frankly, this is the best that we have ever heard this gentleman play.

AFTER THESE first two numbers, coffee was served to concert-goers by Mrs. K. O. Kuersteiner. This serving of refreshments added even more to the air of informal quality that enabled the listeners to just sit back and enjoy the music.

As a final offering, Phyllis Rappaport, piano; Nancy Fowler, oboe, Harry Schmidt, clarinet; Andrew Thomas, bassoon, presented the Beethoven Piano Quintet, Opus 16.

THIS, TOO, was an excellent performance. It was in many ways the high point of the afternoon. All the players seemed conscious of one another in the various exchanges of line; the fineness of balance and spiritedness of delivery made it a really memorable rendition.

It is too bad that there is not an adequate piano in Longmire Lounge. The present one might be compared to a Model T of vintage 1919. Miss Rappaport, while handling it like one sport car, admitted that the piano was "not quite like any thing she had ever played before." An important item to remember when planning the Lonamire piano is that it gets louder when the soft pedal is depressed. We hope that the piano situation is remedied soon.

Concerts of music of this scope and performance to match them are too few and not every day, and the appreciative audience was well aware of its treat.

Coach Surprised At Victory Margin

Bud Kennedy sat back in his office chair and smiled thoughtfully. "I guess I'd better not get all three of those boys but the night!"

What the genial Seminole cage coach meant was that if all three of those boys"—Hugh Durham, Jim Litsky, Burt Swirl—all found the range the same evening, pity the poor opponents.

Kennedy admitted he was as surprised as anybody over the margin his Seminoles had just beaten Murray State by.

"We just don't expect to beat a team as consistently as good Murray by 24 points. For that matter it's quite a task to beat team in the Ohio Valley Conference at all.

And when you beat two of them in a row (Tennessee Tech the first) you've done two good nights work.

The talk of the town was Hugh Durham, and deservedly so. team took command of the Seminoles Saturday night. Those thought he might "have lost his touch" after a 10-point performance against Tennessee Tech ate their words with a smile.

ADERSHIP

Hugh has come to the point where he's playing at his best," ady smiled. "His leadership was certainly felt out there ."

particularly significant in addition to his 30 points was the that Durham, only 5-11, grabbed 11 rebounds, tied for second the team with Burt Deckel (6-3).

The fiery Louisville guard dropped eight of 15 shots against ssy, only three of 16 against Tennessee Tech.

Had he had even an average night against the Tennesseans, 74-51 outcome would have been decidedly more in the Semi- favor.

This is undoubtedly the best balanced Seminole five assembled here in many a year, and one with great potentialities.

The next five games may determine just how good they are.

Intramural News

With the aid of a new ruling and 8 first downs, Penthouse Gang scored a win over Magnolia Hall. The final score ended 6-6, but Penthouse Gang had racked up 8 first downs to Magnolia's 2 first downs.

A ruling in intramural Touch Football states that: Any game that ends in a tie, a winner shall be declared by the manner of first downs made in that game. That's the way it ended for Penthouse Gang, declared winner on the merit of first downs.

Other action in the Dorm-Independent League last Thursday went like this: SSU took CIO 13-7 in a close game; Newman had little trouble in beating the Playboys 36-19. This was Newman's first game of the season and they show much potential power.

Forfeits for the day gave Veterans a win over the Feds, AFROTC over the Lutherans, and Senior Hall a win over the Rebels.

The Schoenborns of KS provided the excitement for Friday, when they brought KS from behind to beat SC 14-12.

KS was trailing 12-7 in the last fifteen seconds of the game. J. Schoenborn faded back and tossed a fifty yard pass to his cousin R. Schoenborn. "Cuz" took it on the 2 and was across the double stripe before SC knew what had happened. The try for the extra point was good and KS won 14-12.

SAE took a heartbreaker from FKT on the first down ruling. Final score was 12-12, but SAE had racked one more first down than did FKT. LCA pulled a stalemate out of the fire and beat SPE 7-0.

Gymnasts Place In Midwest; Cicio 2nd In Free Exercise

Three top gymnasts from the Florida State gym team competed and placed in the Midwest Open Gymnastics Championships in Chicago Saturday.

Chick Cicio, former title holder of the free exercise event in the Midwest Open, finished second in that division and thereby lost his title. Cicio also finished fourth in the parallel bars.

Larry Malmlin, former Olympian from Sweden who competed in the 1952 games, copped a sixth for the Seminoles in free exercise. He was injured in this event and had to be withdrawn from the rest of the meet.

FSU's former Olympian from Cuba Fernando Lecuona also made the trip to the Windy City but did not place in any event.

According to head coach Dr. Hartley Price no team points were recorded, as it was an individual meet. Dr. Price commented that "the meet provided the men with a good opportunity to shape up for the tough dual meets the team will face this season."

Baby Cagers Meet Florida

Florida State's frosh hoopsters seek their second win tomorrow night at Gainesville when they meet the Florida freshmen.

Led by Charlie Tinsley's 23 points, the freshman basketball team easily defeated Norman Park (Ga.) Junior college 82-44 Saturday night.

With Tinsley, a 6-5 forward from Miami, and Bill Archer, 6-4 center from Melbourne, as the standouts the Baby Seminoles were out to a 42-25 halftime lead over the Bears and were never headed.

Hoopsters Seek Revenge For Three Previous Losses

By MIKE PLATTIS

With three games history and the scalps of at least two strong southern powers dangling from their belts, the Florida State Seminoles ready themselves for their perennial struggle with the Gators of Florida tomorrow night in Gainesville.

Last night at Knoville the cagers met the tough Tennessee Vols of the SEC.

Florida and Florida State have met thrice previously with the Gators on the long end of the count each time.

The Seminoles will seek revenge over last year's defeat in particular, when they lost 67-65 on Bobby Hobbs' last second heave from half court.

Hobbs, Florida's all-SEC first stringer is back this year to provide the spark in coach Johnny Mauer's offense.

The 6-0 forward poured in 21 markers in Florida's 66-60 loss to Georgia last Saturday, and promises to give the Seminoles trouble.

ZINN AT CENTER

Teaming with Hobbs at forward will be Jerry Henderson 6-3. With two letters on his sweater, Jim Zinn 6-7 will take over center from Florida's all-time scoring ace Bob Emrick. Emrick and four other Gators were lost to graduation.

Charlie Pike 6-0 and Dick Robba 6-3, both from Miami High, are as experienced pair and will handle the back court duties for the Gators.

Riding the crest of a 30-point splurge from Hugh Durham, the Seminoles left the highly touted Thoroughbreds of Murray State at the gate, winning handily Saturday evening 84-60.

It was the Durham of old who thrilled the onlookers with his display of shooting and court generalship.

The 5-11 guard poured in eight of 15 field goal attempts, hit a phenomenal 14-16 free throws, and pulled down 11 rebounds in what may have been his best performance ever at FSU.

Murray led only once, and that was at the outset when Terry Dorsey put them ahead 4-2 after FSU's Jim Litsky opened the game with a long jump shot.

Durham staggered the visitors with two sets and a pair of fouls to have the Thoroughbreds seemingly ham strung and unable to gain the lead again.

SCORING LAPSE

Florida State's sharp defense took its toll during the first half, when it took Murray eight minutes to score between their 11th and 13th points.

Bert Deckle, who hauled in 13 rebounds during the evening, tallied six quick points at the close of the half to bring the score to 39-14 at half-time.

Durham opened the second half with a brace of field goals to give FSU a 22 point lead.

With less than four minutes gone, Seminole center Danny Bolts and Murray forward Gerry Tabor turned a wild scramble for a loose ball into a free swinging fiasco beating long enough for Bolts to draw blood.

With order restored, Bolts promptly fouled out a minute later. Larry Strom followed Bolts to the bench with five fouls shortly after, but FSU continued to hold Murray with Jim Savage and Joe Westhaler filling in creditably for both.

Durham cut loose for six tuckian led both teams in re- straight again, followed by a jump from Tommy Garcia and g drive by Litsky to keep the gap at 71-49.

With 1:12 left, Deckie drew foul number five seconds after winding up Seminole scoring with a lay-up. The leaky forward trailed Durham with 16 points.

Litsky tossed in 14, and Strom scored 13 while doing a good job off the boards, pulling in 22 rebounds.

Quitman Sullins, 6-6 center, was the only man in double figures for Murray with 13. The rangy Kenbounds with 11.

Camps Seeking Men Counselors

Men counselors are in demand for summer employment in numerous camps all over the United States, according to Dr. Mary V. Alexander, associate professor of women's physical education.

The men counselors are offered better salaries than women counselors, even though there are no differences can not be relatives

Once a student is placed in a camp, all further transactions are between the camp director and student.

Students interested in being associated with the state camping association should contact Dr. Alexander, president, at her office in the Women's Gymnasium.

KINDS OF CAMPS

There are camp counselor positions at private camps and agency camps, such as Girl Scout and Kwanis, for two to eight week employment. Salaries range from $150 to $600 plus room and board.

Some camps will pay a student's traveling expenses

Students do not have to be physical education majors to be considered, according to Dr. Alexander. Camp directors are interested in students who have a pleasing personality, love people and children, and have qualifications in the following activities: water front, nature lore, sports, campcraft, music, dramatics, handcraft, office work, dietetics, and special activities, such as photography and campfire programs.

Last year, 75 students were placed through the camp placement service. One hundred and fifty students made application for placement, but not all completed the necessary processing.

A student must complete a personal data sheet and have four recommendations. Two of these recommendations must be FSU instructors and the other two references by college graduates

Traffic Group Is Investigating Soph Car Ban

The Student-Faculty Committee yesterday followed the example of the legislative and executive branches of student government and made a recommendation to the university administration to the effect that there should be no sophomore car ban next semester.

Student government officials have taken the position that the car ban, which was not enforced this fall due to lack of proper publicity, should not be enforced during the second semester either.

Student Senate went on record Wednesday urging that no car ban be placed on sophomores for the spring semester, and Student Body President Arnold Greenfield announced yesterday that he was in wholehearted agreement with their resolution

"I feel that the traffic situation on campus thus far this year has been well handled," Greenfield said, "and that the situation will not be significantly improved by the banning of sophomore cars during the second semester."

"Although I realize that the announced policy of the Board of Control was to exclude sophomores from having cars this year," he said, "I feel that an objective analysis of the traffic situation reveals that little if anything would be gained by a further ban."

Greenfield said that a letter of recommendation was being sent to FSU President Robert M. Strozier.

Strozier said that he would give the matter careful consideration before making any decision or recommendation to the Board of Control.

Funds Committee Is Misunderstood?

"There seems to be a lack of knowledge or a misunderstanding on the part of student organizations as to what their obligations to the Student Funds Committee are, concerning the legality of fund-raising projects," according to Don Ramsden, undersecretary of finance for funds.

Student organizations wishing to sponsor such projects must submit applications for their approval to the committee before the project is completed, Ramsden emphasized. A financial statement must be filed with the committee's chairman. A similar statement is due before the end of the year showing to whom and how much of the profits were dispersed.

"All organizations are entitled to only one such project per year," Ramsden stated. "However, in the event that certain circumstances prevail, more than one project is possible by the consent of the committee."

Application forms may be obtained at the Landrum directory office. Completed forms should be mailed to the Undersecretary of Finance for Funds in the Longmire Building, Ramsden concluded.

On Jonathan Swift

Noted Irish Humorist To Speak At 'Hour'

Sir Shane Leslie, noted Irish humorist, poet, novelist, and biographer, will deliver a lecture at the English Coffee Hour on Friday at 4 p.m. at the Westminster House.

His lecture will be on the biographies he wrote on Jonathan Swift.

Sir Shane was educated at Eton College, King's College, Cambridge University and the University of Paris. He also holds an honorary LL.D. from Notre Dame.

His last visit to this country was in 1942, having lectured at Notre Dame and the University of Pennsylvania.

CASTLE DWELLER

Despite his castle and 1700-acre estate, his blue kilt and "stand-o'-shanter, Sir Shane reportedly considers himself as American as Irish. His mother was the former Miss Leonie Jerome, one of the famous Jerome sisters, another of whom married Sir Winston Churchill.

He has produced several historical mysteries, such as the "Man in the Iron Mask"; five novels, four volumes of verse, and biographies of Jonathan Swift, Cardinals Manning and Wiseman, Tolstoy and King George IV.

HUSKY WOODSMAN

In addition to his literary endeavors, Sir Shane has held the title of Ireland's foremost amateur forester for the last 39 years. His forest holdings are in his native domain at Glasbourn in County Monaghan, Northern Ireland.

He has been described as witty as Bernard Shaw, approaching America as American as Will Rogers and possessing a savoir-faire that has long been polished at the Court of St. James.

When And Where

Sigma Tau Delta, national professional English fraternity, will hold its Christmas program at 8 p.m. today at the Kappa Alpha Theta house on Park Ave. Dr. Claude Flory will be guest speaker.

Following refreshments, pictures for Tally-Ho will be taken.

Music Educators National Conference will meet tonight at 6:45 in Room 342 of the Music Building. Mr. Thomas Wright will speak.

All members are urged to attend to have Tally-Ho pictures taken following the meeting.

Classics Professor Publishes Translation Of Diodorus' Work

Dr. Francis R. Walton, head of the Department of Classics, recently published a translation of a Greek historian, Diodorus of Sicily.

Diodorus lived in the first century B.C. and wrote a Universal History from the earliest times down to his own day, stopping with the death of Julius Caesar in 44 B.C. Part of his work has never before appeared in English.

15 SURVIVE

Of the original 40 volumes, over which the early day H. G. Wells toiled for 30 years, only 15 complete books and fragments of 20 more have survived the ravages of time. Dr. Walton's newly published work contains fragments of books 21-32, covering the period of 301-146 B.C. and appears as Volume Eleven in the Loeb Classical Library Edition of Diodorus.

Volumes one through seven and Volume nine were published earlier by three other American scholars. Dr. Walton expects to publish a final volume next year, which will complete the work.

The only previous English translations of Diodorus dates from 1700 and has little value except as a literary curiosity. Considerable portions of the text of the present volume were discovered only in the 19th century, and have not, therefore, been available until now in English translation.

COMPARED TO WELLS

Diodorus is compared to the modern English historian, H. G. Wells, in that his work is universal in nature and based on an accumulation of the writings of other historians rather than being an original history.

One of his history's chief values to classicists is that it contains a great mass of material collected from a number of writers whose works have perished. He called the massive work an "Historical Library."

Dr. Walton spent the past year in Greece under a Fulbright grant, working on a study of ancient religious festivals, while attending the American School of Classical Studies in Athens.

He is editor of the American Philological Association Journal and president of the Tallahassee Society of the Archaeological Institute of America.

Dr. Walton came to FSU in 1932 from the University of Chicago, where he was assistant professor of classics from 1926 to 1932. Before that, he taught at the University of Minnesota and at Williams College.

Marriage Article Praised

'Signals 'Sad,' 'Tamer,' According To Students

By PAT SENN
Flambeau Staff Writer

Heap big Seminole pow-wow has been going on since Smoke Signals was released. Chiefs have lined up to say:

Senior Dave Dion Abbott from St. Petersburg said, "I'd like to see at least 50 per cent of the space used for articles instead of so much advertisement, but it was a pretty good comeback after last year. The cartoons were good, but the jokes a little old."

Senior squaw Rebecca Blount Buxton stated, "It sure was a tame one, that last year. I liked the marriage article, but it should have been developed more fully."

Junior Sandra Reis agreed. "The marriage article was excellent," but added, "The article on fraternities was uncalled for and ridiculous. It was bad taste, poor manners, and gross. The author doesn't have to join a fraternity to see a twisting his arm."

"Bad," was veteran C. E. Viceroy's comment.

Sophomore from Miami, Herb Sever said, "It was better than the last issue. All that literary stuff should be saved for humanity courses. The cartoon about the Flambeau was the best."

"I thought it was corny, and," added sophomore Jayne Hentz, "It wasn't up to as good as they had built it up to be."

Seminole papoose Dianne Foard, claimed, "It was dumb stupid, asinine and definitely not on a college level. The students should get behind the Smoke Signals, and give it the support necessary to make it a magazine that FSU can be proud of."

Summing up his opinions of it, freshman Steve Shacnski said, "It was fairly good, but I've seen better ones from Duke, Florida, Georgia Tech, Michigan State, etc. etc."

Ann Skaggs New Fraternity Queen

In honor of the active sorority, Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity presented their annual Queen of Diamonds Dance Saturday night. Ann Skaggs, a member of the FSU Marching Chiefs, was crowned as queen.

Queen Ann was presented with a bouquet of roses and an engraved, heart-shaped trophy by Joyce Alderman and Violet served as attendants.

Jim Brooks entertained the guests and members with popular songs and guitar arrangements. Alumni guests were Mrs. Jack Weirs, Mr. and Mrs. Max Reeves, Mr. and Mrs. Reeves Bowen, and Mr. and Mrs. John Van Deusen.

Proceeding the dance was a Delta entertainment, the SPE a hot-dog roast at the Sorority house.

Materials Meet Discusses TV

Education television and the library was the chief topic of discussion at the School Materials Conference held on the campus this weekend.

Miss Audrey Newman of the State Department of Education told the conference that educational television will send pupils to the school library more often in search of a wider range of materials that cannot be found between the covers of books.

Teachers, also, will seek from the library audio-visual materials that will be helpful in teaching, Miss Newman continued.

Despite the shortage of trained personnel, she said, many Florida counties are furnishing centralized library materials service to all their schools.

The School Materials Conference was sponsored by the FSU Library School and attended by primary and secondary librarians from Florida schools.

Dean Louis Shores of the FSU Library School spoke about gearing school libraries so gifted children "can go as far as they can."

'Like Some Things'

Crowds The Same In 41 Years—Waring

BY NANCY HANNAFORD
Flambeau Staff Writer

Audiences haven't changed a bit in the forty-one years he's been in show business, says Fred Waring, adding, "They still like the same things".

The famous showman, when asked what these "same things" are, replied, "What we tried to give you tonight."

Musical favorites frankly presented, group versatility, broad comedy, and enthusiastic showmanship were offered to campus audiences Wednesday night in the Men's Gym by Fred Waring and his Pennsylvanians.

HI-FI COSTLY

Large enough to offer "something for everyone" and small enough that the performers' personalities could get across the footlights, the group's "Hi-Fi Holiday" enclosed a responsive audience with a hi fidelity amplifying system which cost from $10,000 to $12,000.

Directing a chorus with one hand, a small orchestra with another, Waring hopped to Joe Marsh's rendition of "Birth of the Blues," mimicked the traditionally humorless maestro in "Caprice Italiano," and twitched in illustrations of "Dry Bones."

He mentioned that he was happy to be performing "here in Gainesville" and had the following sorority comment to make after the "Glory Voices" sang a sacred song:

"The unembarrassed ingenue of sacred and patriotic songs is something we need these days."

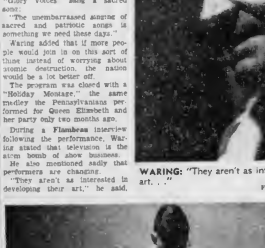
Waring added that if more people would join in on this sort of thing instead of worrying about some destruction, the nation would be a lot better off.

The program was closed with a "Holiday Message," the same medley the Pennsylvanians performed for Queen Elizabeth in her party only two months ago.

During a Flambeau interview following the performance, Waring stated that television is the atom bomb of show business.

He also mentioned sadly that performers are changing.

"They aren't as interested in developing their art," he said, adding that young people going into show business these days expect to sky-rocket to fame like Hollywood stars.



Waring also mourned the fact that performers don't attempt to originate unique styles anymore, being content to copy other entertainers, dating back to Al

Annual Vespers Service Keys Xmas Music

Traditional and contemporary music of the coming holidays will be presented by the Women's Glee Club this Sunday, at the Annual Christmas Vespers at 5 p.m. in Westcott Auditorium.

The Christmas service has been held every year on campus since 1914, according to school records and is regularly given the Sunday before the Christmas holidays.

GRIMM DIRECTOR

Miss Betty Jane Grimm of the music faculty is director of the 100-voice glee club. Sally Huckle is accompanist, Elaine Gay organist, and Willie Copeland harpist.

Dr. W. H. Rogers of the English faculty will give the appropriate scripture readings before each musical selection.

Opening the service will be an organ prelude, "Carol Rhapsody," by Richard Purvis. Dr. Edwin Hartz, the University chaplain will then give an invocation. "O Holy Night" by Adams will be the first music with Harriette Morrill of Miami the contralto soloist.

ENGLISH SPIRIT

"The Ceremony of Carols", a suite written by Benjamin in 1942 with Old English words, will be featured as capturing the simple spirit of early English festivities. Soloists for the number are Christine Bryan, Carole Poppinger, Frances Hashinson and Margaret Yates.

Other selections which will present student soloists are "List the Cherubic Host" by A. R. Coad with Bev-erly Brown and Miss Bryan featured; "Away in a Manger" by R. Vorse with Kay Taylor the soloist, and "Now Thank We all Our God" by Carl F. Mueller and Miss Morrison as soloist.

A special arrangement of "Silent Night" by FSU's Dr. Ervin Cooper will bring the concert to a close. Dr. Hartz will give the benediction.

IS JUD DAID? "Poor Jud is daid," goes the lyric from this sequence of "Oklahoma!" but he (Steve Kleid) looks quite alive as he brandishes a gun for the benefit of Curley (Norman Turner), and the two girls who will play Aunt Eller during the two-night run of the play in Westcott. They are Clare Arment and Nettie Black.

Senate Investigating Idea Of Naming Campus Streets

Streets on the Florida State University campus may no longer be referred to as "the street by the History Building," or "the street that goes in front of the Women's Gym," if Student Senate has its way.

Senate Wednesday voted to investigate the possibility of naming the main arteries on campus in order to aid visitors and new students in locating the many buildings on campus.

Senior Senator Don K. Lewis introduced the resolution proposing that the streets be named, reporting that Dr. Robert M. Strozier, FSU president, and Dr. J. B. Culpepper, executive secretary of the Board of Control, have expressed their approval of the idea.

Senator Lewis yielded the floor to Florida News Editor Jim McIntyre, who referred the senators to several 1954 issues of the Flambeau, which told of a Street Naming Contest sponsored by Gold Key, men's honorary fraternity, and the Flambeau.

McIntyre said that entry blanks were given to the student body in several issues of the Flambeau. Themes for naming the streets were suggested and selected, and finally the eight main thoroughfares on campus were given names. The streets were named but no further action was taken on the matter.

Themes for naming the streets were selected by a poll of student opinion.

The themes included Florida botanical names, former FSU presidents, Florida cities, Seminole chiefs, confederate generals, noted educators, colleges or universities, and former Florida governors. Eight names were picked for the eight individual streets pictured on a map appearing in the Flambeau.

WINNING NAMES

The winning names of the 1954 contest were Orange Drive for the by-way leading from West Jefferson gate to Westcott Circle; Conrads Place for the lane leading from Westcott Circle around the side of the administration building to the stop sign.

Jacksonville Boulevard won for the street cutting straight across campus from the Graduate School past Longmire and out the North gate.

Osceola Place was the name chosen for the by-way starting at the corner of Landis Hall's front lawn, across from Gilchrist, and progressing past Florida Hall, Magnolia and the Women's Gym out to the intersection with Call Street.

The street running to the left of Magnolia Hall, past the tennis courts and out to meet Osceola Place was named Jackson Place. The busy by-way from Gilchrist, Landis corner past the Seminole Club and Cawthon areas out to Call Street was Hutchins Boulevard, after the noted educator.

Harvard Place was the name given the street areas leading in from Hutchins Boulevard around the Journalism Building. Infirmary and South Cawthon.

McCarty Drive was selected for the two drives leading to the right of Gilchrist and the Seminole Club meeting in the rear of the dining hall.

MADE PLANS

Chris Young, chairman of the Street Naming Contest, said at the time, "Pending approval by the Board of Control, I am making plans to paint street names and the names of the honored winners on curbstones. I would like to have the names stenciled in gold or yellow on a background of garnet to coincide with the university's colors."

WFSU Authorized To Boost Power

Florida State University's FM radio station, WFSU-FM, will be able to reach out 35 or 40 miles as the result of authority received this week to increase the power of the station.

The Federal Communications Commission granted the station permission to increase its power, which will enable WFSU-FM to send its daily programs to areas between 35 and 40 miles away, according to Roy Flynn, director of the University Broadcasting Service.

WFSU-FM now operates on 10 watts power but the FCC authorization will allow for a 1,000-watt transmitter, Bill Rundle, engineer, said this, together with antenna design will enable the station to have an effective power of 3,071 watts.

The engineer also stated that a 120-foot tower on top of the Music Building will be part of the new construction to be undertaken as a result of the authorization.

Initial construction work should begin within two weeks, but, however, the station probably will not be able to broadcast with the increased power for about five months.

BULLETIN

The Florida State Board of Control yesterday approved a request by Florida State University officials to rescind the ban against sophomores having cars at school.

The Board said it did not necessarily approve of sophomores having cars, but decided to leave it to the discretion of the institutions as to whether they should be allowed to have them.

One Stage Satellite Rockets Coming, Physics Head Says

One stage rather than multi-stage rockets may be carriers of future earth satellites, Dr. Harvey Hall told the Astronomy Club last night.

Dr. Hall, who became head of the Physics Department December 1, spoke to the regular meeting of the club. His subject was rocket problems of satellites.

Higher energy fuels—eventually nuclear propulsion—would be necessary for one stage rockets, Dr. Hall said.

At present "hundreds of tons" of conventional liquid fuel are used to raise a rocket. The cost of such fuel problems in expense and design. At present, the liquid fuel is used because of military necessity.

NOT STRAIGHT UP

Dr. Hall went on to explain that a satellite, instead of being sent straight up, is shot out with the curvature of the earth. This causes complications, but requires less fuel.

Scientific benefits to come from future satellite flights, Dr. Hall said, are "Better solar and stellar observation, data on the earth and its constituents, and knowledge of the upper atmosphere and rarified gases."

Dr. Hall answered the question, "How high does one have to lift a satellite in order to get it into an orbit?"

HOW HIGH?

"If there were not an atmosphere," he said, "the object could be sent high enough into the air so that it would not strike the highest mountain in passing, given the necessary horizontal speed, and it would be in its orbit.

Two-Night Run Opens At 8:15 P.M.

The cast really has the psychological feeling of Oklahoma!, says Norman Turner, who will star as Curly in the Light Opera Guild's production of Rodgers-Hammerstein's fabulously acclaimed musical comedy.

Incorporating agacy skeleton-type sets, mid-west accents, and original choreography, Oklahoma! will be presented tonight and tomorrow night at 8:15 in Westcott.

NEW DIRECTOR

Richard Collins, who joined the FSU faculty this year as voice instructor and head of the newly-organized Opera Workshop, will direct the production, assisted by Miss Betty Jane Grimm, who will direct the chorus and act as assistant stage manager.

Starring with Turner in the musical comedy that ran for a full solid years on Broadway after its opening in 1943, will be senior Frances Ellinwood, from St. Petersburg.

Nettie Black will play Aunt Ellee the first night, Claire Arment the second.

JUD, ADD, KLEID

Steve Kleid will appear as Jud, Beverly Bryant as Ado Annie, and Eli Ask, who has more professional stage experience than any other member of the cast, will play the jaunty Ali Hakim.

Others in the cast include Fred Stock, Will Parker; Ruth McLester, Gertie, and Martin Lies, Andrew Carnes.

Basing choreography on the original dances of that of Agnes De-Mille, the Theatre Dance Group will perform all the dancing.

The choreography was done by Fran Korae, Charles Robinson, Viola Mock, Katherine Hartley, and Pat Napier.

Miss Nellie Bond Dickerson, Theatre Dance adviser, has supervised the choreography.

24 PIECES

A 24 - piece delegation of the University Symphony, conducting by Robert Bedore, will furnish the musical's orchestration, running the gamut from "Oh, What A Beautiful Morning" to "People Will Say We're In Love."

Turner, to play Curly, turned 20 at Wednesday's dress rehearsal. He has steadily completely straight hair falling in wave after wave.

How this change: "I'll never tell," Turner stated mysteriously.

Trailer Park Improvements Being Made

Several steps have been taken in the direction of community improvement by the University Trailer Park.

The trailer park has had street lights installed, remodeling of a Recreation Hall done, minor repairs on road work, and has completed drafting a constitution.

REC REPAIRS

According to James C. Presley, housing manager of men's residence, the recreation building has been remodeled, repainted, lighted and heated by gas.

The hall is being used as a recreation hall-community house, where residents can meet together as a group and discuss mutual problems.

Also, said Presley, automatic heat and street lights have been installed.

Minor road repair work has been done by the Maintenance Department. They have cleaned out and deepened drainage ditches, and filled holes.

ASPHALT SURFACE

Major repair work is depending on county and state equipment. The department will straighten roads and put in a permanent asphalt surface upon completion of county road repairs.

"The work will be done at the trailer park, as soon as it is humanly possible" said Presley.

A constitution, establishing student government has been drawn up and upon university approval the residents will elect a mayor.

The trailer park was originally on city property, and was moved to its location on West Campus last December.

Last Culture Test Next Wednesday

The General Culture Test required of all juniors and senior transfer students will be given for the last time this semester Wednesday December 18 at 7 p.m. in Opperman Music Hall according to Dr. Kenneth McLaughlin of the University Test Service.

If the test is not taken at this time a penalty fee of $5 will be automatically assessed.

In addition, registration for any subsequent term and graduation will be withheld until this test is taken and the penalty fee is paid.

Excuses will be considered only if presented to the University Test Service in room 210 of the Education Building before the test.

Senate Must Broaden Perspective

The day when the Student Senate showed leadership, spirit and vitality on the campus seems to be past. From all indications the student law-makers have lost their perspective and their direction.

ALWAYS A criticized group in years past, Senate at least showed signs of know-how. It was a rare day in the Longmire chamber that several Senators weren't jumping to their feet shouting a point of order, and the debate was stimulating if not always rational.

But what has happened to the once demonstrative group? Few bills of genuine worth have come out of the Senate this year. Much time has been wasted by Senators who are floundering in the dark from lack of ideas and waya to carry them out.

WE SOMETIMES cringe at some of the motions made, mostly because they seem so insignificant compared with projects that could be accomplished. For instance, some of the things which have been discussed recently include: looking into the possibility of the classrooms being kept a little cleaner, erecting a suggestion box (this was discovered to be already in the Statutes), recommending that barbed wire not be used for fencing, and bring up the matter of constructing additional sidewalks on campus.

TO THEIR credit, the Senators obtained reduced prices at Tallahassee theaters for students and recommended that Sophomores be able to bring cars on campus next semester. The group also launched into an investigation of Morrison's Food Services which is still hanging.

The Senators, with exceptions of course, can see no further than their noses and have few leaders whose example they can follow. The broader, more important student issues have escaped the Senate's imagination.

FOR SEVERAL years the group spent considerable time debating reapportioning itself. To increase student body interest and extend its representation new laws were passed which gave Senate seats to persons from various living areas.

With the growth in numbers, some of the Old Guard members who opposed increased representation, claimed the quality of the group would diminish, and that much "deadwood" would accumulate. This criticism of reapportionment seems to us highly irrational, however, because some of the finest Senators have been elected from these precincts.

WHILE WE cannot agree to that hypothesis, it does not seem that Senate has lost its members who were adept at "politics" and legal procedures and has gained none in return. Not that a knowledge of parlimentary procedure is the only essential qualification needed, but a knowledge of "how-to" is necessary in order to accomplish anything.

Reapportionment should have had a melioristic effect on student government. The increase of representation for two groups on campus, the day students and mature students, should enlarge the realm in which the Senate can work.

IN WHAT realm does the Senate work? It functions in the areas of student services; the function of the Cabinet is the same. Proposals of the two often have overlapped, the difference being that the Cabinet may take direct action on a matter, while the Senate must first make a motion, discuss it, send it to committee, vote, etc.

The Senate should consider extending this realm of action. It should broaden its thinking and tackle projects of student welfare.

TO BE specific, there are several areas in which we suggest Senate could work. First of all, student activity fees are delegated to student government with the authority to disperse these funds to various campus groups. The Senate could study where this vast sum of money might best be used.

Secondly, housing is a vital problem to every group on campus; married students, those living off campus, in dorms or in sororities and fraternities. If any invesigation was warrented it is one in which improvements in housing could be made.

THE STUDENTS themselves are usually good critics of the university curriculum. Another project of utmost importance to the student body would be to suggest improvements in this realm; perhaps in general education requirements or in scheduling, etc.

There are numerous problems Senate could discuss and recommend, although they would not be passing any specific laws. While the Senate would hesitate to bring up the subject, if they want to truly be leaders on the campus, they should face the issue of establishing some sort of communication and understanding in race relations.

LASTLY, THE Senate could also look into the possibility of the infirmary extending its services to denistry and optical cases.

Perhaps all of these suggestions are not possible to accomplish, but the aim is high, as should be the Senate's.

Only when it broadens its perspective can the Senate truly claim to be the student's leadership body.

Singers Concert Good

By DIXON REDDITT

The University Singers under Dr. Wiley Housewright, presented their autumn concert last Tuesday night in Opperman Music Hall.

The concert was remarkable for having not only absolutely fine selections, but also truly musical performances of them. The singers seemed to be thoroughly familiar with the scores and Dr. Housewright's interpretation.

The relationship that a chorus has with its director is more intimate perhaps than that achieved by any other ensemble, that is, voices reflect the insight of a conductor to a degree seldom reached in instrumental groups. Although this reviewer is primarily an instrumentalist, he believes that "there is only one Music, and enlightened sensitivity is its prophet".

We heard nothing Tuesday night except music, beautifully projected, intense almost to a fault.

Intonation was particularly good, with only a few minor instances of deviation. The "Lamentations of Jeremiah" were especially difficult owing to their advanced tonal concept and unusual intervallic movement. Tha singers sang it powerfully and in tune. Bravo.

Dear Miss Editor:

I HEAR tell what some folks didn't take kindly to ole "Mr. Throw" story in that there Smoke Signal thing They say it wuz a sorta one sided wagon.

Well, I shore wantta apologize-like to folks here-abouts, an' explain how the awful mess come up.

LORD KNOWS I didn't mean no harm 'gainst nobody—shucks, I didn't actually write the darn thing nohow. You see, I'm a takin' short hand from this feller Miller what teaches upstairs over that great, big cafeteria place on the campus (now, I ain't never ate there 'cause Ma sends my fodder from the ranch, but I hear other students say them Morrison people is making great money in a big way, from the taste of the chow).

Well, this here Miller guy says I got to go out and practice my short hand (I'm only taking it 'cause Paw is always griping around the ranch that we shore are short-handed, and I thought I had oughta look into the situation), anyhow, I went to this 'Ternity thing to practice my short hand—I didn't get no "bud" but I don't care, I ain't a bloomin' flower anyway—I went down with this other feller, and they talked and I played short hand. I mean I tried to take down what they were a saying.

WELL, ole Miller went crazy when he saw my homework (evidently he aint'nt got over it yet). I only bad time to take what the 'Ternity guy said—'tother feller talked too fast, but you know them good, ole 'Ternity men, they pretty slow They gotta stop an' ponder what word to put out next. Takes 'em "From Here to Fraternity" to get somethin' said—so I shore am sorry, but I could only take the fraternity's side o' the story.

Anyway, I mailed them short hand notes back to the ranch at Smokey Shingles, Florida so Paw could see I wuz getting to be a expert on the short hand situation. Why, I'm getting so good, when I get back to the ranch we gonna be short handed all over the darn place.

MAN, CAN you imagine how surprised I wuz when I opened that there magazine thing and seen my short hand notes a staring me in the face. Them people must be mighty hard up to publish a fella's homework. Gettin' where nothin' ain't private no more.

Then to top it all off, them magazine people said it wuz a "SATIRE."

WHY, THAT weren't no "satire" at all. I ast ole Miller what them "Satires" wuz ... looked it up. It's one of ... "myth" men what the better ... of him is a horse—and the ... ways cuttin' up and ... pretty girls and nymphs ... stuff.

BUT NOW that I seen so... these here Maternity girls ... plainin' bout that story, I ... admit, they seems to be ... folks round here what the ... part of 'em is horse

Well, I shore am sorry ... printed my notes. I hate ... a one-sided story. Paw ... said, "A honest man AL... tells both sides a the story ... as they agree with his course."

So, I'm sorry Indep... folks, but I'd havta ge... in my short hand to get ... side.

Critic Reviews Certificate Recitals

By DALE JENSEN

The first undergraduate Certificate recitals of the year were heard last Monday night in Opperman Music Hall. The performers, Raymond Liebau, piano, and Dixon Redditt, clarinet, are both juniors in the music school, and were each being heard for the first time in formal recital.

MR. LIEBAU opened the program with Beethoven's Sonata Opus 31, No. 3, in a performance that was remarkable for its restraint. It is a difficult thing for a performer to have the courage to let the music sound by itself . . . the inclination is to rush forward, always pushing. Generally such patience and love for the music is not apparent until the performer is fairly mature, and if this holds true in this case, Liebau is a man to be watched.

Another sign of maturity, however, is a mental set which demands that the performer always produce the greatest possible technical accuracy at his command. Liebau's only really obvious slips were in the runs and elaborate turns found throughout the Beethoven. While slight, such errors, in the context of the general excellence of the rest of his playing, were so incongruous as to spoil the total effect.

WE HOPE that his otherwise apparent musicianship asserts itself and overcomes this small defect, for we feel that Liebau has much to offer. As assurance that we hope not in vain, Liebau closed his part of the program with the Opus 119 of Brahms, which includes three lovely Intermezzi and the well-known Rhapsody in E-flat. The audience, small but musicwise showed it obvious pleasure at his fine performance with prolonged applause.

Mr. Redditt's portion of the program included Debussy's Premiere Rhapsodie, the Hindesmith Sonata (1939), and Three Songs for Clarinet and Piano, by one of FSU's outstanding graduates of last year, David Ward-Steinman. Mr. Ward-Steinman, now in Graduate Study at the University of Illinois, wrote these Songs especially for Redditt, and in this reviewer's opinion, produced some of his most successful music to date.

THE PIECES are light but truly delightful to the ear, and display both the instrument and the composer's talent for lovely melody to their best advantage. Mr. Redditt's performance of this work was equally delightful, complementing the music as well as complimenting the composer.

Unfortunately, the performer's technical grasp of the instrument was not up to the other parts of the program. Both the Hindesmith and the Debussy demand fine dynamic control in the extreme upper range of the clarinet, and ... Monday night Mr. ... could not find that co... His attempts to achieve ... high tones produced on... treme sharpness of pitch ... an uncertain sound that ... not but make the listener ... comfortable.

English Prof Sketches Shaw's Life

(Editor's Note: Dr. Stoakes is a professor in the English Department.)

BY PAUL STOAKES

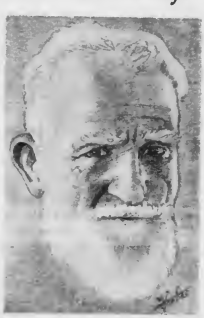
"I am a specialist in immoral and heretical plays. My reputation has been gained by my persistent struggle to force the public to reconsider its morals . . . I write plays with the deliberate object of converting the nation to my opinion. . . ."

THIS IS Bernard Shaw speaking, talking about himself, his favorite subject. And what he's saying—as so often—is the flat truth outrageously and challengingly phrased.

When Shaw died in 1950 he was 94 years old. He had written 54 plays, half again as many as Shakespeare wrote. No other dramatist has ever won so vast an audience during his own lifetime. Shaw's plays have been produced in every country of the world. And if "My Fair Lady," still playing in New York, maintains its current appeal, Shaw's ultimate audience may include all earthlings, most spacemen, and everyone else except a couple of old grouches and a few teenagers cowering in an abscure drive-in on Mars.

IN THE preface to his first play Shaw explained why he didn't believa he'd ever be a successful dramatist: He simply had nothing in common with the average London play-goer. "I had no taste," he wrote, "for what is called popular art, no respect for popular morality, no belief in popular religion, no admiration for popular heroics."

Maybe that's why Shaw wrote so much in forms other than drama. Not everyone realizes that he was a superb critic of both drama and music. His volumes on Ibsen and Wagner alone would make reputations for lesser men. And anyone who has tried to climb through the 500 pages of his 1928 volume, "The Intelligent Woman's Guide to Socialism and Capitalism," will gladly and volubly testify to his impressive grasp of economic issues.



THE STRANGE thing, really, is that the Twentieth Century didn't treat Shaw the way the Fifth Century B. C. treated Socrates. Both men were charged with "making the worse appear the better cause" and corrupting the youth with new-fangled ideas.

Socrates called himself a "gadfly, given to the state by God" to arouse and persuade and reproach. A bearded, knickered gadfly, bestowed upon an indifferent world by the Life Force is clearly what Shaw was.

WELL, THEY killed Socrates 2400 years ago but we let Shaw live. We loaded him with honors too—with every possible honor collective man can give to individual genius. Maybe mankind's judgment — or tolerance — has matured over the centuries.

Or maybe Shaw had something Socrates didn't have. Wit and humor, for example. Shaw once met Mark Twain. Later he said: "Mark Twain and I are in very much the same position. We have to put things in such a way as to make people who would otherwise hang us believe that we are joking."

SHAW'S special gift lay in his ability to phrase a neglected or overlooked truth in a winningly humorous way. In "Caesar and Cleopatra," for example, when Pothinus ponderously expresses amazement that the conqueror of the world had time to busy himself with such trifles as taxes, Caesar affably replies: "My friend, taxes are the chief business of a conqueror of the world."

In a single sentence that somehow startles with its obviousness Shaw has told us more about Caesar than dozens of rhetorical historians. This is no statue phonographically repeating "I came, I saw, I conquered" and "Et tu Brute." This is a flesh-and-blood Caesar, intelligent enough to know that conquering the world is not an end in itself.

"CAESAR AND Cleopatra" was first produced in 1907, fifty years ago. In earlier plays Shaw's characters had been creatures animated and moved by ideas, the creatures rather than the creators of circumstance. But in this play Shaw deals for the first time with a man who is master of his mind, the conceiver of ideas which he manipulates for his own purposes. After Joan of Arc, Caesar is Shaw's greatest character.

And when a man like Shaw, who in his own way was master of his mind and conqueror of his world, comments on a man like Caesar, the rest of us could do a lot worse than listen.

General Ed Texts Often Poorly Chosen

By NANCY HANNAFORD

(Note to the reader: This is the first of two articles dealing with the shorteamings of university textbooks, mainly those used in teaching general education courses. This column will deal with the focus and conteat of texts, the next will concern the use of them.)

A sure indication of the beginning of a new semester can be found in the university's bookstore. Each September and February this establishment swarms with searching students, confused students, students staggering under literary loads, but mainly students complaining.

THE COMPLAINTS generally deal with the prices of or lack of pictures in required textbooks: although these matters might be discouraging at the time, they aren't actually too important.

This is not to say that complaints are not in order comes textbook time. Quite the reverse.

ALTHOUGH THERE are many fina textbooks in use at this university, there are also, especially in the area of general education, textbooks which are poorly chosen from the standpoint of both content and focus.

Members of a university faculty are only human. If they are presented with a seemingly harmless wsy to increase prestige and make money at the same time, they are often not adverse to looking into the matter. And what could be simpler than compiling a general education text in a field in which one has a PhD?

'Flying High' Goes To Tobacco Bowl

"Flying High," Florida State University's circus, will perform during the half time festivities of the Tobacco Bowl game in Quincy this weekend.

Members of the Quincy High School band will form the rings for the circus, with the center ring surrounding the portable single and double trapezes and the Spanish web rigging. The outside rings will surround the ground acts.

While in Quincy, the troup will be guests at a banquet. Performing in this show will be: Sara Austin, Martha Hall, Linda Hansnaw, Jean Hirtz, DeAnn Head, Shirley Kelly, Nancy King, JoAnn McKeithan, Sandy Nolsn, Chris Parmlee.

Ann Wear, Pat Stearns, Wayne Barber, Sam Beamer, Bob Ecklund, Gene Fuller, Jim Gillard, Jim Haywood, Lee Heisinger, Pete Kiefer, Charlie Lloyd and Ronnie Whiteard.

Plans for filming the Pensacola show, December 7, for American Broadcasting Company's television show, "You Asked For It," were rained out.

A repeat performance was staged last Tuesday at the circus lot so the film could be made. Coach Haskins reported that he expected the film to be shown early in January.

Car Missing—Taker Says Thank You

"Where, oh where, has my little car gone?" This was the question in the mind of Miss Marguerite Sellars, library staff member, Wednesday afternoon.

Shortly before library closing time Miss Sellars had requested the garageman to "just leave the keys in the car until I finish work in a few minutes."

She discovered her car missing upon leaving tha library and ealled the police.

They found it parked at the circus lot ten minutes later with the note, "Thank you very much for the use of your car."

The temperature in Tallahassee Wednesday at 5 p. m. was 26 degrees.

Student Directories To Be Out Monday

Student directories definitely will be on sale Monday, Dr Reid Montgomery, advisor to student publications, said yesterday.

The directories will be available at the University Bookstore and at Bill'a Bookstore. They will also be sold in the dormitories, fraternities, and sororities by members of the Inter-Faith Council.

Montgomery felt the Monday date would be early enough for students who want the directory for Christmas card purposes This year'a directory will include students' home town addresses as well as their campus addresses.

The directory is now in the process of being printed at Dixie Printing Company.

Only The Greatest

About 10 o'clock Wednesday night I stood up very slowly in my seat at Florida's gymnasium, and looked at the mass of spectators that swarmed onto the basketball court.

Players were shaking hands, fans were excoriating members of both teams, while others just made for the exits.

I glanced up at the clock and saw that 71-70 final score and muttered something under my breath.

I've been watching basketball games for a long time, watched great rivalries involving some of the best cage quintets this country has produced.

But that game was only the greatest I've ever seen.

If ever a team deserved to win it was the Seminoles, but it comes to beating the Gators, Lady Luck turns her back on Florida State.

When the game ended I could hardly talk, my throat was sore from yelling throughout the game, and it has to be an extraordinary contest for me to show any emotion.

THOSE FANS

However, my comments could scarcely be heard over the roar of about 5,000 screaming fanatical Florida supporters who made the roof down every time the Gators got their hands on the ball.

And as they did last year, practically every time an FSU player went to the free throw line he was greeted by shouts from the stands in hopes that he would miss the shot.

Naturally most of us would call that poor sportsmanship, but it couldn't bother them. A comment was made that it doesn't belong in good basketball cities.

Whether it does or not, it proves effective in certain cases.

BOBS AGAIN

Bob Hobbs, a senior (at last) guard, cool as a cucumber, was pacing in free throws which were good enough to keep the Gators three points behind in the closing minutes.

Last year it was this same guy that uncorked a half court shot which seemed to have eyes and found its way through the hoop.

There was a small contingent of Seminoles followers that made the trip to Gainesville, and the fortunate that did saw a great game.

Whether a large group of students could have helped the FSU win is a very debatable question, but it couldn't have hurt.

When football teams play a road game, many schools organize special buses to transport some of the student body to the place of the game, so the team will know they're not alone.

But someone here missed the bus.

The distance between Tallahassee and Gainesville seems to be a great a distance for the staunch supporters of Seminole football to even think about getting up such a trip.

In case anyone wants to see how students support their team they missed a visit to Gainesville.

In newspapers across the nation, people tuned to the sports pages yesterday, and in reading the basketball scores of college games saw: Florida 71, Florida State 70.

I thought might cross their minds that it sounded like a good game.

They'll never know what they missed.

DECK THE HALLS

Holidays grow short, the nights grow long, the north wind blows low, and a light frost appears on the knees of coeds.

Christmas is in season, and once more our keen young minds turn to the vexing problem of Christmas gifts.

Let us examine first the most vexing of all gift problems: What to buy for the person who has everything? Well sir, when you encounter this dilemma, the best thing to do is secure it by the horns. Ask yourself this question: Does he really have everything? Does he, for example, have a Bohemoth? A Mach number? A harrow nut? An I-beam? An ashook? A U-bolt? A T-square? A Primus stove?

There is, incidentally, quite an interesting little story about how Primus came to invent the stove. Before Primus's invention, cooking was rather a hazardous occupation. People just built fires any old place—the floor, the closet, the centerfire—and often as not the whole house would go up in flames along with the dinner. Primus, a goose herder of Frankfurt-am-Main, kept thinking there must be a more efficient way to cook. Finally, in a flash of inspiration, it came to him: Why not build a device to contain the fire and keep it from spreading?

His mistake was to build one it out of paper...

Well sir, he built precisely such a device and named it after his beloved wife Stove. Primus's first Stove, it must be confessed, was less than a triumph; his mistake was in building it out of paper. The next Stove, built of wood, was equally better. Not until he made one out of metal would the Stove really be called a success.

But even then the Stove was not entirely satisfactory. The trouble was that the Stove filled up with ashes and became useless after a few weeks. It remained for Primus's son Frederick to conquer that problem. He invented a mechanism to remove ashes from the bottom of the Stove and was thenceforth known to posterity as Frederick the Ash.

But I digress. We were discussing Christmas gifts. This year, as every year, a popular gift is the smoking jacket. And what do the smoking jackets smoke? Why, Marlboro, of course—every man jacket of them. And why wouldn't they smoke Marlboros? Why wouldn't anybody with a taste lout in his head? You get such a lot to like in a Marlboro—filter . . . flavor . . . flip-top box.

Here is no filter to hollow the cheeks and hug the eyeballs; here is a filter that draws nice and easy. Here is no flavor to pale and pall; here is a flavor ever fresh, ever joyful. Here is no flimsy pack to crumble and shred its precious cargo; here is a sturdy box that keeps each cigarette plump and pristine.

Speaking of smoking, the year's most unusual gift item is a head-new cigarette lighter that never needs refilling. You are scoffing. You are saying you have heard such claims before. But it's true, I promise you. This new lighter never, never needs refilling! The fuel supply lasts forever. Of course, there are certain disadvantages. For one thing, the lighter is rather bulky—170 feet long and three stories high.

But look on the bright side: As the fuel runs out, you can rent rooms in it.

Good to give, good to receive, at Christmas or any other time is certain of filter-tip Marlboros, whose makers take pleasure in bringing you this column throughout the school year.

Championship playoffs in the Green Division of basketball are now in the process of being played. Six teams qualified in the finals and playoffs began Monday night with the Championship game scheduled to be played Monday night, December 16.

Those teams qualifying were: ATO, PDT, DTD, KA, SN, and SAE. This tournament will be a double elimination round-robin, with each team having two chances to win.

In the first night of play, PDT took DTD and SN defeated KA. On Tuesday night, PDT edged ATO 37-35 and SAE tumbled SN for their first defeat in 1957 basketball competition, 45-38.

At this time a playoff schedule has not been decided for the Dorm-Independent Division of Basketball.

Four teams qualified for the playoffs in this division. They are with their season records: Newman Club 10-1, Senior Hall 9-2, Veterans 8-3, and Penthouse Gang 8-3.

In Dorm-Independents three teams have dropped out leaving only nine teams to compete. Feds, Lutherans, and Rebels have all cancelled their schedules, thus awarding forfeits to all the teams they were scheduled to play.

Tuesday found CLO barely nudging Sentor Hall 13-12. Newman Club handed AFROTC their second loss 14-12 and BSU defeated Magnolia Hall 20-13. Forfeits for the day gave Veterans a win over the Rebels, Playboys over the Feds, and Penthouse Gang over the Lutherans.

On Wednesday DTD took a heartbreaker from SPE on the merit of the first down ruling. The score ended 20-20, but DTD had nine first downs to SPE's eight.

Other action for the day saw TC nudge TEP 20-18, SN beat KS 14-6, SC won over PIGT 24-19, and PDT defeated PKP 26-12.

Baby Cagers Bow

After playing a tight first half the Florida State freshman cagers faltered, and were outrun by the University of Florida fresh 84-69 Wednesday night in Gainesville.

The baby Seminoles were behind only 28-25 at the half, but could not contain Florida's fast breaking attack led by Bob Shivers.

Charley Tinsley, the Tribe's 6-5 forward from Miami, scored 18 for the night. Also scoring 13 points for FSU was Bill Arthur, a 6-4 center from Melborne.

'Proud Of Team' After Loss-Kennedy

BY BEN BALSER
Asst Sports Editor

Even though the Florida State basketball team had just lost a game, Seminole coach Bud Kennedy and the FSU fans in Gainesville couldn't have been any prouder of the showing the Tribe had just made.

"It was a tough one to lose, but I am very proud of the game our men played," said Coach Kennedy as he stood in the almost empty gym after the game.

"Any time a team gets beat by one point away from home, you

Swim Clash Set Tonight

The Florida State University swimming team makes its initial home appearance tonight as the Golds will be out to avenge the 42½-36½ dunking the Garnets dealt them in last year's intra-squad meet.

The meet is scheduled to start at 7:30 in the Women's Gym.

Leading the Golds will be veterans Kra Abbott, Joel Jacobs, Glen Thaicher, Bob Weber and freshmen Bucky Hiles and Cliff Mendoza.

Heading the Garnets roster will be freestyle stars Paul Hammond and "Beaver" Ray, backstrokers Henry Glancy and Paul Stoffan-ger and divers Curtis Genders and Darwin Justice.

Abbott was the star of last year's match as he upset the Gold's Joel Jacobs in the 200 yd. breaststroke in the next to last event to pull the meet out of the fire for the Garnets who were trailing most of the way.

Commenting on the outcome, Coach "Tim" Gilfillin was noncommittal, "The teams are pretty evenly divided as far as I can see," he said, "And either team has a chance to win."

Gold team member Jim Wentworth was more vociferous, however, stating, "The cards are stacked in favor of the Garnets, but," he said, "we may surprise them."

The teams and events are:
GOLD 50 & 100 Freestyle—Wilts, Shivers, Davis, Pierce, Bryant, Thatcher, Brinkley, Abbott and Jacobs.
200 & 400 Freestyle—Hiles, Butler, 200 Breaststroke—Jacobs, Alexander, 200 Butterfly—Hiles, Pierce, Wentworth, Ackerman.
100 & 200 Backstroke—Abbott, Wentworth, Dining—Weber, Romero.
GARNET 50 & 100 Freestyle—Stroup, Hammond, Garvis.
200 & 400 Freestyle—Bowman, Mets.
200 Breaststroke—Cole, Schenk.

Hoopsters Meet Furman; Drop Heartbreaker To UF

By MIKE PLATTIS

After losing to Tennessee and dropping a heartbreaker to Florida, 71-70 Wednesday evening, FSU cagers carry a 2-2 record to Greenville, N. C. where they clash with the winless Paladins of Furman tomorrow evening.

Furman will face FSU with Dick Wright, their 5-11 guard, who is one of the top players in the Southern Conference this year, though weakened with an incurable arthritic disease that threatens his basketball career.

Teaming with Wright are Steve Bersey 6-0, Steve Ross 6-0, Bryan Phoon 6-3, and Tom Conrad at 6-6.

Ross averaged 10.1 last year and Phoon, who is a sophomore, tallied 14 per game for the frosh.

With a background of some 5,000 screaming partisan fans, Joe Hobbs again wrote fists to a tremendous Seminole effort Wednesday night.

The Gator ace dropped six consecutive free throws in the last 2:30 of the struggle to give Florida the slim one point final margin in a game which the score was tied or changed hands no fewer than eighteen times.

Jim Litsky, with his slashing drives, provided Florida State to an early 11-4 lead which was the greatest point gap in the game.

The South Gator trio of Hobbs, Charlie Pike, and Dick Hoban cupped away at the Seminoles lead until Pike and Florida ahead 17-16 midway through the first half.

LEAD CHANGES

The lead changed hands five more times before the half ended as Hugh Durham fed Litsky two baskets, and for a three point play to keep Tribe fortunes alive.

Burt Deckel, Larry Strom and Durham matched points towards the closing minutes with Durham hitting to give FSU a narrow 37-35 advantage.

Litsky picked up his 18th point seconds after the second half started to spark a Seminole drive that put them ahead by seven points with seven minutes to go.

Hobbs, playing the last nine minutes with four fouls, scored a jump, but Deckel made a three point play and Durham hit a set shot to give the Seminoles a short lived, 62-55 lead.

Here Durham pulled a muscle in the arch if his left foot and played all but the last minute visibly hurt. Coach Bud Kennedy said after the game that his valuable scorer may not make the road trip this weekend.

Litsky paced Seminole scorers with 27 points Durham followed with 16 and Deckel with 15.

Education's 'Cafeteria System' On The Way Out — Strozier

"The 'cafeteria system' in education, where students choose their courses, is likely to be on its way out, according to Florida State University President Robert M. Strozier.

Dr. Strozier said the spotlight was on the whole educational system as a result of Russia's sputnik and muttnik, and our own failure last week with our missile as he spoke Wednesday night at a Tallahassee Rotary banquet honoring Leon high school football players.

"Perhaps those who follow you will be studying five years of mathematics, six years of a foreign language, maybe Russian, four years each of chemistry and physics, in addition to all the history, English and social studies now in the curriculum," he said in addressing the football players.

The FSU head said we are a little uneasy now about all the things we have been saying about Russia the last 10 years, proving that their system cannot work, that their people are all miserably unhappy and ready to revolt against the government if given the proper opportunity.

He pointed out how our political leaders are "rushing him grist with statements about the superiority of their educational system," and how schools and colleges are "the whipping boy" of all the furor.

"I hope we keep our heads even if we have a few failures with our sputniks, and that we keep our eyes high in the knowledge that democracy is the best of all possible political systems," he said.

He added that it is good to take a searching view of our elementary, high school and college programs because we need to be re-examining them all the time and striving for the best possible results.

Baking Club Has Christmas Supper

William Schroeder of Memphis, director of production control for Humko Co., was the speaker at a Christmas spaghetti supper of the Baking Science Club at Florida State University Tuesday night.

Paul Wright of Decatur, Alabama is president of the club. Among guests at the dinner meeting at Lake Bradford reservation were several students in the School of Home Economics.

VESPERS SERVICE. Featured in the Women's Glee Club's 34th annual Christmas Vespers service this Sunday in Westcott will be (l-r): Frances Hankinson, Beverly Brown, Carol Poppenger, Margaret Yeats, Kay Taylor, and Harriette Morrill. Pianist is Christine Bryan.

Bach Singers To Present Xmas Oratorio

The Florida State University Bach Singer will present selections from Bach's Christmas Oratorio this Sunday at 7:30 p.m. at the First Presbyterian Church of Tallahassee.

Their performance will be part of the traditional White Gift Service sponsored by Westminster Fellowship. The public is invited to the service.

This will be the third public performance of the student group, directed by Karl Mohr of Tallahassee. The organization is new on campus this year.

It consists of 16 students dedicated to performing the sacred works of Bach. They get together regularly on campus for rehearsal and so play and sing for the pleasure of it.

Mohr said the Oratorio includes "some of the most lovely and tender Christmas music ever written," and that the group is excited about performing it.

Pat Johnson of Tallahassee is the instrumental director. Playing in the instrumental ensemble are Dorsey Stuart, oboe; Dixon Reddick, clarinet; Ellen Thaffe, violin; and Gordon Wilson, organ.

Soloists are Beverly Brown, soprano; Chris Bryan, alto; Martin Lee, tenor; and Steve Kleid, bass.

POST OFFICE RUSH UNLIKELY, SAYS MAY

People seem to be responding to the Post Office Department's plea to mail Christmas cards and packages early this year, according to Mr. W. H. May, manager of the FSU Post office.

Thousands of cards and presents have already been mailed. Early mailing assures delivery by Christmas and helps avoid the last minute rush, May said.

It is already too late to send gifts overseas by regular mail and have them arrive in time. Air mail is the only alternative and here there is a restriction because anything over two pounds will not be sent by air mail.

May also advised students to send their cards with three-cent stamps instead of two-cent ones as in the past. He further explained that it would only cost a little more to do this and the letters would receive more and better attention and would reach their destination sooner.

If possible, Mr. May recommends that packages which should get special care or fast and safe delivery be sent special delivery.

As an example of how the Christmas influx of gifts and cards has already begun, the manager refers students to the recent issue of the Saturday Evening Post where a large color spread of a Chicago post office is shown.

Last 1957 Coffee Hour Slated; Irish Humorist Is Speaker

A visiting Irish humorist, poet, novelist and biographer, Sir Shane Leslie, will be the English Coffee Hour speaker this afternoon at the Westminster House.

The public is invited to hear the lecture, scheduled for 4 p.m., and sponsored by the FSU English Department. Dr. W. H. Rogers, program chairman, said this will be the last in the series this year, but he has excellent features lined up for January.

HISTORICAL RESEARCH

Sir Shane's diversified literary interests have resulted in the production of several works dealing with famous historical mysteries such as "Man in the Iron Mask."

He has also published four volumes of verse, five novels and biographies of Jonathan Swift, Cardinals Manning and Gusquet, Tolstoy and King George IV. King George VI was so impressed by the Irish author's enthusiasm for research that he opened the archives of Windsor to him.

The visitor claims that he is American as well as Irish because his mother was the former Miss Leonie Jerome, one of the famous American Jerome sisters, another of whom married Sir Winston Churchill.

FLORIDA LECTURES

Although Sir Shane has lectured in this country before, this is his first visit to Florida. He has several speaking engagements in Jacksonville, and will also lecture at the University of Florida and the Florida Historical Society at St. Augustine.

Aside from his literary work,

Morocco 'Prettier Than Pictures'

"Morocco is like the pictures you've seen, only prettier" said Becky Hornsby, a 1956 graduate from Port Lyautey High School in Morocco, North Africa.

Becky's father, a chief petty officer in the Navy, was transferred to Morocco in 1955 from Naples. Becky, he parents and three younger brothers resided there two years, until her father was transferred to Washington.

The youth of the family will probably join him soon, but Becky is undecided about leaving FSU.

She likes FSU and plans to major in Social Welfare here. Of this she said, "I want to work in Social Welfare because I have seen how the common people live and how important they are to a country. In order to keep a country happy, the common people must be happy."

"There were three people in my graduating class," she said, then added apologetically, "but the other classes were much larger—13 or 14."

She cheered the basketball team on to victory and enjoyed such activities as horseback riding, dances, and golfing, using the many facilities on the base.

Becky feels that the school "was better than school back home, because the classes were so small we got individual attention."

After she graduated Becky worked for a year in the Navy personnel office. Here she acquired many close French friends.

"The people were poor, but outwardly friendly," she said. This seems to apply only in the daylight hours, for after sunset foreigners were forbidden to enter the Medina, or native towns.

Most of the women still wear long robes and veils, and some of the men too wear the robes.

Because Islam, the prominent religion, still condones plural marriages, men are allowed up to four wives, she said.

"The situation between the French and Moroccans is similar to that of the whites and negroes in the States," Becky commented.

She concluded, "I gained much from my experiences with the Moroccan people and their country and I hope to go back there some day."

Traffic Committee Urges Safe Trips

With Christmas holidays just one week away, the Student-Faculty Traffic Committee is urging students to make theirs a safe and sane trip home.

A committee composed of Marion Hair, Ken Bowes, and Pat Finlay is promoting a holiday safety campaign, which is hoped will make students more conscious of rules of the road.

Miss Finlay said, "Although no FSU students were involved in any major accidents during Thanksgiving holidays, want to eliminate even minor ones.' These minor accidents, she pointed out, damage property and cause delay.

Some rules that students are asked to remember are:

Drive carefully and not too fast. Florida highway speed limits are 65 m.p.h. during the day and 55 at night. It is extremely important to observe lower speed limits in cities, towns, and other congested areas.

Don't drive when tired or sleepy. A short stop for coffee or a cap is worth the "time lost."

The committee will distribute to students pamphlets on safety from the Florida State Highway Patrol.

The Key To 'Good Taste': Grooming, Poise, Clothes

MARGARET McLEAN

What is good taste and what makes it tick?

Taste is a highly personalized matter to be solved individually, relative to specific needs of said individual. There are a few rather fundamental rules of thumb to be considered, but the finale is a matter of choice. Taste runs all the way from chic to atrocious and there's plenty of room for all of us.

GOOD GROOMING is step one in this game and need more be said. The French have a marvelous word for it—soinee—meaning something cool. Even Clair Mc Cardel can't make some thing lovely and gorgeous out of a clod. It even pays to be a fiend on the subject of grooming. It can mean the difference in being merely female or being a woman.

POISE fits in here nicely. This is an air to be assumed that spells smooth without effort. It has to be natural, but one can learn to curb the appetite for biting fingernails.

One can never completely change, but annoying habits and gestures can be controlled. Poise is worn like a garment that you never take off—it is warmth, graciousness, and charm — your version.

Now for what the well groomed, poised personality wears. Did you know clothes have personalities too? Oh yes! The trick is to match yours to theirs. The most successful solution is to dress in character—your character. A female athlete looks corny swaddled in ruffles. Taste in clothes has to be very personalized, and this doesn't mean monogrammed on the pocket.

CLOTHES are not worn as individual items holding their own. But no! The desired effect is one of unity or organization. It doesn't all have to be the same color or fabric to achieve unity, either. The separate components are compatible, but not necessarily matched.

Variety is welcomed, if not cherished. Maybe one really special touch pulls you right out of the multitude. Being in style certainly does not mean looking just like everybody else.

GOOD TASTE is subtle. Subtle doesn't mean inhibited or conservative in this case. It means evasive. You can never put your finger on it; you're aware it's there, that's all. The unpredictable aspect is the most exciting part.

Functional is another key word. Garments and accessories are bought to live together in peace. Mixing and matching the old and the new stretches a limited wardrobe unbelievably.

Where the garment will be worn is important. Is it appropriate for the occasion? Clothes should serve a purpose, fill a specific need, and lend themselves to effortless wear. If the dress is too short-waisted, it isn't functional.

Taste in clothes is a wonderful outlet for self-expression, and it can be done very handsomely on a shoe-string budget. Shop wisely, avoid silly fads, and use your head.

Traditional Carols Chimes Suggestion

Student Senate Wednesday debated the proper Christmas music to be played over the Westcott chimes next week.

Some senators proposed that the traditional Yuletide carols be chimed, while others favored listening to "Rudolph the Red Nosed Reindeer."

One senator suggested playing Elvis Presley's "White Christmas."

Wesley Players To Present 'A By-Line For Saint Luke'

By ANNETTE McINTOSH

Fitting in with the Christmas spirit, a modern play, Ronald Lorenzen's "A By-Line for St. Luke," will be presented at the Wesley Foundation on Sunday at 7 p.m. and on Wednesday at 7:30 p.m.

This drama illustrates what happens when a successful young reporter for the "Westchester Record Tribune," just for kicks writes a contemporary Nativity story, as though it all happened today.

Reggie Ivory, who has appeared in several speech productions, has the male lead as Luke Cameron, an ambitious young reporter. Sandra Reese, a veteran in Wesley Players productions, has the female lead as Carol Prescott, an attractive feature writer and Luke's fiancee.

Joan Moore plays Louisa Hargrave, the publisher of the paper and an embittered middle-aged widow. Byron Nichols appears as Joe Bannon, the kindly and efficient editor of the paper.

Mary Emma Adams has the role of Myrtal Shanks, a hard and bitter reporter. Walter Saric represents Clive Duncan, would-be friend of Myrtle and an obituary writer. Betsy Coleman is Hettie, a vivacious but affectionate copy-girl.

'Work Laws' Biggest Fraud, Union Speaker Tells Debaters

The so-called "Right To Work" laws are the biggest examples of fraud in the naming of legislative acts ever perpetrated on the public, William E. Allen, Secretary of the Florida Federation of Labor said this week.

Speaking to the members of the varsity debate squad in Room 222 History, Allen gave the viewpoint of labor on the controversial bills, which are the subject of this year's inter-collegiate debate topic.

NUMBER ONE

"The 'Right To Work' laws have been number one on the legislative agenda of the Florida Federation for several years," Allen said, "but so far we have felt it wise to use restraint, since the law has no enabling clause and is virtually useless.

"It has been used mostly as a threat," Allen said, "and is actually a 'dead-letter' law."

The state "Right-To Work" laws provide that a person may work on a given job whether or not he is a member of the union that is working on the job. It basically outlaws both the closed and union shops.

Allen pointed out that the states with the laws have poorer economies in general than those states which do not have them.

AT DISADVANTAGE

The only thing they have done in Florida is put the employers at a disadvantage, since they are afraid of collective bargaining, fearing that they will run afoul of the law by making any concessions to labor."

"We don't find the individual employers too much in favor of them," Allen said. "The agitation for them actually comes from groups such as the National Association of Manufacturers and the Chamber of Commerce."

UNION SECURITY

"The laws actually prohibit any type of union security on a job," Allen went on. "If you think that they will give you any security when you are getting fired, you're mistaken."

"Union security is necessary," he said, "for workers who receive the benefits of collective bargaining and other things gained by union activity should help foot the bill for the union's efforts on their behalf."

Allen closed the session with the remark that "without union security, unions can be completely undermined by the employer."

FSU Woman Is Chosen Outstanding Foreign Student

Have you seen Susie in her sari, a familiar sight around the Florida State University campus. Suste, whose real name is Sushila K. Rajagopalan, is from Bombay, India.

She is one of two young women chosen by A'Iruna International (an international women's organization) as the most outstanding foreign students in the U. S. in both scholastic achievements and extra-curricular activities.

After receiving her Bachelor of Law, a diploma in social welfare, and Master of political science (the former degree offered at the University of Bombay), Miss Rajagopalan came to the United States to beco work on her Ph.D in political science at the University of Missouri. She remained there for one year and is now continuing her studies at Florida State University.

BACK TO INDIA

As soon as she receives her degree, Susie plans to return to India and work with UNESCO, to the Department of International Affairs. Her dream is to be a diplomat representing India in the United Nations.

But Susie isn't "all books." She takes an active interest in campus affairs. At the University of Missouri she was secretary of the International Cultural Association, member of the Cosmopolitan Club, and served on the student government.

She was the most popular foreign student on the campus and was the Phi Beta Theta award as the most deserving student.

ACTIVE AT BOMBAY

Before she came to the states she was active in debating, dramatics and gymkhana sports at the University of Bombay.

Comparing the American coed to the Indian, who enjoy games such as badminton and table tennis, Susie commented "The American girls are more interested in the game of love."

Susie dresses in true Indian fashion and adheres strictly to the customs of her country, but is very interested in understanding other's ways of life.

"Knowing about American life as an exotic part of every foreign student's education," she explained naturally. "The love in a student needs to learn the intellectuals as well as fellow students to help them have a clear concept of the typical American way of life."

She spent the summer with an American family in Independence, Missouri and feels that this opportunity should be extended to more foreign students.

FRIENDLY GUYS

When asked what impressed her most about the United States, she immediately replied, "The friendliness of the Americans!" Then, with a twinkle in her eye, she added, "The students at FSU are very friendly — the boys are friendlier than the girls."

Coming from India to the U. S. Susie was prepared to face Americans as people extremely different from herself and her countrymen. "But," she said, "the most shocking thing to me was not the differences but the similarities between people from all over the world."

Though customs and traditions vary greatly, she finds that, upon visiting them in their homes, one sees qualities common to all.

Board Authorizes Increase In Flambeau Circulation

The Florida Flambeau has received authorization from the Board of Publications to increase its circulation by 500 copies and to increase its local advertising rates ten cents per column inch.

The Board decided to authorize the increase in circulation and advertising rates at its December meeting last Tuesday.

In his discussion on this proposed increase, the Board requested Don Talmon, Flambeau business manager, to submit a statement of expenses and profit, if such a proposal was authorized.

The present circulation of Flambeau is 4,500 copies per issue and the advertising rates fluctuate between 70 and 85 cents per column inch.

This new proposal authorizes he Flambeau to print 5,000 copies per issue and raise its local advertising rates to a fluctuating rate of 80 to 95 cents per column inch.

Flambeau Editor Charlet Pollevieri said about the matter, "While I consider an increase in circulation desirous when necessary, I am not absolutely sure that an increase at this time is entirely advantageous.

At the beginning of the semester, Flambeau circulation was increased from 4,000 copies to 4,500 copies. Before raising the circulation another 500 copies, the Flambeau will investigate the necessity of the Board's proposal and authorization.

Other business presented to the Board was that of electing an editor for the 1958-59 issue of Pow Wow. The Board decided that this would be done at the January 14 meeting of the Board.

Application for this editorship are now being accepted by Dr. Reid Montgomery, faculty advisor of the Board of Student Publications, or Ruth Fritchie, chairman of the Board of Student Publications.

The Pow Wow is the student handbook, published each year by an all student staff and is issued at the beginning of the fall semester each year. The editor of Pow Wow receives a salary of $50 per issue.

Bob Simmons, managing editor of Smoke Signals, promises the magazine be increased circulation, but the Board do take any action on the proposal.

As a final item of business Board discussed the problem too many people taking more student publications without right to obtain copies of publications.

This discussion was aimed the staff and faculty in particular but no action was taken on item of business.

Foreign Students Return Home

Seminole's Sleigh Bells To Be Heard Everywhere

By MARCY SEITZ

This Christmas the sound of Seminole sleigh bells will be heard as far south as Peru, as far north as New York and Canada, and as far west as California.

With the holidays almost here, Florida State's foreign students are busy packing suitcases for home or other points of interest.

Returning to Cuba for the first time since school opened this year will be Juniors Felix Ribera and Edgar Heimer. Also on their way to Cuba will be Sophomore Joyce Gomez.

Senorita Pilo, but not for her home in the Dominican Republic will be Freshman Elena Sazalo-Bonet, social chairman of the International Students Club. Miss Sazalo-Bonet plans to spend her Christmas in New York City with friends of her family. Last Christmas was also spent in New York and "there were so many faces that I want to go and see that I missed."

HOME TO MEXICO

Roberto Graciela and Inez Ramsey, however, are planning a wedding southward and homeward to Mexico. Neither of this has been "with the family" after last.

Also planning on Mexico for the holidays is Pedro Zuloaga Zuloaga is a sophomore from Peru not a not going home for Christmas.

Fellow countryman Fernando Davila will be found, however, at home in Peru during the festive season.

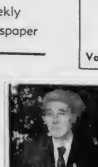
Kari Norbech, a graduate student from Norway, will spend her holidays much like most FSU students. Miss Norbech will be staying in Ft. Meade, Florida with American Sue Shields and attended school in Norway last year.

NEW YORK BOUND

On their way to New York will be roommates Dedis Hidalgo and Clarissa Acuna. These two students are orginally from the Philippines, but will be unable to go home for Christmas.

Heading westward to California, Mr. and Mrs. Enrico Clementi from Italy are leaving FSU for the University of California at Berkley. Mr. Clementi will do research work there, but plans to make it a leisurely trip, sightseeing along the way.

Many of the foreign students will be staying in Tallahassee to do research and academic work. Among those are students from India, Egypt and Thailand.



RETREAT

For those students there will be International Student Retreat held at Stetson University. Planned for December 2-4 The retreat is sponsored by the Department of Student Work in the First Baptist Convention.

The purpose of the retreat is to give the international students an opportunity to participate in discussion groups on religion and student problems.

Approximately 20 foreign students will be attending from FSU. The retreat will be expense free to these students. The speakers will be Dr. Frank Stagg and Dr. Carl Bahner.

A Christmas party for the International students Club to be held on December 20th at 8 p.m. in Longmire Reverend Harcourt Waller of the Episcopal Church will be the speaker.

IRISH HUMORIST, Sir Shane Leslie, dances an Irish jig in front of the Westminster House, prior to the English Coffee Hour Friday.

All Religions Join In Christmas Fete

Buddhists, Hindus and Moslems as well as Christians at Florida State University join together for the traditional largest Christmas party on campus just before the holidays.

It is the annual party given by the International Student Club which has a membership of 120 students representing 20 countries. Members of the faculty and staff and student friends of the members are among the special guests.

The party is held in the main lounges of the student-alumni building where a giant, lighted Christmas tree is the center of festivities. Wednesday night is the time this year.

NATIVE READINGS

"Peace on Earth, Good Will to Men" is the theme of the party. Students from many different lands giving scripture readings on the birth of the Christ child in their native tongues.

Dinner club members tell how Christmas is celebrated in their home countries, or perhaps describe some corresponding religious festival of their countries

A student from India tells of the Festival of Lights held in the fall each year at home on a variable date, dependent on the moon.

Seven or eight of the foreign students customarily join in singing "Silent Night, Holy Night" in their own languages because it seems to be the Christmas song best known and loved among them.

There are always dance and musical features, such as a group from the Philippines performing a dance with bamboo poles called "Tinikling" after a bird which flutters among the bamboos. A Japanese woman who has taught dancing in Kagoshima is being featured in a solo dance and a student from Cuba will play his special native Afrinued instrumental.

XMAS TALKS

D. R K Murty of India, doctoral student chemistry and president of the club, and the Rev. Harcourt Waller, Episcopal minister, will conclude giving the special Christmas talks this year.

Many of the foreign students wear native dress to the party, making for a colorful scene as all join hands and dance around the Christmas tree as a climax to the affair.

Many of the graduate foreign students elect to remain on the somewhat deserted campus during the holidays.

McCann To Present 1st Doctoral Recital

Lawrence McCann, pianist, will appear in the first of his series of doctoral recitals this evening in Opperman Music Hall at 8:15.

McCann received his bachelor and masters degrees at Michigan State University while pursuing work in Dr. Erich Wolff.

His program is a chronological one starting with Bach's C minor Fantasy and ending with Stravinsky's Danse Ruse. The classical period is represented by Mozart's Sonata in B flat major (K 333) and Beethoven's Sonata in D major, Op. 109.

Following intermission will be Chopin's F minor Fantasy and Barlok's Three Burlesques.

McCann is from the studio of Edward Kilenyi.

Additional Study Due On Car Ban

No decision has been made by the administration concerning extending the Freshman ban on cars to sophomores next semester.

Dr. James Carr, director of placement and student aid, said yesterday the administration intends to investigate the situation further before reaching a decision.

The Board of Control in a meeting Thursday cancelled its declaration made this summer stating Florida State University sophomores should not be allowed to bring cars on campus. The request for rescission the order was made at the meeting by Vice President A. B. Martin.

The Board said it did not necessarily approve of sophomores having cars, but decided to leave it to the discretion of the institutions as to whether they should be allowed to have them.

This month President Robert Strozier has received recommendations from both the Student Faculty Traffic committee, Student Body President Arnold Greenfield, and the Student Senate that the administration prohibit the ban extending to the Sophomore Class.

Strozier said however that the public may obtain tickets for $3.50 beginning January 13.

STARRY CAST

Featuring a star-studded cast, the production is a five-act comedy condensed from five plays by Shaw, which composed the "Methuselah Cycle" produced on Broadway in 1922

In addition to the three stars, the cast includes Valerie Bettis, Mr. Moss, and Roger Evan Boxx.

Holiday Spirit Invades FSU

Christmas spirit has invaded many dormotories, fraternities and sororities and the administrative offices on campus.

Holiday wreaths, bells, mistletoe, candy canes and bows adorn the doors and windows of almost every dormitory or house. Some, such as Jennie Murphree, have a lighted tree at the door.

Several of Landa' windows have been painted to resemble stained glass and Senior Hall is decorated with large white snowflakes.

Many offices in Westcott have been decorated with pine boughs, holly and small Christmas trees. Door decorations are everywhere in great variety.

The Delta Delta Delta front door has been transformed into a sheet of music complete with notes. A white-smocked choir boy before stained glass window decorates the Pi Beta Phi house.

Many in the women's dormitories have decorated their respective room doors using various themes. The manger scene, Santa Claus, wreaths, bells and greetings are among those most prevalent.

OPENS IN ORLANDO

The presentation here will be part of a forty-two city tour beginning January 6 in Orlando. The cast will leave there daily with the cast returning to New York before March 17 for the Broadway opening.

The cast assembled in New York on December 10 to begin rehearsals. Tyrone Power arrived from a vacation in Austria, France, and Scandinavia. Faye Emerson flew in from Mexico, and Arthur Treacher from Montreal, where he had been starring in a successful production of "The Reluctant Debutante."

"Back to Methuselah", according to Joseph Shipley in his "Guide to Great Plays," represents "undoubtedly Shaw's fullest and most deeply pondered study of the problems of mankind. It is, however, scintillant, searching, and satiric."

Extortion Case Also Pending

One student was suspended from the university for stealing in recent action by the Student Honor Court, Barbara Burkhardt, chief justice, announced yesterday.

Miss Burkhardt said that the student had been found guilty by the court of stealing personal belongings from a women's residence hall. The Court's sentence was approved by the Faculty Review Committee.

EXTORTION CASE

Also appearing before the court was a student charged with a type of "extortion." The court, having no authority of such matters, turned the case over to the Dean of Men for administrative action.

Action by the Honor Court is, in every case, subject to approval by the Faculty Review Committee, made up of various members of the university administration and faculty.

All questions of action must come from this body, upon recommendation by the Honor Court.

Honor code revision last year, the student body, by referendum and won approval by the student body, provided for the maximum penalty to be set at immediate suspension, with the minimum being Honor Court probation for a definite period of time.

INCONSIDERABLE THEFT

Miss Burkhardt said yesterday that there has been considerable evidence of theft in and around the university in the past few days.

She added that the bulk of the stealing was being done in the women's residence halls.

Miss Burkhardt warned all students that stealing, no matter how small the article might be is an Honor Court offense and can be punished by immediate suspension from the university.

Fellowships Available To June Grads

Fellowships to study at three different universities are available to June graduates interested in public affairs and public service careers.

The fellowships grant $1,500 a year plus college fees, approximately $1,940 total value.

Men students will serve with a public agency such as TVA or the department in a city or state government, beginning this June.

In the 1958-59 school session, the students will take graduate courses at the Universities of Alabama, Tennessee, and Kentucky.

Completion of the 12 months training period requires the men to a certificate in public administration. Students can be awarded an MA degree at either of the three universities upon completion a thesis and passing examinations.

For eligibility requirements and other information, students should write the Educational Director, Southern Regional Training Program in Public Administration, University of Alabama, before March 10, 1958.

State's Best Editorial Page 1957

No Duplication Here

The greedy attitude that often masks itself as school spirit has once more been interjected into the affairs of Florida's state universities by the Florida Alligator.

IN ITS December 6 editorial entitled "This Race is an Important One," the Alligator loses itself in a puree of assertions, without realizing what is involved in the issue it brings up.

The editorial deals with the allocation of funds by the recent legislature for nuclear research on the part of the three universities. It says, in essence, that granting of funds to both universities was a waste that will result in needless duplication.

THEY THEREFORE maintain that the entire amount appropriated by the recent legislative session for nuclear research should have been given one school or science center. They then say that the University of Florida would have been in much better position to accept the total sum of $5,200,000 since it has a College of Engineering.

They maintain that much basic research is needed in order to formulate an "applied research" program, such as the legislature stipulated and should be done in conjunction with the College of Engineering. They point to the resultant duplication as a waste of the "taxpayers money."

THERE ARE a few basic misunderstandings of general academic structure existing quite obviously in the mind of the Alligator editorial writer.

The point is that engineers are capable of doing basic research in the same way that theoretical scientists are. True, commodities and other objects of any utility are the result of painstaking and scientific effort on the part of engineers, but, the research that discovered the principles that guided the engineer's inventive course was done originally not by engineers, but by scientists.

WHILE engineering is helpful to nuclear research, courses in physics, chemistry, and mathematics are necessary to such research. It would follow that engineers might be helpful in implementing discoveries, but it is the physicists, chemists, and mathematicians who lay the ground work for the very existence of the engineer.

The second misunderstanding is tied in closely with the first. It involves the quality of the two institutions in question, FSU and UF.

THE Alligator's assumption that another science center should be established in the state, but not in Tallahassee, is only indicative of the basic ignorance on the part of the writer that there is a science center in Tallahassee already. No engineering school, certainly, but engineers and scientists, as we have said previously, are two different things.

The Florida State University chemistry, physics, and mathematics departments, although the university in only ten years old, are equal to or better than their Gainesville counterparts already. The flood of bright young scientists from all over the country into FSU has been phenomenal.

WE BELIEVE in a friendly give-and-take between the two universities and sincerely want to build up a spirit of friendly rivalry through the coming years.

But a level of understanding on which students may meet will never be found if the attitude of the Gainesville group continues to be as provincial as that displayed in their recent editorial comments.

Northern Coeds May Face Inquiry

By ART ALBRECHT

The snowbirds go home Friday. For some of these transplanted chirpers it will be just another trip home, but, for many young northern freshmen this year will be a big occasion—their first return to the family fold since starting college!

THIS COLUMN is written especially for them. The first return from Dixie has a strange way, sometimes, frightening experience.

Having read Tobacco Road, heard about God's Little Acre, followed the Little Rock trouble-scene, Gone With the Wind, and all about the South, Aod having a hard time getting panty raids, the Kinsey Reports, and such progressive codes as Preparation for Marriage, they have equally strong ideas about college life.

YOU, the 4 grade man who has dared venture below the Mason-Dixon Line to experience southern education, will return to the North as a freak! Questions will be thrown at you about our way of life, about how, about the college life, about the South. With a drawl, spoof, "y'all," possibly a few "I wuzzentzes," and maybe a "Neck and that past the cotton gin" thing. After all, they're putting you through college and have the right to expect something out of your exposure to southern living.

ANOTHER question sure to come up is "Why don't you write more often?" Don't mention the Dixie, football games, or sex scenes spent parked in front of your dorm. Tell 'em you spend all your time studying.

The one that hurts is "How come we got a little pink slip saying you were doing unsatisfactory in English, History, Math or what-have-you?" This is your chance to really get loose. Blame it on your professors—they're incompetent, prejudiced against yankees, or they give all the good grades to athletes. Say it was a mistake. Blame it on the Greeks because they have copies of all the tests and set the curves. Or, you can be real honest and say that this school is tough and gives a high grade even when you're doing "C" work because you're expected to make "A's."

EXPECT THIS one too. "What about your roommate? Is she still as neat and innocent as you said to your mother?" Be coy and quickly drop the subject. You don't want to give the school a bad name, do you?

"How about the southern boys at school? Are they really as chivalrous and courteous as we hear?" Say yes and quickly drop the subject. You don't want to give the South a bad name, do you?

"Do you date much?" Use discretion. They want no answer which will indicate that you're popular but not promiscuous.

"Do you get in early from your dates?" Only one you can answer honestly!

THIS WILL pop up at dinner time—"What kind of food do you eat way down there?" Now your folks aren't interested in the origin of it.

Vespers Short, Enjoyable

BY LOWELL RODDENBERRY

Sunday afternoon's annual Christmas Vespers as presented by the Westminster Choir was a short but enjoyable concert.

THE MAJOR shortcoming of such a seasonal program is that there is a definite dearth of really good literature for the occasion. That is not to say that equants traditional ordinary klicks like "The Messiah" or an opera like "Amahl", by Menotti, are not written for mixed chorus.

Westcott Auditorium's organ evokes the Christmas spirit perhaps some circus could use it in a substitute for a calliope. Purvis' "Carol Rhapsody" which was used as a prelude is hardly a distinguished piece for the organ however valiantly Elaine Clark played it.

BEFORE GOING further, let us say that Christmas carols bring out the Scrooge in us and only tolerable with the benefit of a wicked egg nog and charming company. And if there is anything we dislike more than carols, it is arrangements of carols with the harmonies that only clay and render ineffectual what simplicity and quaint charm Xmas carols may possess which is a mute point at that.

Harriet Morrill's singing of "O Holy Night" almost resuscitated this tired old solo. Here is a lovely warm contralto voice that deserves more trainings than have been given it in the past.

Miss GRIMM and her chorus revived our fast fleeting Christmas spirit with Benjamin Britten's "Ceremony of Carols" which is unquestionably good music. Here and throughout the entire program was the balanced sound which has come to be expected from this group.

The Britten work was accompanied by piano and harp which were placed at either ends of the stage. It was considerably disconcerting to hear the lack of ensemble of the two which tended to destroy rhythmic vitality and distract from the singing.

JUDGING THE program as a whole, the choir was at its best in the Christmas hymns and carols. Their singing of "Silent Night" was a fitting climax to the program.

What Gives Here?

Better Profs Needed

BY NANCY HANNAFORD

The outlook of university departments on general education is puzzling.

DEPARTMENT heads agree that general education is the hallmark of the All-American ideal, the "well-rounded individual." Yet, at the same time, many of them seem to look down upon the general survey courses as being beneath the dignity of the department's exper tenced professors.

Why general education courses are so frequently delegated to new instructors and graduate assistants is a mystery. In this area, more than in any other, teaching experience is essential in order to arouse a student's interest in a field in which, but for university requirements, have ignored.

TEACHING, especially in the beginning of any subject, should be more like opening a gate than administering a pill. In many general ed courses this simple truth is overlooked.

Inexperienced teachers, although they might be thoroughly acquainted with their subject and really interested in getting it across to students, are often inequipped to interpret new vistas of knowledge. Instead they take the role of a

'Oklahoma!' Good Show Despite Weaknesses

BY DALE JENSEN

In writing articles such as this, one can center on the dynamic or the show and its relation to the performance under discussion. This has had some slight success in other parts of the country, with the general consensus of opinion that the show shall not dwell at any great length on an analysis of the show.

IT IS filled with some of Rodgers most adorable tunes, and some of Hammerstein's most eleverest dialogue. The Light Opera Guild was most fortunate in its choice of "Oklahoma!" for this year's production.

The overall effect of the show was a good one. The audience was certainly pleased with the evening's entertainment, despite the great deal of singing by performances from Beverly Brown, Nettie Buck, Eli Asa, Fred Beall, to name a few.

However, at the risk of incurring no small number of personal feuds, he would like to see the rest of the space to attempt to point out some blockages in the production, in the hope that someone might remember to the future and watch them before they have a chance to tarnish an otherwise excellent show, whether it be light or heavy opera or operetta.

ALWAYS, singers and orchestras feud about how loud or soft is the proper perform to be heard. FSU, 1957, is no different. Wetcontributionism has rather good acoustics which aid both vocalists and musicians in this area.

This should eliminate the problem of the singers, but it hasn't, that needn't be a problem. Nevertheless, on Friday night, the singers were little if anything could be understood in most of the songs, the notable exception of the afore-mentioned few. Unfortunately, among the most guilty were the leading characters as well.

GRANTED THAT the pit orchestra was more than occasionally out of tune, and sometimes a little less than precise, they were not inordinately loud. A little less shape, but this might have been my first year standing. Despite the fact that I was trying to get my self-confidence up, I was scared stiff. I was afraid that I would not be able to control my students, that they would not like me, that I would not be able to get my ideas across to them. I was afraid that I would not be able to answer their questions. I was afraid that I would not be able to keep up with the assignments. I was afraid that I would not be able to get along with the other teachers. I was afraid that I would not be able to get along with the administration. I was afraid that I would not be able to get along with the parents. I was afraid that I would not be able to get along with the community. I was afraid that I would not be able to get along with myself.

THE PIT could be much warmer, too, and heard throughout the same energy as the singers who on the stage could be. This trainme is no less to them, for any professional musician who plays in the pit should be able to play in tune or another, make the most part of the music he is playing in pits. To be careful and now, for any reason a extreme fluctuations.

In all fairness, we must point out that the singers had a terribly full of worthwhile material collections which certainly gave the performers a chance to "show off their talents." The show went smoothly, and the pit was definitely better. The above were some of the points which detracted from the songs were audible and the last row balcony. Improper amplification helped, as it always does, but the experience of the night was the biggest factor in the difference.

Last night's performance was from being a finished product, but it was a show of real merit with a lot of promise. The Women's Glee Club consists of numerous church choir programs, all using some of the Oklahomans should have performed really fine.

Humanities, Science Advances Being Made

(Editor's note—The following letter was written in reply to the Humanities editorial of November 22, "Change Direction.")

LETTERS to the EDITOR

TO THE EDITOR:

The American Telephone and Telegraph Company has recently established at Williams College an eight week course during the summer consisting of lectures and discussions. They send from 40-50 promising young executives for study in the humanities, determining that these scientists need further study in the fields of history, fine arts, and political sciences. Furthermore, two leading scientific institutions, Massachusetts Institute of Technology and California Institute of Technology have increased their Humanities requirements.

AS TO stimulation of interest in the sciences and improvement in the quality of preparation for college study in those fields, much work is being done by the most prominent able scientists. Basic, to all preparation for scientific study is the study of mathematics. During the past five years, a great deal of attention has been given to a study of the secondary school curricula, and to the content of the first year college mathematics course

Mr. Robert Kalin, of our School of Education, was a member of a group which met last June to consider one aspect of this study. It is recognized that the majority do not have the ability or the interest to pursue advanced courses in mathematics. But for those who do, the best must be provided. Students should also be informed that scientists, in whatever field, must have this basic training.

TWO MAJOR and important areas of secondary school education have been studied. Both were made primarily for the benefit of the mathematics student. Both were made possible by grants by the Ford Foundation. A brief description of each, follows, futher details may be found in the published reports.

The first is the Harvard, Princeton, Yale, Andover, Exeter and Lawrenceville study. In this experimental study capable students, after two, or three years of secondary school training were selected and sent to college. The records of these students in college compared favorably with those of regular students. This process is being continued by from other colleges. My colleague, Dr. Phillips, deprives the secondary schools of the stimulus provided by the presence of its capable students; it places these students among younger than their classmates; it removes the influences and environment at a critical age.

THE SECOND is the School and College study for Administration with Advanced Standing. I was a member of the mathematics committee which made this study. In this plan certain freshman courses are offered in high schools and prospective college students may by examination be informed that scientists, in whatever field, must have this basic training.

THIS PLAN enables the student to remain in the school environment until college with his own age group. His presence and influence on the school is stimulating to say nothing of the genuine interest of teachers stimulated by teaching more advanced courses.

In mathematics, where the principle interest lies, the study proposed is a long over due revision of the content and methods of teaching secondary school mathematics and a definition of the first year college course.

Price To Head South Gymnasts

Florida State gymnasts will enter the fifth annual North-South gymnastics meet to be held on December 26th at Sarasota as part of the National Gymnastics Clinic.

Dr. Hartley Price, Seminole gymnastics coach, has been named head coach of the South team, and will take with him six Florida State gymnasts, three of which will be named to the South squad.

Representing FSU on the South aggregation will be Jack Miles, a former National AAU all-around champ, who will compete on the horizontal bar and flying rings.

Chick Cielo, who recently placed second in free exercise competition in the Midwest Open, will work parallel bars, and Don Preisser will compete on trampoline and tumbling.

Szpyula of Michigan State, will coach a strong North team headed by Illinois' Olympian Abie Grossfeld, who recently won the all-around crown in the Maccabian Games in Israel.

The Junior National AAU's are scheduled for the 30th, and competing for Florida State will be Cielo, Chet Witten, and Joe Gusic.

The Clinic will host over 600 gymnasts, coaches, and teachers who will congregate in Sarasota to "exchange views and to help improve gymnastic techniques," said Price.

The clinic will be geared for all ages, male and female.

Tribe 5 To Compete In Mobile Tourney

While most Florida State students will be home enjoying the holidays, the Seminole cagers will be in Mobile to compete in the Senior Bowl Tourney which begins January 1.

Other teams in the tourney will be Georgia, The Citadel and Spring Hill the defending champion.

The nucleus of the Spring Hill squad is formed by Ed Tibbets 6-6, Gene McQuire 6-5, and Cherley Rodriques 5-11. The center post will be shared by two freshman, Tom Donovan 6-4 and David Mouton 6-3.

Georgia's Bulldogs lost only one man through graduation and will have a veteran-laden lineup in Mobile. Bill Ensley, who was ineligible last season, returns and will add his 6-5 frame to the center position.

The Citadel, a member of the Southern Conference, will play in the tourney with the same team they had last year. Teddy Wessel 6-0, is the top point-getter for the Bulldogs. He had an average of 16.6 last season.

Bob Blackleder 6-7 will open at the pivot post. At the forward positions will be Dick Wherry 6-2, who averaged 16.5 as a freshman, and Ray Greaves 6-5.

Loyola Tonight, LSU Tomorrow

By BEN BALSER
Assistant Sports Editor

Trying to get back into the win column after three successive defeats, the Florida State basketball team moves into the state of Louisiana for two games.

The Seminoles meet Loyola tonight in New Orleans, and then move to Baton Rouge tomorrow night to clash with the Tigers of Louisiana State.

Loyola has a 3-1 record so far this year, and has only one man from the same team that beat the Tribe here last season. It will be the 12th time these teams have met with the Wolfpack holding a 9-3 edge.

The Loyola attack is led by all-American prospect, Pete Gaudin. Gaudin 6-5 scored 40 points as a sop hs and hit for 516 last year. At the other forward will be Jim Hall 6-5, another letterman.

Bill Schwenberger 6-9 will open at the center post for Loyola. Rounding out the lineup will be guards Bob McLaughlin 6-2 and Henry Eskridge 5-11.

All but Eckerstein were in the starting lineup last season. The Wolfpack has plenty of reserve strength in the form of Chester Doll 6-6, John Sullivan 6-6 and Bob Hughes 6-3, a junior with plenty of game experience.

MOSTLY SOPHS

For the first time in FSU's history they will meet LSU on the basketball court. The Tigers, low man on the SEC totem pole last season, will field a squad top heavy with sophomores.

LSU lost Ho Ing three men through graduation and rely on eager sophomores and juniors for his slots. The only senior on the team is Dom Merle who will open at one of the guard positions.

At the other guard post will be Charley Seitz. Merle and Seitz may be spelled throughout the game by Ray McChin and Joe Cross, two other junior back court operators. Joe Combs 6-6 will open at center.

Flanking him at forward will be Lynn Moon 6-3 another returnee and Dale Lassiter 6-6, Southpaw on the bench who may see action are Eddie Owens 6-5, Senny O'Rear 6-3 and Carey Guglielmo.

The Tribe will probably go with the same lineup they have used the first five games, Danny Bolin at center, Larry Strom and Burt Deckle at forwards and Jim Liteky at guard. Hugh Durham, the other guard, was hurt in the Florida game and may not be able to start. If that is the case Tom Garcia will probably get the nod.

THIRD LOSS

The Seminoles suffered their third straight setback on the road Saturday night when Furman beat

Santa Visits Kids Early At Party

BY JOHN RAY

Santa Claus made an early visit to about 25 underprivileged Tallahassee children Saturday night at a party sponsored by the Vets Club and the Scullions.

The delighted youngsters, ranging in age from one to 15, received two gifts from Santa. They also received bags of goodies and refreshments served by the Scullions. Santa was played by Mr. Vehip Zeko, of New York City, who is visiting his son Fehmi.

The party marked the first time that the Vets Club has attempted such an affair and it was termed a great success by President Joe Moffa.

Moffa extended the club's appreciation for the use of the Dale Mabry Community Center, where the party was held. He also thanked Dr. Royal Ray and the Department of Advertising for allowing the club the use of a movie projector.

Volunteers from the Dames Club assisted the Scullions and Vets at the party.

In addition to three comedies which were shown, the program of entertainment included a number of games. A Dames Club member told the children several stories.

Moffa said the Vets Club was delighted with the outcome of the party and plan to make it an annual affair.

ZEKO PRESIDENT

Fehmi Zeko was elected president of the Vets Club for the Spring semester at a meeting Frida evening. Zeko is serving as vice-president this semester.

Other officers elected are John Ray, vice-president; Clyde Wells, secretary. Edwin Bowers, treasurer, and Joseph Pipitone, sergeant-at-arms.

The new officers will be installed at a banquet in January. The next meeting of the club will be Friday, Jan. 10.

CHECK CHECKS

If you want to receive your check for December you had better sign for it before leaving school for the holiday, Dec. 20.

All vets must sign the necessary papers before noon, Dec. 20, according to Mrs. Don Mathas, who handles veterans affairs on campus.

Northern Coeds

dinary everyday food that you actually do eat. They have illusions about southern cookery and it is your mission not to disillusion them. Memorize a list including such good victuals as mustard greens, collards, black-eyed peas, chitterlings, hominy grits and corn pone. They'll appreciate the effort.

Another question sure to come up is "What about segregation? Do they treat the Negroes very badly?" Here's your opportunity to show off your three months of liberal education. Explain the South's side, apply all you've learned in the social sciences and then offer a solution to the problem. From what I hear, most northern students are pretty good at this! However, if you really want to enjoy your Christmas vacation, tell them that you're converted to the southern viewpoint. This should make for many interesting conversations. Possibly you won't even have to come back for final exams!

CERTAINLY your family will say, "What kind of professors do you have?" Go; there are four witnesses, say they're great, get it notarized and mail it directly to all of your instructors. Sometimes anything helps in computing final grades.

Here's another. "Here you learned much at college!" Be careful! This is a loaded question. Your folks are talking about academic enlightenment. If they didn't go beyond the third grade, tell them all you've learned in considerable detail. However, if they got through the fourth, you had better keep quiet. They just might mistake it for modesty!

THIS LIST is far from complete but I hope it will give some idea of what to expect when you get home. Admittedly, it has been slanted towards the girls from the North, but, some of it could be applied to the federalized males.

I fear, however, that most of "Youse guys" will not be pressed by questions. Instead you'll be welcomed by a rousing "Well look who's back from his southern vacation. Now get out and shovel that snow and earn your big deal college education." Oh well, such is life.

It was the first win of the season for Furman as the all-Southern guard, Dick Wright, poured in 30 points to help gain the victory. Deckle was the high point man for the Tribe as he tipped the cords for 25 markers to bring his season total to 89.

Litzky, connected for eight out of 14 shots before fouling out in the second half. Litzky is now the team's leading scorer with 90 points. Sirous, got his best night of the season as he picked up 21 tallies in his stroll.

It was a close game from the start with Furman owning a 48-46 halftime edge. But foul shots made the difference as the Tribe made nine out of 12 charge shots while the Paladins picked up 27 out of 36.

Girl's Parents Appreciate Aid

The parents of little Denise Roberts, whose affliction with Leukemia last year brought an overwhelming response from students and townspeople, are once again expressing their appreciation to the university community.

With Denise at home now, the parents, Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Roberts of 353 Hull Drive, have received numerous gifts for the little girl from various campus groups and individuals.

Mrs. Roberts, who said that many gifts had been left or sent by unidentified persons, asked Chaplain Edwin Harris to express their appreciation publicly to the givers.

Students and civic organizations responded to Denise's plight last year with donations of both blood and money for a trip to New York City for treatment there.

All students interested in the journalism field or campus publications are invited to attend. The purpose of this club is to bring together all people interested in the various phases of journalism. Director Of Social Activities Finds Job 'A Big Challenge'

BY GEORGIANA FRY

"When students come into the office for my signature, I like for them to make only one. It's much easier for them," and with this she lit a cigarette and promptly ran out of the room, almost knocking reporter down.

"The boy got away before I could catch him. Just extra work for him," she came puffing back into her office, a few minutes later.

Although "She", Miss Marie Williams, isn't paid for chasing young men when they dash out of her very attractive office, she "thoroughly enjoys" her job as director of social activities, and finds it "a big challenge."

SOCIAL ACTIVITIES

Miss Williams is directly concerned with all five Classes, including graduates, in planning their social activities and keeping them within their budget.

She is also closely connected with all Greek, church, and residence social functions, as every social activity on campus must be registered through her office and have her approval.

Since Miss Williams assumed her position two years ago, the Inter-Fraternity Council and Panhellenic have separately formed sub-committees of students.

WESTCOTT MOVIES

Another achievement since Miss Williams' arrival has included the showing of movies in Westcott Auditorium on Friday nights. This addition to the campus movie program, of which Miss Williams is chairman, went into effect this fall.

"Most of our problems in student relationship is in lack of communication," Miss Williams said.

Miss Williams, also director of the Summer School Activities Program, was head social counselor in 1945-46 when the University was Florida State College for Women.

NEVER CLOSED

The door of her office is never closed, and if she doesn't know the answer to a student's problem, "I'll pick up the phone and find the answer."

A native of Eldorado, Arkansas, Miss Williams has an AB degree from Hendricks College, where she was dean of women for nine years, and her MA degree in Sociology from Columbia.

When her work isn't too pressing, Miss Williams takes time out for a game of scrabble. She enjoys listening to classical records. Flesher, says, "Her work is hard but at the same time advocates fervent."
